Britain Asks Soviet Arms Chief to Her War Games

Invitation Is Sent To Voroshilov as Russia Receives Draft of Treaty

Special Cable to The Post.

London, May 26.—In line with the project for an Anglo-French-Soviet defensive alliance with full military implications, the British government, it was disclosed today, has invited Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, Soviet commissar for military affairs, to visit this country and attend the forthcoming British army war games.

At the same time it was announced that the British revised project for the alliance, in the form of a draft treaty of hardly more than 400 words, was dispatched to Moscow today and presented to the Soviet government by Sir William Seeds, the British ambassador. The draft was given the full approval of the French government in advance and Soviet quarters expressed the view that it would be acceptable at Moscow.

Reply Expected Soon

A reply from Moscow is expected early next week. Meanwhile, in view of the Whitsun holiday period, which began today, diplomacy is expected to be at a standstill in London. Parliament adjourned this afternoon for a ten-day recess. Before leaving tonight for his home in Yorkshire, Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, took steps to inform the United States, Poland, Rumania and Turkey, among other governments, of the general lines of the British alliance plan.

The treaty draft is said to provide for immediate action on the part of the two prospective alliance powers if the third were to be attacked either directly or as a result of its intervention in defense of a minor power which had been guaranteed under the "peace front" arrangements. At present the minor eastern European powers so guaranteed in one manner or another are Poland, Rumania, Turkey and Greece.

"Umbrella" Provided

Provision is made, it is understood, for other minor states—the Baltic states, for example—to come under the protection of the tripower "umbrella. Yet it is believed that the British government still desires a proviso that the alliance powers would intervene jointly only if requested to do so by a minor state made the victim of an aggression.

The invitation to Marshal Voroshilov, dispatched by Leslie Hore-Belisha, secretary for war, is considered an additional token of the British government's desire to bring the negotiations for the alliance to an early conclusion and to implement the projected pact with tripower "staff" talks and other far-reaching arrangements for the closest military collaboration.

Though the invitation cites the maneuvers, which are scheduled for September 1, it is reported that the Soviet defense chief is asked to make his visit at the close of June. It is presumed that the announcement o fthe invitation would not have been made unless London would had received assurances in advance of acceptance.

A Land Issue Stressed

Moscow, May 26 (AP).—The British Embassy tonight received the text of the proposed British-French-Soviet mutual assistance pact for delivery to the Soviet government.

Russian officials withheld comment on London reports that agreement was expected soon on the proposed pact and also on the British invitation to Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, Soviet war commissar, to attend autumn maneuvers of the British army.

Izvestia, official mouthpiece of the Kremlin, said the Soviet Union had "a sacred historic right" to participate in deciding the future of the islands which Finland and Sweden want to fortify.

Fiancee Clings To Hope for Squalus Victim

Doesn't Blame Hero Who Shut Sweetheart In Doomed Section

Portsmouth, N. H., May 26 (INS). She won't be married tomorrow because the bridegroom is in a flooded compartment of the sunken Squalus. But Ruth de Sautel hasn't given up hope.

"He's not gone yet, Mama. It isn't too late yet, is it?" she asked today, fingering a white dress and a wedding ring.

But it is too late for Sherman Shirley, Navy officials say.

The best man was to have been Lloyd Maness, who closed a bulkhead door on his drowning mates in the aft compartments—among them Shirley—to save the lives of 33 forward. The last words he and

Snite Uplifted at Shrine Prays for Others

By the United Press.

Lourdes, France, May 26.—Fred Snite, jr., young infantile paralysis victim, visited the famous shrine of Lourdes today and prayed for the "poor invalid pilgrims" who like himself had come to worship before the image of the Virgin in the mountainside grotto.

"Seeing these poor English, Belgian and French invalids alongside me in the grotto I feel especially privileged," the young Chicago paralysis victim said after he had attended two masses at the mountain shrine.

At the end of an 8,000-mile pilgrimage, Snite was taken to the grotto at dawn in his automobile trailer, which was backed up as closely as possible to permit him to witness the mass despite a cold wind sweeping down the mountainside.

Snite's father said that the expression on his son's face during the ceremonies "was beautiful and showed that he was getting tremendous spiritual satisfaction

Squalus Made Ready for Pontoon Lift

Drivers Strip Decks to Guard Against Fouling Of Lines in Raising

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 26.—Navy men worked in the glare of floodlights tonight to pavethe way for the exacting task of raising the sunken submarine Squalus and claiming its 26 dead.

Rear Admiral C. W. Cole and his technicians had the approval of the Navy's high command to bring the helpless hulk to the surface with huge steel pontoons and compresesd air.

Hours before that approval was given, rubber-suited divers had slipped over the rail of the rescue ship Falcon to begin the preliminary task of clearing the Squalus' decks, forty fathoms under ocean water.

As darkness fell, floodlights cut across the dark of the gently rolling waters 15 miles off this port, and underwater marine lamps lit the depths.

Divers Clear Decks

The diving men worked anxiously to clear the Squalus' decks of any impediments so that salvake workers' lines might be guarded from fouling.

Speed was emphasized to give the men every advantage of the flat calm sea and light breeze that has offered ideal diving conditions ever since the stricken submarine dropped 240 feet to the muddy ocean floor Tuesday morning.

Lieut. Comdr. J. G. Longstaff said actual salvage work awaited the return of two of the Navy's finest submarine men—Commanders A. R. McCann and A. I. McKee—who flew to Washington today to confer with Bureau of Operations technicians.

Details of the pla also awaited their return, he said, adding that the men would work through the night to complete the preparatory work.

Arrive from Washington

The big 9-ton rescue bell in which 33 survivors were lifted to the surface Wednesday in groups of seven and eight was at Portsmouth Navy Yard for repairs.

Carrying on their task beneath floodlights, workers hurriedly renewed a wide rubber gasket that goes around the lower circumference of the chamber, sealing it against the sea water, and replaced the downhaul line that fouled during its fourth and last rescue ascent late Wedesday night.

Tomorrow, the entire class of fledglings of the Navy diving school will arrive from Washington to aid the veterans and gain experience.

Meanwhile, in contradiction of previous statements by naval chiefs that an open air-induction valve flooded the submarine and dropped it to the ocean floor, Capt. H. R. Greenlee, manager of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, announced:

"Anything said about the (induction) valve is mere conjecture. The cause of the disaster will not be known until the vessel has been examined in drydock."

Simultaneously, Yard Capt. W. S. Amsden issued a formal statement that "despite certain statements in certain papers, there is no evidence at this time to substantiate any rumor of carelessness or sabotage."

Difficult Salvage Job

The work ahead—240 feet beneath the ocean's surface—promised to be one of the most difficult and exacting salvage jobs in naval history.

Just before dusk most of the undersea preliminaries were finished, and while divers prepared their gear for the morrow on the floodlighted deck o fthe rescue vessel, other men worked upon the rescue bell on a flood-lighted dock ashore.

Navy men were frank in their discussions of technical details of the bell's construction—in contrast

Cowboy Yell Greets King In Calgary

100,000 Crowd Cattle Town for Informal Welcome

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent

Calgary, May 26.—King George and Queen Elizabeth got a boisterous Western reception in this "cow town" today.

Sounding above the royal salute at the Calgary terminal was a lusty "yahoo," uttered by a man waiving a sombrero.

The King responded to the informal note by wearing a lounge suit in public for the first time since he came to the New World. It was a blue pin-stripe recreation, and with it he wore a soft hat. The Queen wore a beige ensemble with beige fox bands at the elbows and a beige straw hat with blue crown.

Mayor Andy Davison, a former linotype operator, was not so informal. He had on a cutaway and looked a bit sheepish as he doffered his silk topper to Their Majesties.

100,000 at Calgary

A hundred thousand visitors, many of them still bearing the dust of the trail, trekked into Calgary for the great day.

In their drive through Calgary, the King and Queen stopped before the largest Indian encampment they have yet seen, a tepee village inhabited by 15,000 Black Feet, Bloods, Peigans and Sarces. The Indian chiefs, attired in all their brilliant regalia, formed in a line astride their horses to give the British sovereigns a salute.

Jurors Decree Death for Nichols In Wife's Slaying

Clarence E. Nichols, 29-year-old plumber, last night solidly heard a District Court jury find him guilty of first-degree murder for choking and beating to death the pretty beauty shop operator whom he married after abandoning his first wife and three children.

Standing stiffly erect before Justice Laws, Nichols heard without moving a muscle each juror giv, as his name was read, the verdict that makes mandatory death in the electric chair. The jury deliberated 4 hours and 50 minutes.

Defense Attorney James A. O'Shea immediately announced he would appeal.

Kuhn Freed On Bail After Woman's Visit

$5,000 Mysteriously Provided Although Bund Fails Chief

By International News Service.

New York, May 26.—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American Bund indicted for grand larceny and forgery, was released from Tombs Prison tonight even though the storm troopers he is charged with fleecing failed to provide the necessary $5,000 bail.

A dark-haired woman presented herself at the Tombs hours after Kuhn had been locked up after pleading not guilty and asked if bail had yet been provided through Bund sources, as Kuhn had hoped it would be. Told no bail had been paid, she went away and a few minutes later Kuhn's lawyer appeared and paid the bail in cash while the mystery woman waited in a car outside. As soon as Kuhn was released he left with the lawyer and the woman.

The lawyer would not say who the woman was or whether she had provided the bail, mostly in $5 and $10 bills, but he did say it had not come from Bund contributions, which he had hoped to raise.

Kuhn is charged with embezzling more than $14,500 from several Bund organizations, including several hundred dollars said to have been spent to move furniture belonging to Mrs. Florence Camp, a divorcee, from Cleveland and Los Angeles to New York.

Mrs. Camp, with whom the Kuhn indictment says he is infatuated, though he is married, was reported to be in New York today.

World Parley Mapped for Cotton Aid

Wallace Advises Growers Session Is Planned in Fall To Improve Prices

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., May 26.—A two-way attack on the American cotton surplus problem, involving immediate application of Government subsidies to exports and, for the long-term pull, an international agreement among principal producing countries, was projected today by Secretary Wallace.

He disclosed at a meeting of some 3,000 farm workers here that a world conference to seek ways of improving cotton prices and dividing world markets equitably among all exporting nations already was in the making for late summer or fall, and that the State Department had received "favorable responses from the governments of all the important cotton-exporting nations."

The Secretary emphasized, however, that "our immediate and imperative problem is to maintain our fair share of cotton exports," and indicated the Administration would inaugurate a program of bounty-payments on cotton sold abroad if Congress provided the funds.

Called "Shot in Arm"

T. C. Richardson, of Dallas, Tex., editor of Farm and Ranch, declared, however, that the export subsidy plan was a "temporary shot in the arm" which would "make matters worse when its effect wears off."

Mark Anthony, of Dallas, and C. W. Butler, of Memphis, president and chairman, respectively, of the national affairs committee of the American Cotton Shippers' Association, added objections.

"There is a growing suspicion that President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace have been insulated from the thoughts of the country," Richardson said. "It is possible that bureaucratic processes have prevented them from getting a true conception of conditions."

A dark-haired woman presented herself at the Tombs hours after Kuhn had been locked up after pleading not guilty and asked if bail had yet been provided through Bund sources, as Kuhn had hoped it would be. Told no bail had been paid, she went away and a few minutes later Kuhn's lawyer appeared and paid the bail in cash while the mystery woman waited in a car outside. Asserting the plan would place one man (Secretary Wallace) in control of the price of all cotton produced in the United States, Anthony charged that the Cabinet member had "completely reversed his view of the export subsidy since his address at Fort Worth last fall."

Lowest in 60 years

Wallace said American cotton exports for the current year would approximate 3,500,000 bales, the lowest total in 60 years, and added:

"The South simply cannot afford to lose its export market for cotton.

"As Secretary of Agriculture, I would be derelict in my duty if I let a year of such low cotton exports pass without doing everything possible to raise exports to a minimum of 6,000,000 bales or without striving to protect and increase the income of farmers at a minimum cost to the Treasury."

Later, at a press conference, Wallace declined to estimate the cost of such a program, but said newsmen could "figure it out for yourselves."

"For instance," he said, "if the subsidy was 2 cents a pound, the payment would be $10 a bale."

Two Senators Skeptical

Secretary Wallace's newest cotton proposals were described by Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, yesterday as an attempt to "escape just criticism" for "collapse" of the cotton program.

The Georgia Senator, leader of opposition to the Administration plan to subsidize cotton exports, told reporters the cotton conference proposal "is not new," but that "whether exporting nations can be induced or forced by means of a subsidy or otherwise to consent to a division of world markets among cotton growing nations remains to be seen."

Family at Bedside As He Succumbs to Pneumonia at 74

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—Dr. Charles H. Mayo, famous surgeon who teamed with his brother in developing the internationally known medical cilinc in Rochester, Minn., died of pneumonia today at Mercy Hospital.

The 74-year-old medic, who had saved the lives of patients from all sections of the Nation, succumbed at 4:55 p. m., central standard time.

At the bedside when death came were his wifeñ his son, Dr. Charles W. Mayo; three daughters, Mrs. Fred Rankin, of Lexington, Ky; Mrs. Esther Hartzell, of Detroit, and Mrs. Louise Trenholm, of Rochester, and a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Mayo, of Rochester, widow of another son who was killed in an automobile accident in 1936.

Dr. William J. Mayo, 77, who worked with Dr. Charles in building the renowned "Mayo Brothers" institution, was at his home in Rochester, recovering from a recent operation.

Son Announces Death

Dr. Charles W. Mayo announced his father's death was caused by "lobar pneumonia, type No. 3, a rare type nearly always fatal." He reported the elderly doctor had been unconscious periodically for at least three days.

Dr. Mayo was stricken in a hotel here eight days ago and was rushed to the hospital. Five doctors attended him.

Sub-Committee's Secretary Resigns; Office Building Of House Tapped

By James D. Secrest.

Sensational evidence that has no direct connection with the District milk inquiry has been uncovered by investigators of the Bates subcommittee, it was learned yesterday, and will be submitted to the committee members at an executive session next week.

The most serious disclosure, obtained by a recording of conversations of persons suspected of lobbying in the milk investigation, is that a member of Congress was said to have been negotiating to have specifications of a District paving contract changed.

The person who made the statement, recorded by the dictograph, said that the member was to receive $20,000 for the job. The Congressman, however, did not participate in any of the recorded conversations in connection with the alleged deal.

Parties Amorous

Other evidence, likewise developed unexpectedly by the dictograph, has to do with numerous parties of suspected lobbyists. The parties, according to the recordings, it is understood, were of a highly amorous nature.

The sensational documents, consisting of stenographic reports of conversation obtained by the Metropolitan police, are expected to bring about an even louder explosion than that which developed on Wednesday and which yesterday led to the resignation of Julia Casleman as secretary of the subcommittee.

Dictaphone attachments were placed in hotel rooms in downtown Washington and in the sub-committee's own room on the fifth floor of the old House Office Building by specially detailed police when Chairman Bates and J. Edward Burroughs, committee counsel, were apprised of an offer allegedly made by Whiting Faulkner, Martinsburg (W. Va.) postmaster, to the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

Conversations Taken Down

Faulkner is alleged to have offered to deliver the votes of Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, to the producers' association for $1,000. His conversations with the association's officials, as well as other conversations, were thereafter taken down by the police.

Other developments in the milk investigation yesterday were:

Sefton Darr, counsel for the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, put B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, through a severe cross-examination and sought to imply that the producers control prices and try to put independent dairies out of business.

Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairies, told the sub-committee that the distributor he represents earned less than one-third of a cent net profit on a quart of milk sold for 14 cents.

Representative Gross (Republican), of Pennsylvania, himself a dairy farmer, warned that the opening of the Washington market to Western producers would bankrupt farmers of the local milkshed.

Hearings Recessed

The hearings were recessed until the middle of next week because of the Memorial Day holiday.

Miss Castleman's resignation was accepted by Chairman Bates yesterday morning. An appointee of Representative Randolph, her name had

D. C. Graduates Wax Skeptical Over Chances of Landing Jobs

Fourth of Idle Could Be Hired, SEC Aide Tells Trust Inquiry

The monopoly committee yesterday heard a Securities and Exchange Commission witness predict that from one-fourth to one-third of the Nation's unemployed would be given jobs if small concerns were provided with needed capital funds.

Ernest Hopkins, who has toured the country for the SEC, said this conclusion was based on a study of small business credit demands.

"I am fully convinced," Hopkins declared, "that considerable expansion is possible in the small business sector. The employment possibilities of such an expansion are large. And the money advanced in each case would be wholly risk-worthy."

Climaxes 2 Days of Hearings

Hopkins' testimony climaxed two days of hearings on the little man's credit problems. The hearings on this phase of its idle savings inquiry ended, the committee set itself to the task of working out legislation to furnish small concerns with an adequate supply of long-term funds.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, committee chairman, declared that, in his opinion, the outstanding question in the country was whether free enterprise would be fostered against a trend toward concentration of control, both on the part of organized private capital and Government.

Concentration of control developed in industry first, he said, and followed in Government due to the demand for offsets to the economic power of organized capital.

Aim of Committee

Preparation of a program for small business credit aid is one of the committee's chief aims. The core of this problem, however, some committee members believe, is suitable means for providing small business with equity money—that is funds raised by sale of stock on a chance of the success of the business.

If the Government provides equity money, experts point out, it will eventually own or control numerous small businesses. That will not do, they agree. One proposal under consideration calls for the creation of an intermediate credit bank system to supply private money under Government guarantee.

Estimating the number of small businessmen at from ,500,000 to 1,600,000, Hopkins said their common complaint was need of working capital. Frequently, they are unable to get money at all, and, if they can, it often is at excessive rates, such as "2 per cent a month" and more. Numerous small businessmen, he said, told him they could put a score or more people to work if their long-term credit needs were met.

William H. Hillyer, of James, Talcott, Inc., New York, old line factoring concern, said the factoring business, whereby a factor buys accounts receivable at a discount and sometimes also lends money against the accounts, had approximately doubled in the last ten years and had extended to a large number of different kinds of businesses.

"Abuse the Ancient Title"

A lot of concerns which "abuse the ancient title of factor" have sprung up, he declared. Peter R. Nehemkis, jr., SEC attorney conducting the presentation, attempted to show that some of the new companies charge small concerns usurious rates for inventory loans. Abuses are also possible, he contended, in the control exercised by factors over clients.

Other witnesses during the day were William S. Whitehead, SEC staff member, T. N. B. Hicks, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., businessman, and L. F. Davis, Detroit. Hicks said 5,000 men could be put to work in the Wilkes-Barre area if capital could be obtained.

Further committee hearings were postponed until June 5, when a new phase of the SEC insurance company investigation will begin.

Charles Sweigert Is Convicted Of Manslaughter

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—Charles Sweigert was convicted tonight of manslaughter in the shooting of Lawson C. Belauter, 19, while guarding a home against prowlers.

The jury returned after deliberating one hour and 45 minutes. Immediately after the verdict was read, the court adjourned until Wednesday when he probably will be sentenced.

While his wife and six children listened, Sweigert told the jury he was standing in an uncompleted house next door to the home of Harry Eberly, watching for prowlers, the night of March 13.

He had been employed by Eberly, it was testified earlier, to guard his home. Sweigert said he saw a man circle the Eberly home several times, look in a window and then start to climb a rear porch post.

"I raised the window (of the house from where he was watching) and called for him to halt," Sweigert testified. "He jumped and ran. I put the barrel out the window and pulled the trigger. I didn't see the man when the shot was fired. I thought I was shooting into the ground. I didn't aim."

He said he had never seen Belauter before.

A question over muddy footprints on the porch railing developed from the testimony of Wayne Sellman, county investigator, and Deputy Sheriff B. C. Bender.

Called back to the stand by States' Attorney Wagaman, both testified that they inspected the railing the morning after the shooting and found no footprints.

Two days later they made another inspection, they said, and discovered footprints.

The defense introduced pictures showing mud marks on the porch to support Sweigert's story that the man shot had started to climb the porch railing.

Wagam asked for a verdict of guilty but made no plea for a specific sentence or penalty in opening hi final arguments.

France has done its duty in meeting the problem of the refugee from dictator-ruled lands, Francois de Tessan, member of the French Chamber of Deputies and the French Ort Parliamentary committee, told a luncheon gathering of diplomatic and congressional colleagues yesterday in a plea for world-wide co-operation to permit emigrant Jews "to lead a dignified, useful existence once again."

Principal speaker of the American Ort Congressional committee luncheon given by Senator James Mead (Democrat), of New York, de Tessan declared that France has found a place for 3,000,000 foreigners in a nation of 40,000,000 natives.

Descendant of La Fayette

He said that Ort schools—which teach Jews to work with their hands on the land and in factories—have "transformed into skilled specialists thousands upon thousands of refugees given a fresh start in life."

De Tessan, descendant of the La-Fayette family, author, American printer's apprentice and one-time special ambassador to this country, said that France had taken in 400,000 Polish workers after the war, and more recently, Russian and Italian political exiles, and German, Austrian and French Jews. Although "some unavoidable errors" were committed in feeding and sheltering the latest influx of 400,00 Spaniards, he said a problem of such intensity and demanding such speedy action had never confronted another nation.

Have Twofold Objective

George Backer, president of the American Art Federation, explained the twofold objective of his organization, teaching refugees to use their hands in the lands to which they have fled, and equipping Jews for work in the nations where they are not banished. He said Ort was "attempting to change the living of millions of people" from petty tradesmen to occupations where they contributed to the national wealth.

Others at the luncheon included the French Ambassador, Count de Sant Quentin; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; the Russian Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky; the Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescu; the Lithuanian Minister, Povilas Zadeikis, and Dr. David Lvovitch, international vice president of the World Ort Union.

Clark Leads Fight To Strip Tribunal Of Judicial Status

By the Associated Press.

The Administration's railroad relief program ran into an open switch in the Senate yesterday when a small but determined opposition group blocked final action on a bill to set up a new five-member court to handle railroad bankruptcy cases.

Led by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, this group demanded revision of the measure to strip the proposed tribunal of its judicial status, making it an independent agency with members appointed for nine-year terms instead of for life.

Wheeler Defends Bill

Asserting angrily that such an amendment would emasculate the bill, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, charged that lawyers who did not want President Roosevelt to have the authority to appoint five new Federal judges had generated opposition to the measure.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, denied quickly that he had any such thought in fighting the bill.

Designed to speed up railroad reorganization and receivership cases, the measure aroused the opposition also of Senators Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Norris (Independent), Nebraska.

Wheeler said there had been "scandals" in Federal court handling of some railroad receiverships and contended that some judges' lack of expert knowledge also had contributed to long delays in settling such cases. For that reason, he argued that a separate court made up of experts, should be set up.

Borah countered with the assertion that so few judges had gone wrong in the last 150 years that the American judicial system "compares favorably with any judicial system the world has ever known."

Further Study Urged

He and Norris agreed that if a special court were set up, it might become a "railroad court," more interested in the welfare of the railroads than in the welfare of the people.

Clark said he thought the Senate should study the measure a long time before it decided to make such a radical change in Federal court procedure.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, arguing for passage of the measure, asserted it would "squeeze out of these (railroad) corporations a great burden of fixed charges they now carry because of over-capitalization."

The Senate decided to consider the bill further today.

12 G.O.P. Congressmen Start 'Draft Vandenberg' Boom Here

Michigan House Delegates 'Heartily Concur' In Drive Launched by Gov. Dickinson, State Officials; Vandenberg May Reply

Republican Michigan's "draft Vandenberg" boom yesterday was officially launched at the Capitol with a letter from the 12-man Michigan Republican House delegation calling on Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg to run for the 1940 Republican Presidential nomination.

The letter, signed by Representative Carl E Mapes and 11 other G. O. P. members of the Michigan delegation, "heartily concurred" in the draft drive recently launched by Gov. L. D. Dickinson, seven other Republican State officials and 80 Republican members of the Michigan State Legislature.

Senator Vandenburg declined comment, but indicated he will reply to the letter. He is not expected directly to announce his candidacy, but he made known recently he would not decline the nomination although "I do not have the remotest idea that the situation will develop any such necessity."

The House delegation letter, following on the heels of the State G. O P. statement, was believed to foreshadow Vandenberg's presentation as Michigan's "favorite son" candidate, against such potent contenders as District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, who has led recent Republican availability polls. Disputing Ohio's favorite son honors are expected to be Senator Taft and Gov. John W. Bricker.

The letter from Michigan's Republican members of the House indorsed the State Republican administration statement that Vandenberg "should be drafted for the next Republican Presidential nomination."

"Our knowledge of you and of your work in the Senate," said the letter, "convinces us that you are preeminently qualified, by character, ability, experience, industry, knowledge of public affairs and sound and constructive leadership, to meet the exacting duties of the presidency in these critical times.

"We are satisfied that the position taken and the sentiments expressed by the Republican State officials of Michigan represent the views not only of the Republicans of our State but of a constantly increasing number of Republicans throughout the country as well."

Senate Minority Leader McNary said he considered it "a nice tribute."

Besides Mapes, Michigan Republican House members signing the letter were Woodruff, Wolcott, Michener, Dondero, Crawford, Engel, Hoffman, Shafer, McLeod, Blackney and Bradley.

Tax Action Sped for Aug. 1 Adjournment

Morgenthau to Give Outline of Revision At House Hearing

By Robert C. Albright.

A business recovery tax program, designed to give a limited relief to corporate taxpayers without altering revenue or opening loopholes, will be outlined today to the House Ways and Means Committee by ecretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Results of the Treasury's tax studies were awaited as leaders determined to press for swift hearings and tax action, looking to Congressional adjournment not later than August 1.

Details of the Morgenthau tax findings were closely guarded. Roosevelt, who has acquiesced in a restricted program, commented only that tax discussions were going along nicely. In view of this progress, the President said he thought it best not to divulge specific details.

Expected to Outline Revisions

The Secretary's statement today before the full Ways and Means Committee is expected to outline the Administration's tax revision boundaries for the first time officially and set the pace for narrow changes in the corporate tax structure and extension of $750,000,000 in nuisance taxes expiring June 30. Undersecretary of the Treasury Hanes, who has played a central role in the White House-Treasury-Congress tax talks, will be on hand to supplement the Secretary's statement.

Whether the compromise program will be confined to the corporate and nuisance tax structure, the President did not say, nor did he directly reply when asked if individual income tax changes might also be considered.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, has consistently pressed for lowered personal income tax exemptions and an increase of rates in the middle brackets. He is expected to renew this proposal in the Senate. There has been no intimation of Administration support.

Cap Months of Negotiations

Today's Ways and Means hearings will cap months of tax negotiations in which Morgenthau, Hanes, Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, and the President unsuccessfully sought a common ground for action.

Main bases of disagreement were said to have been largely cleared away at a midweek White House conference, and Chairman Doughton decided to proceed at once with hearings. When a House bill has been drafted and passed, a Senate conference is expected to be called in an effort to agree on its outlines without prolonged Senate controversy.

In declining to give details yesterday, President Roosevelt told reporters the main causes of delayed tax action have been what he called fool stories with too much detail and too little truth.

Will Write Own Program

While ways and means committee leaders have made clear they intend to write their own tax program, there appeared general agreement that hearings will [illegible] the basis for removal of the remaining 2½ per cent undivided profits tax, long a controversy, and substitution of a flat tax of about 18 per cent.

Special treatment was considered for corporations earning less than $25,000, with taxes ranging possibly from 12½ to 18 per cent. Whether efforts will be made to compensate for this action by strengthening present restrictions on improper accumulations of surplus remained a matter of speculation.

Following testimony by Morgenthau today and views of business witnesses next week, actual draftsmanship is expected to be turned over to a sub-committee, with Undersecretary Hanes sitting in. Also attending today's hearing will be E. J. Foley, general counsel of the Treasury, and Guy Helvering, Internal Revenue commissioner.

Mrs. Jane Lawrence Given $60,000 in Will Settlement

Prescott, Ariz., May 26 (AP).—Jane Stout Lawrence will receive a $60,000 cash settlement from the estate of her husband, Marcus Jay Lawrence, Washington, D. C., socialit, killed here May 11, 1938. The agreement with the American Security and Trust Co. of Washington, executor, was approved in superior court today.

There will be a deduction of $7,200 paid the widow during her contest of the will, which left most of Lawrence's $302,307.82 estate to his mother, Mrs. Carrier Lawrence, of Washington, and his half brother, Paul Lawrence, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Lawrence was slain in a fight with Ernesto Lira, Prescott sportsman, now serving 30 to 40 years in prison.

On Capitol Hill

Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, yesterday announced he will introduce an amendment to the Department of Justice appropriations bill increasing the proposed emergency fund for the Bureau of Investigation from $300,000 to $750,000.

HOOVER

Praising the record of J. Edgar Hoover, he said:

"Since the activities of the F. B. I. under Director Hoover result each year in fines, savings or recoveries equal to seven or eight times the amounts appropriated by Congress for its work, it is obvious that any reasonable increase in its appropriation will return substantial dividends, not alone in better law enforcement, but in dollars and cents."

Barbour declared that Hoover "has boult up the best investigating force in the world, not excepting Scotland Yard."

Senator Murray (Democrat), Montana, proposed legislation yesterday to make the Works Progress Administration permanent and to maintain relief rolls at 3,000,000 as long as that many persons are eligible for work relief.

In an economy mood, the Senate Appropriations Committee pared $50,000,000 from the rivers and harbors appropriation bill yesterday, but members conceded that the Senate might restore the cut.

The bill was reported to the Senate carrying $255,192,984—approximately the sun recommended by the Budget Bureau but $57,711,917 more than last year's appropriation.

The House had voted $25,000,000 for rivers and harbors projects. The Senate committee wiped out these increases and added $4,470 for maintenance of the office of High Commissioner to the Philippines.

The Senate Miltiary Affairs Committee pigeonholed a House-approved bill which would have prohibited the return to this country of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World War draft evader.

Bergdoll's return on the German liner Bremen Thursday and his prompt arrest by Army ojcials apparently circumvented Congressional efforts to keep him out of this country.

Meanwhile Bergdoll was in an isolation cell on Governor's Island, N. Y., under sentence to five years for desertion. His wife and 5-year-old son, Erwin, were permitted to see him briefly yesterday.

Private Gargage Inspection Fought By D.C. Auto Group

A bill recently passed by the Maryland State Legislature providing 25-cent inspection fees for private garages under the compulsory auto inspection law was attacked yesterday by the District club of the American Automobile Association.

In a letter to Governor Herbert V. O'Conor, Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the local club, urged that the measure be vtoed.

"Our organization is opposed to an inspection system operated in private garages," Cleveland said. "Such a system has proved to be unsatisfactory and virtually worthless besides degenerating into a racket whereby motorists are victimized into paying unnecessary repairs to their cars."

Flower Show Sales Make Hit At Chevy Chase

Market Is Feature Of Display; Winners Are Announced

The Garden Club of Chevy Chase yesterday took a chance on the public's love of flowers and early last night was winning handsomely.

The chance was on selling flowers at a flower show—the first enterprise of its kind ever held in Washington—when thousands of front and backyards afford citizens flowers for the plucking and when the month of May is making flowers commonplace.

But the flowers were sold at what the club called its "market." The market was on the lawn by the clubhouse on Connecticut avenue, and the visitors seemed to find the big wagon load of peonies irresistible. The market, actually a side attraction to the more formal exhibit of arranged flowers in the clubhouse, was a flower garden in itself.

On sale with the seedlings, perennials and cut flowers were wrought iron tables and chairs, bird houses and some garden stands that one woman said would be lovely objects for the holding of tea cups—or highball glasses.

Other Areas Represented

Inside of the clubhouse, the half-dozen orchids on a debutante table stopped them in their tracks before they ever reached the rows of tables holding the 125 exhibits of some of the best flowers grown in Chevy Chase, Virginia, the District of Columbia and Charlotte, N. C. The representation came from all those scattered places at invitation of the Chevy Chase Club—which has exhibited widely itself.

The children's floral arrangement attracted considerable interest. The winners in this section were announced as Ruth Myers, David Dodge, Agnes Downey and Allan Cordorman. Many of the members regarded an arrangement of the Dainty Bess Rose as amang the most spectacular in the exhibit. This flower has but one row of petals and is pale pink.

The market, which attracted scores of persons to the cool lawn, was in charge of Mrs. Jennings Bailey, jr., Mrs. Landra Platt, Mrs. Robert Ash, Mrs. Conway Coe and Mrs. Tulor Morsell. Lemonade was sold by Peggy Fleming Tudor and Sue Morsell.

Copy of needlepoint in flowers and plant material attracted interest; and the prize in this division was won by Mrs. J. H. Burton, exhibiting for the Town and Country Club.

Other Winners

The tea table arrangement prize, with exhibitors supplying all materials, was won by Mrs. Joseph Green, of Chevy Chase; the small flower arrangement, Mrs. William Kneessi, Woodridge; the dish garden prize, Mrs. Green; arrangement in antique china container, Mrs. A. D. Farquhar, Sandy Springs; centerpiece in glass for informal summer luncheon, Mrs. Gordon Young, Fort Belvoir; flowers in metal container, Mrs. George Leadbetter, Washington; tone picture, arranged in shades, Mrs. Chester Wells, Chevy Chase; and floral arrangement by commercial grower, John Small and Sons.

Mrs. Parker Dodge was chairman of the show. The proceeds from the show and market will be devoted to planting the grounds at the Montgomery County Hospital.

Mrs. Lester Wilson was in charge of entries and Mrs. Arthur Sturgis directed the staging. They announced the entries as from Forest Hills, Towel Club, Leesburg, Fairfax, Roland Park, Lake Roland, Catonsville, Hagerstown, Frederick, Little Garden Club of Sandy Springs, Woodridge, Potomac Rose Society, the Garden Club of Charlotte, N. C., the nature section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, town and country and Bradbury Heights. Gordon Dunthorne exhibited his rare flower prints. The show continued yesterday from 3 to 9 p. m.

Dr. Smith Paroled Five Girls Without Orders, Hearing Told

Miss Bromley Produces Records of Venereally Infected Inmates Who Were Allowed to Take Daily Jobs

Allegations that five inmates of the National Training School for Girls were paroled by Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith without the formal consent of the Board of Public Welfare were made yesterday by a witness at the public hearing on the ouster order of the former superintendent a year and a half ago.

Miss Jean Bromley, parole officer, produced records covering the 20 months' regime of Dr. Smith, revealing also that 11 girls with venereal infections were permitted to accept daily employment without the consent of the medical officer. The parole officer said employers of these girls were not told of the workers' infection. She said only in cases where inmates were paroled were employers informed.

Inmates Got Steaks

Other high lights of the testimony were:

Porterhouse steaks, individual cuts of lamb and pork chops were fed the inmates, butter was substituted for oleomargarine. In the present administration, quarters of beef and lamb are purchased.

Maintenance cost per inmate rose from $419 during the fiscal year of 1936 to $1,165 in 1937, and fell to $640 the following year. (Dr. Smith served the latter four months of 1936, the entire year of 1937 and four months of 1938, all fiscal years.)

Inmates "who were very bad" received the "best privileges."

Inmate Quoted

Miss Bromley said she was told by one inmate to "do it yourself—that's what you're paid for" when asked to do a job.

Mrs. Dema Robichaud, property clerk, said there was a limit on the amount of goods which girls could purchase, but "in several instances" when she had refused girls "they would go to Dr. Smith and get permission."

Miss Emily H. Koehler, a social worker attached to the school, said when she first went to work under Dr. Smith she found an air of "freedom and ease" among the inmates, who "worked and played."

"I felt at first this was a good sign," she said.

Girls Called Defiant

"But I soon found out the girls acted this way not because of a lack of repression but lack of control," she added.

The inmates refused to attend classes, would not go to their rooms and were defiant to the matrons and teachers, Miss KGoehler testified.

"I brought this to the attention of Dr. Smith, who talked to the girls and received their promises to behave," she said.

Resume Wednesday

"Conditions grew worse, however," she added.

A teacher, Miriam L. Morgan, told the Commissioners she enjoyed "very much" her work under Dr. Smith "at the beginning."

"Later, when there was a lot of repair work by WPA workers, and buildings were being remodeled, there was much confusion and it became increasingly difficult to get the girls to do any work," she said.

The hearings will be resumed next Wednesday at 1:30 p. m.

Madden Asks Congress Scan NLRB Changes

Suggests Study of Amendments to Aid Employers

By the Associated Press.

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Board suggested yesterday that Congress consider four major amendments to the Wagner labor act designed to benefit employers in labor controversies with their workers.

While opposing specific changes put forward in the House, Madden told the labor committee Congress might well study these four possibilities:

1. The feasibility of granting employers the right of petitioning for a collective bargaining election subject to certain safeguards.
2. Standards for the board's determination of the appropriate bargaining unit.
3. Clarification of the status of a contract where a majority of workers change allegiance from one union to another.
4. Changing the time when hearings on charges may be held from five to ten days after a complaint is filed.

"The board is not persuaded by its experience or by any arguments which have come to its attention that the act requires amendment at the present time," Madden said. "Nevertheless, the (four) proposed amendments, although objectionable in their present form, relate to matters which, in our opinion, merit further consideration in the light of facts which may be produced at the hearing.

Before making this statement, Madden gave his own interpretation of part of a survey made by Representative Hartley (Republican), New Jersey, a committee member.

Hartley said several weeks ago he had received mostly unfavorable replies to a questionnaire he sent out seeking attorneys' reaction to Labor Board personnel and procedure.

Madden said that Hartley had said he received 30 0replies, of which 100 were noncommittal, 56 were favorable to the board and 159 were critical. The chairman said his study of 57 replies available in the committee record showed 25 were critical, 7 were both favorable and unfavorable, 8 were favorable and 17 were noncommittal.

Truckers' Suit Asks Pay-Hour Exemptions; Control by ICC

Attorneys Contend in Action That Congress Intended for Commission to Fully Supervise All Employes of the Industry

Exemption of 500,000 persons from the work week provisions of the wage-hour act was asked in an action filed in District Court yesterday by the American Trucking Association, Inc., of 1013 Sixteenth street northwest.

The association, which claimed to represent 30,000 members, asked that the Interstate Commerce Commission be compelled to take jurisdiction of 500,000 office and maintenance employes of the trucking industry.

The I.C.C. already controls the working hours of the Nation's 500,000 truck drivers, but it refused jurisdiction over other workers in an order issued May 9, which said the I.C.C. had no power except over workers whose activities affected the safety of transport vehicles.

The truckers claim the motor carriers act requires the I. C. C. to govern the working hours of all trucking concern employes and that the wage-hour act confirms this authority by exempting the industry from its provisions.

Attorneys J. Ninian Beall and Albert F. Beasley filed the suit for the association and four trucking companies, Barnwell Bros., Inc., Burlington, N. C.; Brooks Transfer & Storage Co. and Brooks Transfer Co., both of Richmond, Va., and Baltimore Transfer Co., of Baltimore.

Beall said the truckers wished to escape the provisions of the wage-hour act to obtain flexibility of operation and not to save money. While the I. C. C. controlled the hours under the motor carriers act, he said, regulations were issued which allowed the trucking companies to work long weeks in peak times, paying the same weekly wage the year round.

When the I. C. C. terminated its jurisdiction, Beall said, the industry found itself under the rigid provisions of the wage-hour act, which requires time-and-a-half overtime pay for any week in excess of 44 hours. The industry, he declared, could make up much of this extra cost by laying off its men when operations were ebbing, but preferred to maintain its personnel the year round.

Other disadvantages complained of in the suit were the probable diversity of state and municipal regulation if the I. C. C. dropped control and the possibility of many criminal and civil actions arising from disputes over the law.

These factors, said Beall, led his clients to believe that Congress intended to exempt all transportation agencies from operation of the wage-hour act.

The suit asked that the I. C. C. be compelled to rescind its order.

U. S. Tars Defy Skipper to Wed French Girls Before They Sail

Nice, France, May 26.—Hearts were breaking all over the harbor tonight as Capt. Wallace Lind, commanding the United States cruiser Omaha, sought to persuade members of the crew to abandon plans to wed their French sweethearts before the warship sails for home on June 17, after more than a year in Mediterranean waters.

The enthusiasm of the sailors for their French sweethearts was undaunted by his arguments or by French and American official red tape, and they were trying to hasten the weddings before the sailing date.

When the official order sending the Omaha home was posted on the bulletin board sailors invaded the mayor's office and sought wedding licenses. But they learned that foreigners must live in France a year and a day before they can marry.

Technically the Omaha is not in France, even though anchored in the harbor. So the mayor, eager to aid cupid, asked special authorization from the ministry of justice for each marriage and the enterprising sailors telephoned Paris for permission. Then the mayor ordered bans posted for 10 days, which are in the process of expiring.

Next Capt Lind called the men in and announced that he dislikes international marriages. He urged the sailors to wait until they got home and thought things over. Then, if they still wanted to marry the French girls, they could send to France and bring them over. The sailors said: "No dice," and went ahead with their plans.

Among weddings likely to occur before the ship sails are those of Charles Washington Briggs, Princeton, Md., to Nancy Garidel, of Nice, and Stanley Lawrence Brothers, Freewater, Oreg., to Catherine Nadeline Apallonio, also of Nice.

Those depending on word from Paris include Robert Lee Linson, Peoria, Ill., and Marian Lichtenschul, born in Odessa, Russia, but living in Nice; Charles Arthur Watts, San Francisco, and an unnamed Nice belle, and Richard Johnson, Woodstock, Vt., and Marie Purotti, of Cannes.

Sherman Taft Johnson, of Kent, Tex., swore to an affidavit before the United States consul that he would marry Inez Biagani so that she might follow him to America.

James Frederick Blake, of Chattanooga, Tenn., wants to marry a French girl but he discovered that his divorce from a Newport, R. I., girl will not become final until July 3, after the Omaha sails.

First Lady Hits At European State On Unemployment

Arthurdale, W. Va., May 26 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today the United States, if it chose to follow the example of "a central European nation" could solve unemployment by increasing the Army and filling munitions plants with workers.

The President's wife, addressing the high school graduation class in this 1,000-acre Federal rehabilitation homestead, said it was "true that many are outof jobs in this country."

"But," she added, "in proportion to our population if we were in increase our Army at the rate of another country, which I will designate only as a central European nation, and at the same time put a proportionate number to work in munitions factories we could pay for that instead of the WPA."

Reckless-Driving Case Dismissed

Just because a motorist drives his car into one that is parked he is not necessarily guilty of reckless drivin, Traffic Court Judge Edward M. Curran ruled yesterday. Ennis B. Chappel, 23, of the 1300 block Massachusetts avenue northwest, had been hailed into court by Policeman H. G. Cochran, who testified that he was in a restaufant in the 2000 block K street northwest, when his automobile was struck. He said there were no witnesses to the collision.

Chappel pleaded noe guilty and offered no explanation. The judke dismissed the case on the grounds that there was no evidence that the defendant was driving without "due care and cautiousness."

Dredge in Harbor Finds Pirate Gold

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 26 (INS).—A treasure in gold coils—thought to be pirate gold—came to light today in the mile-long pipe of a harbor dredge and started one of the most unusual gold rushes in history.

The clanking of metal in the pipe, being used to suck mud out of San Juan Harbor, aroused the curiosity of laborers. They opened some of the pipe joints, and recovered at least 30 gold coins, all dated 1792. Presumably the dredge broke open a chest of pirate treasure.

30 Schools Help Dedicate Fountain At Douglass Shrine

Children of divisions 10 and 13 of 30 public schools participated in dedicatory exercises incident to the presentation of a memorial fountain to the Frederick Douglass Shrine, Cedar Hill, Anacostia, yesterday. The seventy-fifth anniversary of the establishment of free public schools for colored children in the District of Columbia was celebrated.

Dr. Howard H. Long, assistant superintendent, discussed Douglass' part in setting up the school system here. The fountain, designed by Randall Evans and constructed under supervision of R. I. Vaughn, was presented by Assistant Superintendent A. K. Savoy and accepted on behalf of the National Federation of Colored Women by Miss Nannie H. Burrough. The fountain was purchased by teachers from divisions 10 and 13. Also participating in the program were the Rev. L. Q. Brown, Ellen Jones, R. Todd Duncan, Col. West A. Hamilton, the Armstrong High School Band, and the Glee Club of the Margaret Washington Vocational School.

Administration Asks House for Neutrality Change

By the Associated Press.

Threatened Senate opposition has caused Administration leaders, it was learned yesterday, to seek House approval of a bill substituting Presidential control over wartime shipping for the automatic arms embargo of the neutrality law.

Secretary of State Hull was said in informed Capitol circles to have given his approval on the theory that even if the Senate declined to act later, half a legislative loaf would be better than none.

The bill, drawn by State Department experts, would repeal the section of the present law which prohibits sale of munitions to belligerents when the act is invoked.

If the House approves a revision in the law, State Department officials were said to believe that the President's position in international affairs would be strengthened, even if the Senate did not take up the measure.

71 D. C. Reservists Leave Tomorrow

Seventy-one Washingtonians, newly commissioned in the Army Quartermaster Reserve, will get their first taste of military life tomorrow when they report for two weeks active duty at Fort George Gordon Meade, Md.

They are among a group of 300 young second lieutenants from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District who were appointed this month following an intensive course of training at a special night and week-end school conducted by the Army to obtain recruits in its Reserve officer expansion program.

Maj. B. S. W. Myer, will be in charge of the training, assisted by Maj. A. B. Proctor.

Duffy May Succeed Geiger on U. S. Bench

By the Associated Press.

There was much speculation among Congressional aides yesterday that former Senator Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin, would be appointed to succed former Federal Judge F. A. Geiger, of Wisconsin, who has resigned. Duffy was defeated in last year's elections.

President Roosevelt said yesterday the resignation had been received but that he had not yet acted upon it. Geiger, who is 71, gave ill health as the reason for his retirement.

Special Delivery Carries Him to Urge War Pension

Edinburgh, Scotland, May 26 (AP).—A former service man mailed himself by "special delivery" today to Prime Minister Chamberlain to draw the cabinet head's attention to a campaign for bigger war pensions.

But Chamberlain, on a visit here, was too busy to collect his mail, whose colleagues paid 6 pence (about 12 cents) a mile to send him from the postoffice to nearby Holyroodhouse Palace, wheer the Prime Minister is staying.

The mailing of individuals in undertaken by British postoffices who send an express messenger, to "deliver" human packages.

Iowa Governor Bans Tax on German Gifts

Des Moines, Iowa, May 26 (AP).—Gov. George Wilson today vetoed a bill which would have levied a 100 per cent inheritance tax on bequests to residents of Germany.

He said the State Department in Washington had raised doubt whether the bill would "contravene treaty provisions in force with certain countries."

Church of the Week

Trinity Church Youth Are 'Bulwarks'

Make Road Signs, Sing In Choir, Run Paper For the Lutherans

Young people of Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Mount Rainier, Md., who will attend a joint rally of Washington Walther Leaguers tomorrow at 6 p. m., at Christ Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Gallatin streets northwest, are "bulwarks" of the suburban congregation, the Rev. Edwin E. Pieplow averred yesterday.

MISS BRUSICK

"I think we have among the finest young people in the Washington area," he declared last night, beaming with admiration as he described their contribution toward the growth of the church, which, in spite of its brief history, is "going places."

Sunday school teaching, choir service, house-to-house religious visitation, publicity and various other duties are undertaken by the young people whose activities revolve around the Senior and Junior Walther Leagues, of which Miss Elsa Wukasch and Miss Alvina Brusick are respective presidents.

ELSA WUKASCH

Jus. a short time ago, the Leaguers were responsible for erection of road-markers—designating directions to the church—on Eastern avenue at Bladensburg road, Rhode Island avenue and Queen's Chapel road intersections.

Another recent accomplishment was initiation of a monthly paper, The League Beacon, which, under the capable co-editorship of Miss Anita Loeber and Miss Grace Albrecht, keeps parishioners informed on church activities.

A. H. BOSSE

Even the choir, of which Mrs. Pieplow is organist - director, is composed entirely of Walther Leaguers.

Led by Arthur H. Bosse, the voters' assembly is another of the live groups at Trinity, being responsible for finances, property and other physical assets. Bosse was moving spirit behind the financial drive for the present structure at Thirtieth street and Bunker Hill road northeast, dedicated February 7, 1937. The Rev. Mr. Pieplow said that the building's second unit would be "constructed in the not too distant future."

MRS. WIDENMYER

The Ladies' Aid Society, with Mrs. Mary Widenmyer as leader; the Sunday school, of which James W. Kibler is superintendent, and the men's and women's Bible class, taught by the pastor, are active at Trinity, which was originally a mission of Trinity Lutheran Church, Fourth and E streets northwest.

It was begun in 1931 as a preaching station, with the help of the Rev. Hugo M. Hennig, local Trinity cleric; Fred Gast, president of his congregation; the Mission Board of the Eastern District of the Missouri Lutheran Synod, and the Rev. Mr. Pieplow, who had been granted a year's leave of absence from the Concordia Theological Seminary, St. Louis, for the organization task.

The house-to-house canvass of the Rev. Mr. Pieplow and other workers brought 19 to the first service in the Odd Fellows Hall. Thirty-fourth street and Bunker Hill road northeast. Seventeen of the original members are still active.

J. A. Braun was first elder and secretary. The first Voters' Assembly meeting was held at the home of David Heyser, first superintendent of the Sunday school. Herman Krueble is chairman of the board of trustees.

Dr. Rimmer To Preach at Metropolitan

Will Take as Topic 'The Harmony of Science and the Bible'

Dr. Harry C. Rimmer, president of the Research Science Bureau, proponent of the idea that there is not a scientific error in any of the books of the Bible, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church on "The Harmony of Modern Science and the Bible."

He will also preach at services at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m. every day except Saturday next week, under the auspices of the Columbia College of Christian Education, Dr. Elsie Wade Stone is president of the college.

Calvary. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, pastor, who is to deliver the baccalaureate sermon tonight at Wake Forest University, will preach tomorrow morning on "The Days of Our Years." At the evening service, the Rev. F. C. Johnston, jr., assistant pastor, will speak on "Creating a Clean Heart."

First. "Too Good to be True" will be the sermon subject of Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden in the morning. In the evening he will speak on "An Unusual Law of Life."

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "The More Abundant Life," and at 7:45 p. m. on "The Story of Boaz and Ruth" or "Love in a Barley Field." The Ordinance of baptism will be administered at the evening service.

Chevy Chase. For "Pentecost"—the birthday of the Christian Church, the Rev. Edward O. Clark will preach on "The Church: Its Divine Mission in a Human World," at the 11 o'clock service.

A message in memory of departed loved ones, entitled "A Cloud of Witnesses," will be given by the pastor at 8 p. m.

Bethesda First. At the morning service on cradle roll day, Dr. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor, will speak on "This Little Child of Thine."

His topic for the evening service at 8 p. m. will be "Why I Believe in Christ."

First, Hyattsville. "First Things First" will be the topic of Dr. B. P. Robertson, pastor, at morning worship. In the evening Howard Rees will speak at a special program put on by the young people.

Dr. Brooks to Take 'Manufactured Gods' as Topic

The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., minister of All Souls' Church (Unitarian), has returned from Boston, where he has been attending the anniversary meetings of the American Unitarian Association, and at the 11 a. m. service will preach on "Manufactured Gods."

Before the class on Comparative Religion of the Church School, meeting at 10 a. m., Dr. Paul A. Goettleman, of the school of architecture, Catholic University, will give an illustrated talk on "Religion's Influence on Architecture."

At the same hour, Miss Margaret Lambie, international lawyer, will address the current problems class on "International Civilization."

Universalist National Memorial. The Rev. Seth Rogers Brooks will preach a Pentecostal Message on "No Apology Offered" at the 11 o'clock service. The Young People's Christian Union will have a Fellowship Supper at 7 p. m. On Saturday the Church School will have its annual picnic in Rock Creek Park from 10:30 to 7.

Rev. C. E. Fuller To Speak Here at Baptist Church

The Rev. Charles E. Fuller, who broadcasts the "Old-Fashioned Revival Hour" every Sunday night over a national network from Los Angeles, will speak this Monday and Tuesday at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. at National Baptist Memorial Church.

REV. C. E. FULLER

Dean H. H. Amster, of the Bible Institute of Washington, is chairman of a committee representing various local evangelistic groups, sponsors of the meetings. Anticipating an overflow attendance, the church's basement has been equipped with a public address system.

The Rev. Mr. Fuller will conduct the first world-wide revival meeting in church history over the radio August 20 from the San Francisco Fair.

The Day of Pentecost

By Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer

(Minister of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church)

The Day of Pentecost was a day of power for the Christian fellowship, according to the records in the Books of the Acts of the Apostles.

Nineteen hundred years later we could hope for nothing finer for the Christian fellowship of our day than a new experience and such power as was known to these followers of the Crucified One, Jesus of Nazereth.

There is much spiritual suggestiveness in the events of that first day, Pentecost, for Christian people today. On that day, men and women were moved by the Holy Spirit.

Our day manifests sufficient movement of action, but surveying our world of hastening preparation to match brute force with brute force, one cannot help but ask with deep misgiving: "How much of our life is guided by the truth of the power of the Holy Spirit?"

On that first day of Pentecost, men of many lands and races found themselves able to cross barriers of linguistic and racial differences to discover a common humanity in the love of God and the spirit of Jesus.

Surely the church of our day could perform no higher services to God and humanity than to bring its full membership together in prayer and determination to serve in order that God's Holy Spirit might move through them; in order that the strained and broken relations of our human fellowship around the world may be healed and strengthened through the bonds of the fellowship of Christ.

Dr. Phillips Will Talk on 'Holy Spirit'

There will be celebrations of Holy Communion at 8 and 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, in celebration of Whitsunday. At the latter the rector, Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, is to preach on "The Holy Spirit."

At evening worship the Rev. Duncan Fraser will deliver the sermon. There will also be celebrations of Holy Communion at 11 a. m. Monday and Tuesday of Whitsun week.

Transfiguration. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, will administer confirmation and preach at 8 p. m.

The morning services are at 7:30 and 11 o'clock, at which the Rev. J. J. Queally will officiate and preach.

St. John's. "The Practicing Christian" is the subject of Dr. Oliver J. Hart's sermon for Whitsunday at 9:30 and 11 a. m.

There will be celebrations of Holy Communion at 8, 9:30 and 11 a. m. Evening prayer will be said at 8 p. m. with sermon by the Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton, curate.

All Saints'. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke will have "The Gift of the Holy Spirit" as his subject at the 11 o'clock service. There will be Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m., with the rector presiding.

Dr. J. W. Bischoff Rites Set at First Congregational

In the Memorial Sunday service in First Congregational Church tomorrow the church pays its annual tribute to Dr. John W. Bischoff, blind organist-composer, who for 34 years was organist of the church. The date of his death was May 30, 1909. On this thirtieth anniversary the present organist, Paul DeLong Gable, will play a special memorial program. The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson will preach on "Land of the Free, Home of the Brave." With the A Cappella Choir absent singing at the New York World's Fair, a male quartet, Dr. Robert Harmon, director, will sing.

There will be no evening service until October.

Mount Pleasant. "The Forgotten Dream" is the sermon subject of Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, minister, at the 11 a. m. service.

Mrs. Dean R. Wickes will speak at the Junior Church, meeting at Cleveland Park, on "The Founding of Congregationalism."

Christian Science Topic Will Be 'Necromancy'

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

The Golden text is from Ezekiel 13:9: "Mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies:—and ye shall know that I am the Lord God."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou cleave, and swear by his name." (Deuteronomy 10:20.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine mind rightly demands man's entire obedience, affection, and strength. No reservation is made for any lesser loyalty. Obedience to truth gives man power and strength. Submission to error superinduces loss of power." (Page 183.)

Rev. C. H. Jope To Preach at Ninth Street

Pentecost, the birthday of the Church, will be observed at the Ninth Street Christian Church throughout tomorrow. The Rev. Clifford H. Jope will preach at morning worship and Communion on "A Permanent Memorial."

The Junior Church, under the leadership of Andrew Shannon, meets at the same hour in the church house. "Written in the Book" will be the theme. Jane Payne, Patricia Fleming, and Dorothy DeVault will have parts.

At 3 p. m. members of the official board will carry Communion to those who by reason of sickness or advanced age cannot attend church.

At the 7:45 p. m. hour, the declamation contest, "Peter's Sermon," will be held. Elmer Whitney conducts this contest, and judges will be Miss Katherine Wilfley, Mr. J. H. Baldwin and Mrs. James Boone. The pastor will preach on "Pentecost Preacher."

National City. The second in the series of sermons on the Lord's Prayer will be given in the morning by Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller. His subject will be "Thy Kingdom Come—But How?"

Columbia Heights. "What Does Jesus Teach About Religion?" will be the Rev. A. P. Wilson's topic in the morning. In the evening, Dr. Kenneth Hunter will preach again, his topic being "The Christ of Pentecost," while the Rev. Mr. Wilson is at the Takoma Park Church.

Mount Rainier. The Rev. Fred L. Miller, pastor of the Mount Rainier, Md., Christian Church, will use as his subject at the 10:45 a. m. service "This Day Shall Be to You a Memorial." The theme of his evening sermon at 7:45 p. m. will be "The Practice of Power."

Park View. "Immortality" will eb the subject of the sermon by the Rev. J. Lloyd Black at 11 a. m.

Fifteenth Street. "We Will Build On" will be the theme of the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers' sermon at morning worship and Communion. Samuel Goodsen will give a 20-minute organ recital preceding the evening service, at which the sermon topic is to be "Life's Good Things."

Third. The Rev. C. N. Williams, minister, will preach on "The All-Conquering Axis" at the 11 a. m. service.

Dr. Rasmussen To Conclude Sermon Series

'Do You Believe in The Holy Spirit?' Is His Pentecost Topic

Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor at Luther Place Memorial Church, will conclude his pre-Pentecost series of sermons tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service, at which time, in celebration of Pentecost, he will speak on "Do You Believe in the Holy Spirit?" The Rev. Mr. Frederick J. Eckert, assistant pastor, will assist in the service. A group of new members will be received into the fellowship of the church.

Christ. Whit-Sunday will be commemorated in the morning service. The pastor, the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, will speak on "The Outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the Church Today." At 6 p. m. the Walther League will be host for the Walther Leagues of Washington and vicinity.

Reformation. The annual candlelight confirmation service will be held in the evening, when a class of young people will be received into active church membership. Dr. Blackwelder will preach the confirmation sermon on "Putting a Point to Life." Dr. Blackwelder's 11 a. m. sermon is to be on "The Birthday of the Church."

At the 8:30 Matin service, the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor, will conclude his series of sermons on prayer with the sermon "A Man On His Knees."

Grace. The festival of Whit Sunday will be observed according to the ritual and custom of early days. Junior and senior choirs will share in the music. Holy Communion will be celebrated and new members received. The pastor, Dr. Gerhard Lenski, will preach on "Letting the Holy Spirit Come."

Takoma. "When the Spirit of God Comes" will be the title of the sermon which the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor, will present at the 11 o'clock service.

St. Paul's. At the morning service Dr. James O. Boyd, of the American Bible Society, will preach on "The World's Best Seller." In the evening the pastor, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, will deliver the sermon on "Every Member Present."

St. Stephen's. At the 11 a. m. service, the Rev. Sam H. Kornmann will have for his theme, "The Day of Pentecost."

St. Mark's. A group of young people will be received into the church by confirmation at the 11 a. m. service. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz will deliver an address. The following are to be confirmed: Lillian Virginia Keller, Marie Anna Gebhardt, Mildred Lucile Donahue, William Oliver Green and Hammond Riley Buckholtz.

Mgr. O'Toole to Speak Before Evidence Guild

Mgr. Barry O'Toole, professor of philosophy at Catholic University, will be the closing speaker on the religious open forum of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild tomorrow at Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K streets northwest. His subject will be "The Church and the Social Question." The meeting, under the chairmanship of President Francis Thornton, will be held from 3 to 5 p. m.

Dr. Brown To Speak at Cathedral

Dr. Blackwelder Also To Participate in Whitsunday Festival

Dr. William Adams Brown, Roosevelt professor of systematic theology in Union Theological Seminary, New York City, for more than three decades and honorary canon of Washington Cathedral, will deliver the sermon at a festival Whitsunday service in the cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Among clergy from other communions invited to participate will be the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, D. D., pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation and member of the Cathedral Council. Choirs from the following churches will take part in the musical program with the cathedral choir of men and boys: Foundry Methodist, National City Christian, Church of the Reformation and Mount Vernon Place Methodist.

Dr. Brown, having retired from active work at the Union Theological Seminary, is now chairman of the American section of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work. In recognition of his work as an outstanding leader in the cause of Christian unity he was appointed by the chapter of Washington Cathedral as one of three honorary canons. Mrs. Brown has served for ten years as national advisory chairman of the women's committees of the National Cathedral Association.

Dr. Theodore O. Wedel, director of studies of the College of Preachers, will speak at the 11 o'clock service of morning prayer. Other services will include celebration of the Holy Communion in the Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m.

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE"
*Sarah F. Adams

"Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me;
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!"

*Sarah Flower Adams, the author, was born in 1805 at Cambridge, England. This hymn describes Jacob's spiritual experience in Bethel, recorded in Genesis 28. Terror-stricken victims on board the Titanic on that fateful night when it crashed into a giant iceberg on the Atlantic were calmed when the band played the sweet strains of this hymn of prayer.

Squalus Rescue Work Praised By Roosevelt

Navy Did Great Job, President Tells Newspapermen

President Roosevelt yesterday commended the Navy for its feat of bringing 33 men alive out of the submerged submarine Squalus. He said the Navy had done a great job and deserved much credit. Speaking at his press conference, the President said he was very happy that all the preparations and training that had been carried on for years and all the work that had been done on special devices had worked out.

Pointing out that there had been no case in the past of successful rescue work below 100 feet, he remarked that the present instance of bringing the men up from 240 feet put the rescue mechanism to the most severe test. He added that the operations showed that it is worthwhile to spend a lot of money for research of this nature.

He said he had no information which would indicate the disaster was the result of sabotage.

Meanwhile, the Navy pushed forward its shipbuilding program regardless of the tragedy, opening bids for the construction of three submarines similar to the sunken Squalus. Twenty-four hours after the President signed the naval appripriation act, officials announced the bidders on four submarines and four destroyers of the 1940 building program.

The Electric Boat Co., of Groton, Conn., the only formal bidder, offered to construct three of the 1,450-ton submarines for $2,937,000 each, subject to adjustments for changes in cost of labor and materials. Machinery for the vessels will run the cost up to about $4,000,000, it was said. The same company also bid $3,497,000 to build one 800-ton submarine of a new type, complete with machinery.

Low bidder on four 1,600-ton destroyers was the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me., which asked $5,277,000 for a single ship or $4,813,000 if two were built, subject to adjustments.

Lodge Urges Relief Setup Based on Population, Jobs

An appeal for allocating relief to the States "in terms of jobs instead of money" was made to a House appropriations subcommittee yesterday by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts.

After determining the total unmber of unemployed throughout the Nation, the administrator would—under the Lodge plan—reach a figure for each State by taking into consideration its population and its unemployment. The committee is considering the 1940 relief bill.

Senator Lodge produced a list of thirty States that would stand to lose if the allocation is made in terms of money. These States with larger industrial populations include Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, asked the subcommittee not to reduce the budget estimate for the Farm Security Administration. He said that FSA rehabilitation loans cost an average of $75 o family and increase the net wealth of the family by an average of $300.

Final Chapter in the Disaster of the Squalus

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Ponderous pontoons, covered with a layer of wood, are unloaded from Navy barge at Portsmouth for use in raising the sunken submarine Squalus. Navy submarine experts approved use of pontoons in raising the vessel. Ten of the pontoons will be necessary to do the job to the secrecy surrounding the structure of submarines.

Those details, officers said, were available to any country in the world that might have a need for such life-saving apparatus.

Alternate Plans Considered

Approval of pontoon and compressed air operations indicated that perhaps both alternate salvage plans considered last night would be employed in raising the sunken vessel.

Apparently, the technicians planned to lighten the flooded after compartments of the Squalus by pumping out some of the sea water and replacing it with compressed air. The air-filled bow already was partly free of the muddy ocean floor and theincreased buoyancy of the hulk would aid the pontoons in their lifting operations.

Divers spent more than four hours below during the day, and even as the first returned to the surface it became clear there would be no further attempts to remove the bodies of the submarine's dead until the Squalus was surfaced.

Rehearst on Sculpin

Using as a model the sister submarine Sculpin, which lay at anchor nearby, other divers rehearsed duties that would come to them during the actual salvage operations.

Navy technicians had hardly completed their intricate work with slide rule and blueprint to devise the best means of floating the $4,000,000 craft, before grotesquely garbed men dropped in rapid relay into the icy sea water from the rail of the rescue ship Falcon.

Masts, radio antennae, dangling rope deck rails—any gear that might imperil undersea workers during their salvage of the craft—were torn loose and brought to the surface.

The first group of divers prepared for the attachment of air hoses in the event it was decided not to use the pontoons.

Later a permanent descending line was attached to the deck of the Squalis and the work of clearing the craft's decks began.

Again today—the fourth since the vessel sank Tuesday morning—sea and wind were ideal for underwater operations. Impatient as the salvage officers were, however, they took meticulous care in working out the intricate problems connected with surfacing the Squalis.

There was no longer the possibility of living men within the sunken hull—that was settled once and for all yesterday when divers found the after torpedo room flooded to the brim and quickly resealed a hatch they had opened.

Speed No Longer Necessary

The sole question that remained was how best to bring up the $4,000,000 craft. Since speed was no longer a primary consideration. Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard and director of rescue and salvage opeations, ordered operations on the sunken submarine suspended last night and, for the first time since the Squalis sent a red smoke bomb—the S O S of submersibles—to the surface Tuesday morning, he stepped ashore for a pow wow in his yard quarters.

A plan was decided upon, but its details were undisclosed. Later in the day the two experts flew to Washington for their chiefs' approval, while brother technicians stuck by their drawing boards to check and recheck every minute and intricate detail.

2 Trainmen Die As Dynamite and Tank Cars Crash

Bluefield, W. Va., May 26 (AP).—Two trainmen were killed and 21 cars of a fast eastbound freight were wrecked tonight at Pembroke, Va., about 40 miles from Bluefield, the Norfolk & Western Railroad offices here announced.

The dead: E. M. Pile, of East Radford, Va., engineer; J. K. Stophel, of Roanoke, Va., fireman.

Officials here said 30 freight cars remained on the rails, but the locomotive and 21 following cars smashed into a piled tangle of wreckage blocking both eastbound and westbound tracks.

One of the freight cars was loaded with dynamite and another, a tank car, carried gasoline. Neither of these left the rails.

Ex-Officer Hook Held in Assault

Thomas H. Hook, 33, former District policeman, surrendered to police yesterday and was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with a restaurant brawl which seriously injured a man May 16. He was released under $1,000 bail.

Charles Farrar, of Leesburg, Va., was struck over the head with a wooden mallet during a fight at a lunchroom in the 1,100 block Fourteenth street northwest. He suffered seveer head injuries and is still confined to Emergency Hospital.

Shirley spoke concerned the wedding. Ruth said:

"You can't blame Lloyd. It was a question of saving some lives or none at all. No one can say it wasn't the right thing.

"But I still can't believe Sherman is dead. There's some hope. There must be. I won't give up until—until—" she brown down and wept.

She and Shirley met six months ago. Me gave her a diamond ring and they set the wedding for tomorrow.

"There's the wedding ring and the license. We couldn't have a honeymoon right away because Sherman was going on a cruise. In November he was to get a 30-day leave and we were going to visit his parents in Little Rock, Ark."

Paris Paper Tells Of Two Attempts On Il Duce's Life

Paris, May 16 (U.P.).—The Uice correspondent of the Paris Soir today reported there had been two recent unsuccessful attempts to assassinate Premier Mussolini of Italy, the first on April 27 and the second in May, just before Il Duce left to inspect fortifications in the Piedmont region.

The correspondent said that the second assailant, refusing to give his name or supporters despite "severe pressure," declared:

"I knew in advance that I would die, but I decided to sacrifice my life in order to rid Italy of the oppressor. We are several hundred who took the same oath. I hope one of us succeeds."

Cowboy Yell Greets Rulers in Calgary

Windsor (then the Prince of Wales) bought a 1,600-acre ranch 60 miles southwest of the city. Whatever the affection in Calgary for Windsor, it in no way dimmed the joyous welcome given the reigning King and his Jueen today.

Earlier today the Royal train stopped at Medicine Hat, the town which Rudyard Kipling said "was born lucky with all hell for its basement." He was alluding to its famous natural gas wells. In Medicine Hat gas is so cheap that people don't bother to turn off their lights in the daytime.

Queen Elizabeth became so interested in Medicine Hat and particularly in a girls band that came up from Big Sandy, Mont., 350 miles away, that the King had to warn her about the train leaving.

"No dear," he said, "I don't want to hurry you, but the train is waiting."

60 Girls in Band

The band, consisting of approximately 60 girls ranging from 11 to 17 years of age, were given the place of honor on the platform. The conductor, 17-year-old Nora Berg, dressed in blue like Their Majesties, maintained the true complacency of the drum major when presented to the King and Queen, who seemed to be delighted with the town's welcome.

A heavy rain greeted the royal couple on arrival in the Moose Jaw, a prairie town, last night. Twenty thousand persons stretched to see and cheer the British Sovereigns despite the downpour, and Their Majesties returned the compliment by riding slowly down the main street in an open limousine although they were soon soaked by the rain.

Next stop after Calgary is Banff, perched high in the Canadian Rockies, where King George and Queen Elizabeth will get their first rest since their crossing the Atlantic ten days ago. For 36 hours they will be comparatively free of the customary pomp and ceremony that attends each new visit. Then they will journey on to Vancouver and Victoria.

QueenMarySpends 72d Anniversary Propped Up in Bed

London, May 26 (AP).—Queen-Mother Mary spent her seventy-second birthday propped up in bed in a room decked with flowers today instead of attending a luncheon in her honor.

Physicians reported the Queen was progressing satisfactorily after her automobile accident May 23, but said improvement of her injured eye "necessarily must be slow."

Princess Elizabeth brought a present to her grandmother and Princess Margaret Rose sent an orderly with her birthday gift. The Queen's two younger sons, the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, and her daughter, the princess royal, Countess of Harewood, also called on her.

Cave-In Traps Bootleg Miner

Shenandoah, Pa., May 26 (U.P.).—Robert Galligan, a 35-year-old bootleg coal miner, was trapped by a cave-in 75 feet below the surface tonight and a giant steam shovel dug into the side of Locust Mountain a mile from here in an effort to reach him.

Galligan was working the mine with Michael Gilroy and John Leahy. Gilroy and Leahy were above ground when the cave-in occurred and they held hope tonight that Galligan might have escaped death.

Refugee Leaps To Death in N. Y.

New York, May 26 (INS).—Mrs. Irene Bieler, 40-year-old refugee from Nazi wrath, tonight leaped six floors to her death from the roof of a rooming house in West End avenue.

Her death was the second refugee tragedy in New York today—for earlier in the afternoon Rheindardt Lowengart and his wife, Hella, here only two hours from Germany, tried to kill themselves and their son.

Myers Credited With Blocking FCA Merger

Former Governor Opposed Shifting of Control to Wallace

Strong representations by former Farm Credit Administrator W. I. Myers was responsible for President Roosevelt "welching" on his first reorganization order shifting the FCA to the Agricultural Department, it was learned yesterday.

Subsequent to the transfer order, Myers, who returned to teach at Cornell University from the FCA in September, 1938, represented the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Co-operative Council, organizations all opposed to the shift. Last Monday Agriculture Secretary Wallace issued a statement "with the concurrence of the President" announcing that the FCA would not become an integral part of his department.

Officials interpreted the veiled language of the statement to mean that the only part of the reorganization order left standing provided for the FCA governor to report to Wallace instead of to the President directly, but that the governor would retain undiluted directive and administrative control of the agency.

Prviately, officials said the President had neglected to transfer several organizations under the FCA's supervision, and that Wallace actually did not believe that his department should be involved with the hitherto independent agency's loaning functions.

The farm organizations, whose message Myers carried to the White House, met here soon after the order was issued. The statement, declaring the transfer was an "Indian gift," was seen as a move to forestall impending public protests by interested private organizations.

'Dr. Kildare' Returns to Capitol Screen

Ayres and Barrymore Play Original Roles; Haakon on Stage

"CALLING DR. KILDARE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by Harry Ruskin and Willis Goldbeck, from an original story by Max Brand, with Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Nat Pendleton, Lana Turner, Samuel S. Hinds, Lynne Carver, Emma Dunn, Walter Kingsford, Alma Kruger, Bobs Watson, Harlan Briggs, Henry Hunter, Marie Blake, Philip Terry and Roger Converse. Directed by Harold S. Bucquet. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Like the green bay tree, the film-goer's reigning passion—a desire to witness further adventures of characters who have caught his fancy—continues to flourish in the Capitol's new feature, "Calling Dr Kildare," with Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres playing the roles in which they won favor several months ago.

The Capitol's stage show boasts Dancer Paul Haakon and Singer J. Harold Murray, with supporting variety turns that are pleasant and not repetitious.

Again Ayres is that brash, young interne, who manages to get into scrapes with such daring ease, and Barrymore is his crusty old mentor, Dr. Gillespie. And while it is Ayres who has the title role, it is that fine old actor who becomes the most memorable feature of the film.

You may remember Dr. Gillespie. He is the spirit of the hospital and, though he has not left the building in three years, the fact that he is confined to his wheel chair does not make him any the less acute. What Dr. Gillespie wants, Dr. Gillespie gets. And Dr. Gillespie does want his outspoken young assistant to live up to the hopes he has for the boy. In the fade-out of "Young Dr. Kildare," the interne had again achieved the good graces of his demanding chief, after a near scandal that shook the hospital.

Mysterious Bullet Wound

And now, Dr. Gillespie again is dissatisfied and shifts Kildare off to a dispensary. The first day on the new job brings a mysterious bullet wound case, a matter which should be reported in full. But there is an attractive redhead mixed up in the situation and the gallantly understanding Kildare keeps the case silent. It turns out to be murder that he is meddling with and every wide-awake cinema-addict knows that "Crime Does Not Pay." So it is a touch of trouble our young man slides into, but his decency and Dr. Gillespie's alertness achieve an outcome that returns Kildare to his former post, a wiser, sadder, young man.

The production is slightly more pretentious than that of the earlier "Kildare." There are amusing lines, especially some which Barrymore and Alma Kruger (as an important nurse) toss back and forth. Laraine Day is a helpful "operator 326," whom Barrymore assigns to keep Ayres out of trouble. Lana Turner plays the naughty young lady whose fascination misleads Kildare. Emma Dunn, as the interne's mother, has several humorous scenes.

Summing up, while not so good as the first, because of choppy piecing together of the murder details, this sequel is a satisfying and generally interesting film play.

Star-Studded Stage Bill

That favorite dancer of the Capitol's patrons, Paul Haakon, returns to the big stage with three numbers. With a merry polka, Strauss' "Perpetuum Mobile," and a waltzing finale, the ever-popular artist brings brilliance and, incidentally, entertainment to the bill.

J. Harold Murray, who first piped the lilting "Rio Rita," offers some of his barytoning into a microphone that made his accustomed robustness incline to a metallic tone. Brown and Ames, the tall humorist and the tiny singer, got many laughs from yesterday's first house, as did George and Jack Dormonde in their novel cycling act. Pearl Robbins taps on her toes and the 20 Rhythm Rockets return for two numbers.

The excellent Fox Movietone News includes some thrilling shots of the submarine rescue.

RICHARD L. COE.

Running-Boards Out on New Car

To avoid possible injury to fans who insist on jumping on his running board and riding there, Robert Taylor was forced to purchase an automobile without any running boards.

He made the decision after appearing on a recent radio program. As he left the broadcast building, a youngster jumped on and was nearly brushed off at the corner of an alley before the star noticed him. A repetition of the incident occurred when a dozen fans tried the same trick and to their great surprise, found nothing to jump onto.

Although the jumpers invite trouble, any injury means a lawsuit for Taylor, who decided that it was cheaper to buy a new car.

'Confessions of a Nazi Spy,' Earle, Exposes Work of Espionage Ring

Robinson and Lukas Head an Able Cast; Many Stars Feature Fine Stage Revue

"CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY." Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Milton Krims and John Wexley, based on material gathered by Leon G. Turrou, with Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas, Henry O'Neill, Lya Lys, James Stephenson, Sig Rumann, Fred Tozere, Grace Stafford, Celia Sibelius, Joe Sawyer, Lionel Royce, William Vaughn, Robert Emmet Keane, Frank Mayo, Lucien Prival, Jack Mower, Bodil Rosing and Frederick Burton. Directed by Anatole Litvak. Previewed Monday afternoon, May 22. At the Earle Theater.

It is a three-ply screen attack that "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" makes upon Hitlerism and its espionage system in this country. It utilizes, first the "detective story" narrative derived from the writings of Leon G. Turrou, former G-man, credited with having "broken the spy ring;" it employs the off-screen voice of a commentator to emphasize aspects of the situation of which it treats, which are not otherwise covered, after the manner of a documentary reel, and thirdly, it frequently introduces newsreel shots showing precisely what is going on in Germany and the threat of that philosophy of government to this country. The three forms of motion picture expression combine to make a sweeping indictment.

BELL

There is not a great deal that is fictional in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." It is based primarily on the breaking of the spy ring and the trial of those who were captured and kept in this country. There may be a touch of imagination in the depiction of the manner in which some of the ringleaders escaped to the Fatherland, but otherwise the picture merely places upon the silver sheet all of the startling headlines that appeared in the press when the trials were in progress.

Characters Not Disguised

There has been no attempt to disguise any of the characters. There are the traitorous doctor, screening his insidious activities behind American citizenship papers and a fashionable medical practice; the hairdresser on the transatlantic liner; the two-time deserter from the United States Army and the amateur bungler whose first confession brings about the later one of Dr. Kassel.

Not the least interesting phase of the film's action lies in the revelation of the methods of the Gestapo, the German secret service. Their methods are direct and brutal and hedged about with an arrogant cleverness that makes them all the more ominous.

The cast of this picture is a tremendously long one. Its nominal star is Edward G. Robinson, who appears in the role of the agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who runs down the Bund heads and their henchmen, who plot the upset of this Government. His work is in his usual close-clipped and incisive style, with ample power turned on when it is needed. As I have remarked before, however, it seems to me that the best performance in the play is contributed by Paul Lukas, as Dr. Kassel. Lukas in his present assignment is called upon to span a wide range of drama and does it all flawlessly. George Sanders, as Schlager, intermediary between Hitler and his American supporters, is another who turns in a fine performance in a thoroughly obnoxious part and Francis Lederer was an ideal choice for the role of the ambitious young spy, who wasn't quite up to the demands of his job. It is he who first starts the ball rolling in the direction of a complete exposure of the spy ring.

There are many others of note who do praiseworthy work in roles of varying importance, many of whom are not too well known to Washington audiences. There is none among them, however, who is not thoroughly capable. Their names will be discovered, if you care to look, in the small-type paragraph preceding these comments. It is perhaps no more than fair to single out Lya Lys, Grace Stafford and Dorothy Tree as the feminine members of the cast who do most to balance the numerical dominance of male characters.

"Salute to Summer"

For his elaborate stage revue this week, Production Manager Harry Anger has supplied the Earle stage with a "Salute to Summer." Running a full hour, this musical melange is rather more pretentious than some of the recent stage bills that have been cramped by excessive running times of the major features.

Returning to the scene of his long engagement as a comparatively permanent house feature, Bert Granoff, the Capital's favorite barytone, reaps the reward of long-established and apparently lasting popularity. His voice seemed to be at its best yesterday. Next in public favor were Buster Shaver and Olive and George, his diminutive partners. This is an act already familiar to Washington and one that always "clicks," with Mr. Shaver seeming to tower over his Lilliputian associates, which is more their fault than his.

Then there are the Ghezzis, Sam Barton, Ritter, in a novelty act, and the 16 Earle Roxyettes—featuring Melba in one number—in a golf routine and a stair drill that adds new evidence of their versatility.

The Paramount News, with views of the Squalus rescue, augment a feature that every American ought to see as a matter of information as well as entertainment.

Sells Eggs

Mickey Rooney has entered the poultry business. Daily on his way to the studio he pauses at a San Fernando market to sell approximately five dozen eggs. That's around a dollar a day for chicken feed.

Does His Best Work in Spy Film

PAUL LUKAS

as he appears in the role of Dr. Kassel, chief conspirator against the United States in the Warner Brothers' production of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Lukas offers one of his most impressive characterizations in this unpleasant and craven role. The supporting cast is one of exceptionally able selection

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 26.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT: The $1,500,000 Otto Kahn house at Cold Springs Harbor, together with some of the surrounding acreage, has been offered to the President—as a permanent summer White House. The offer was submitted by the trustees of Kahn's estate, through their intermediary—Solicitor General Henry Epstein, of New York State. Harold Ickes: The University of New Mexico will confer an honorable degree upon you . . . Beniamino Gigli: Because of the scurrilous statements you made against the Metropolitan Opera, six of the Metropolitan stars—who will perform in Europe this summer—have agreed not to appear on any concert platform with you during their tour.

CRITICS' CIRCLE: June Walker, the drama star, has a 7-year-old son who is stage-struck . . . The other day while June and her son were walking in the street they met George Jean Nathan . . . "Mr. Nathan is the president of the Critics Circle," the mother told her son. "And, you know—critics can make or break actors" . . . After the meeting Nathan departed and the boy was silent for a long time . . . "Mother," he then confided, "I've decided——" "You've decided what?" asked June Walker . . . "I've decided," said her son, "I don't want to be an actor."

DOROTHY PARKER: Ruth Gordon and Helen Hayes have read the uncompleted manuscript of the play you and Alan Campbell are writing. They like it so much—each wants to play the starring role . . . J. Edgar Hoover: Rex Smith, editor of News-Week, waits at the stage door of "The Brown Danube" each night—because of the threatening letters received by his wife, Jessie Royce Landis, who portrays the Austrian princess in this, the best of the anti-Nazi plays . . . George Earle; Gov. James, who succeeded you as Governor of Pennsylvania, presented his official card to patrons of El Morocco—who believed his first story . . . that he was a miner from Plymouth.

IRVING BERLIN: Because of the success of your biographical movie, "Alexander's Ragtime Band," two other film companies will produce similar movies about Broadway figures . . . Goldwyn will screen Eddie Cantor's "My Life Is in Your Hands" and Paramount will produce a movie based upon the rivalry of George White and Flo Ziegfeld . . . Jack Benny will do the Ziegfeld role and George Raft will portray White . . . White, incidentally, for the first time since 1931, will stage his own dances for the "Scandals." His chorus call is for June 5.

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE: Jimmy Durante, who lost his one-horse stable when Westbrooke was destroyed last week, has continued his interests in improving the breed. Yesterday he purchased Ballyhaste, a 3-year-old. Coburn will be the trainer . . . Sinclair Lewis: John Wildberg, who produced your show, "Angela Is 22," has bought the American rights to "Gaslight." Orson Welles may be starred in it . . . Maj. Gen. G. V. H. Moseley: One of Washington's most famous Senators is probing into your record . . . Jerome Frank would be made head of the SEC was reported first in this space on March 23 and also on April 7.

GROVER WHALEN: Commissioner Teddy Hayes told this story: When the Federal Government first arranged for its space at the World's Fair grounds, your engineers congratulated the United States officials for their good fortune in getting such desirable ground . . . "The ground you have is so perfect you'll never have to worry about the foundations for your building. You can go ahead and build—practically without any foundations' . . . Just before the building plans were to begin, Hayes decided to make one test. He had the engineers bring an 80-foot steel pile, hit it with a hammer once—and it disappeared into the earth . . . As a result, the Federal Government had to pay $279,000 to make the land usable.

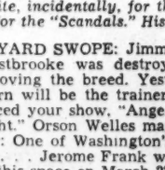
STATE LABOR BOARD: When the appellate division ruled in favor of the Stork Club and against you, Sherman Billingsley won a $500 bet from one of your counsel. The bet was based upon the decision to be rendered . . . Thomas Mann: I spoke to Ernst Toller three days before his suicide. He was extremely depressed, and told me: "We all must do something to help culture survive. Its foremost proponents are being exiled, and the men of wealth who can help are doing nothing." . . . Jim Farley: Have you been suggesting a 3d term for F. D., with you as Vice President?

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 26.—Now that the United Artists Studio has become the sole possession of Sam Goldwyn, it might be fun to peek over that high, protecting wall. It was formerly owned by Jessie Hampton. But in 1922 Mary and Doug bought it and in 1928 sold half an interest to Joe Schenck. Not till 1933 did Sam Goldwyn enter the picture, when he purchased Mary and Doug's share, making him a partner with Schenck. But now Sam owns it all.



HOPPER

It's roughly estimated that over $500,000,000 has been spent there on productions. It's the one studio in Hollywood where nothing but "A" pictures have been produced, the average cost being around $1,000,000 per picture.

Some of the screen's greatest lovers have passed there in parade. Once the home of Norma Talmadge, who always started her pictures on Friday—Friday, the 13th, if she could find one. Joe Schenck, Norma's husband, never started one till he'd consulted a famous seer in Santa Monica.

In Jack Barrymore's bungalow he kept a trained, caged monkey which he'd taught to scream at the approach of certain other male stars. But Jack went blithely along insulting people in his inimitable way.

There was the day when a wealthy socialite, upon being introduced to Jack, said: "In my home town, they tell me I bear a strong resemblance to you."

"'Twouldn't surprise me," snapped John. "My father was a great traveler."

Anna May Wong began her career in the same picture. Tony Asquith, son of Britain's prime minister, got his first training here and was later joined by his sister, the Princess Bebesco.

The lovely Julanne Johnston, just out of school, started her career as Doug's leading lady in "The Thief of Bagdad." She's now happily married with a penthouse and a baby in New York.

Herr Lubitsch directed his first American pcture there. Charlie Farrell was picked out of the crowd of extras because he was strong enough to lift Mary Pickford with one hand and put her on his shoulder. For that he got enough money to buy a suit with two pairs of pants.

And the great D. W. Griffith used to direct his emotional scenes with his back to the players and camera. He'd stand with his eyes glued intently on a sweeper anc janitress he brought on the stage. If these two wept during the scene, Griffith oked it. If it left them unmoved he'd rewrite the script and reshoot it.

Those were the good old days when pleasures were simple. When Easterners didn't know they were supposed to wear trousers under their chaps. Neither did Doug when he came to California.

And now that United Artists has become the Sam Goldwyn Studio, we have "The Real Glory." I'm hoping it will live up to that title and traditions of the old days.

'Union Pacific' Roars On at Metropolitan

DeMille Railroad Epic Stars Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck

Building a railroad is a cross between a charivari and a massacre, with underiones of board meetings and gambling hells. We are sure of this after witnessin, Mr. Cecil B. de Mille's monumental "Union Pacific." If Mr de Mille wants to build a railroad and will do it according to his cinema specifications, he'll have 90 per cent of employables and 100 per cent of unemployables clamoring for jobs on his enterprise.

This is no criticism of "Union Pacific." It has impact, speed and the soaring circus-y de Mille inspiration that has been filling theaters since the rememberance of man—well, this generation of man. But, dogone it! you can't get away from the fact that Mr. de Mille is absolutely uninhibited. Mr. de Mille wisely refuses to be hampered by details that might prevent him from making highly marketable pictures.

A Few Anachronisms

One instance. When the Union Pacific was built, any gal who bounded around in pants (even as charmingly as Barbara Stanwyck) was no lady and no fitten heroine, let alone a prospect for a good man's matrimonial proposals. Research into the slang and idiom of the day was not permitted to tie up the de Mille style, either. A job foreman speaks easily about "brass hats," a World War phrase. You'll pick out plenty of other anachronistic lines, too, if you keep your ears open.

But enough of this balloon picking. "Union Pacific" is highly entertaining, crammed with speedy action. You'll enjoy it all, whether or not you're a sticker for correctness in atmosphere.

Impregnable is the word for the cast. Barbara Stanwyck, the sassy mavourneen daughter of an old engineer, has a brogue as thick as butter and just as wholesome. That candid sweetness that has always been a Stanwyck specialty, is in exactly the right spot in "Union Pacific." Joel McCrea is good ol' Joel McCrea again—just a darned nice and regular fellow, even though he has a penchant for committing justifiable homicides. The verve of Robert Preston, a newcomer, contrasts handsomely with the contained McCrea spirit.

Character Roles Excel

As for the character parts, you'll practically fall out of your seat when you see that veteran slicker, Lynne Overman, all done up in whiskers and chawin' terbacker. Akim Tamiroff looks mean again, but has a heart of gold with inlays of soot. Brian Donlevy (who should be rewarded with a hero part some happy day) is the lowdowner who manufactures trouble in the stupendous manner.

So another De Mille epic. You'll not be disappointed on a single score.

The rescue of the Squalus crew which features the newsreel, may be put down among the major flashes of the year. The camera, unfortunately, did not get the best angles on that "get-together" of King George and Queen Mary with the Canadian veterans.

MARY HARRIS.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 26 (INS).—Margaret Sullavan, heading home from New York after a European vacation with Hubby Leland Heyward, will just barely get her trunks unpacked before she starts work in the Oscar Wilde comedy, "Canterville Ghost," with Frank Morgan and Jimmy Stewart. M-G-M bought this story ten days ago and Producer Milton Bren, who has had a yen for ghost stories ever since he made the "Topper" series for Hal Roach, grabbed it pronto for his first as an M-G-M producer.

LOUELLA PARSONS

It will be novel to see Maggie in a comedy for a change after a run of dramas like "Shopworn Angel," "Three Comrades" and "Shining Hour." On second thought, I suppose the Wilde story is really a fantasy, since it deals with a whimsical ghost who has haunted a family castle for 300 years before a crazy American family buys it. Frank Morgan should be hilarious as the peevish ghost and Jimmy Stewart, who has been announced for everything but "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," will honest-to-goodness be Maggie's movie beau in this one.

John Stahl, who usually just loves divorce problems for his movies, goes far afield of domestic battles in his next for Universal's temporarily titled "Matanuska Valley." In case it has slipped your mind, Matanuska Valley is the fertile spot in Alaska where Uncle Sam homesteaded a group of American farmers from the Midwest. It is to be a big heart interest special after the pattern of the pioneering "Cimmaron" — and nothing would please the temperamental Mr. Stahl more than getting his favorite actress, Irene Dunne, to put on a sun bonnet as the star. Right now, he wants to get a box-office title with more "oomph" for this original story.

After the dull stretch that followed "Algiers," it begins to look like Sigrid Gurie, the Norwegian from Brooklyn, is getting a good break at last. Universal has signed her on a five-year contract calling for two pictures a year. I never did understand why Miss Gurie, who was really charming in "Marco Polo" with Gary Cooper, was allowed to languish for so long. Several weeks ago she went to "U" for "Forgotten Women" and they thought she was so good they ticketed her. Interesting to hear that the deal was closed by her fiance, Dr. L. C. Spangard, whom Miss Gurie marries as soon as her divorce is final in July.

Jack Warner was wearing a smile that wouldn't come off today, because he just received word that the English censors had passed "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" without a single deletion. Warners aren't making any secret of the fact that they hadn't expected quite so much good luck. After all, England is embarrassingly closer to Herr Hitler than we are and no one would have been terribly surprised if they had cut certain scenes such as the German Fuehrer's march into Austria and a couple of other touchy matters. But no—it goes through as is, without a single guttural grunt missing for the London opening June 9.

Snapshoats of Hollywood collected at random: Didn't you know it would happen—George Raft and Virginia Pine are back where they left off; Priscilla Lane, wearing a wedding ring, still laughing off the stories she's married to Oren Haglund; believe it or not, Lili and Errol Flynn will be married five years on June 19 and they're throwing a shindig on the yacht, congratulating themselves for not letting Hollywood gossips break up their home; the Rodion Rathbones celebrating their first wedding anniversary tomorrow night—and Basil and Ouida are giving them a party; Winnie Sheehan got a laugh when Dick Rosson, the thinnest cameraman in the business, told him he'd gained seven and a half pounds in the Nazi jail.

Speaking of putting on weight, Alice Brady, a couple of pounds plumper, looking swell with Austin Fairman at a night spot; Dorothy Lamour out stepping out without a beau for the first time in weeks, with the Frank Borzages; the heat isn't bad enough, so they have Doug Fairbanks, jr., working in a boiler room for three days in "Ruler of the Sea;" Millicent Jaeckel felt like giving a party tonight and Ria Gable, Rubye Tropp, Bill Haines, Minna Wallis and Rita and Eddie Lowe helped her celebrate; Barbara Stanwyck is all for today... Happy Saturday and Sunday.

ADA Borrows $4,258,000 for 912 D.C. Homes

Alley Dwelling Units To House Some 3,500; Frederick Gets $449,000

A loan contract providing the Alley Dwelling Authority with $4,258,000 for erection of dwellings in the District for more than 3,500 persons was signed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Estimated cost of the project is $4,732,000, of which 10 per cent is to be raised by the ADA through sale of notes secured by value of the new development. The project consists of 912 dwelling units.

The U. S. Housing Authority's first loan contract for Washington, signed last November, provided the loan agency with $6,600,000 for completion of four projects. Construction is expected to begin this summer.

Yesterday's contract was one of 19 totaling $27,514,000, approved by the President on recommendation of Nathan Straus, head of the USHA. The projects include a $449,000 housing development in Frederick, Md.

Steamer Explodes, Sinks Off Guiana; One Survives

Georgetown, British Guiana, May 26 (AP).—A police constable's message from an outpost on the Venezuela-British Guiana boundary reported today that the 34-ton steamship France had exploded and sunk with the loss of all except one of her crew.

The lone survivor was washed ashore on the beach at Moruca River, from where the constable filed his brief report. He gave his name as Simmons and said the France, which was en route from Trinidad to Georgetown, had sunk 13 miles off the mouth of the Demerara River, the report said.

The France, commanded by Capt. James Plumpton, carried 320 cases of dynamite and 500 drums of gasoline. The crew was believed to number between six and ten.

Three Kidnap Banker And Wife; $75 Taken

Dewey, Okla., May 26 (AP).—Three youthful gunmen kidnaped a banker and his wife early today and two of them obtained $75 after failing to gain access to the contents of two safes containing more than $13,000. All escaped.

The three masked, accosted O. A. Patridge, vice president of the First National Bank, and his wife upon their return home last midnight.

store, magazine or newspaper. "But they all seem pretty well satisfied with the people they already have," she added.

Bob Faris, Colonial basketball star, paused long enough between classes to admit he hasn't "lined up anything yet." Faris wants a position as a coach or physical education instructor.

"I just hear dabout one vacancy," Madelaine Matchett said, "and I think I may have a chance for it."

Miss Matchett has been studying psychology at George Washington and is "specially interested in intelligence and personality tests."

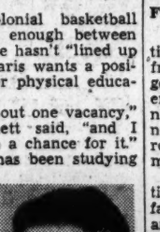
She knew "it wasn't going to be easy to find a job," she said, "so I'm feeling very lucky to have this one possibility."

Leon Bick, a fourth-year student at American University, unless he can get "a really good job," plans to take graduate work next year at Columbia or Chicago. He wants a Ph.D. in sociology. This summer he will work in his father's liquor store.

SCHLISINGER

Olive Reed, senior in education at George Washington, has a summer job as a playground instructor here, but hasn't found anything for next fall. "I'm a little disappointed," she said, "but I don't know anyone else who's found a job."

"I think I could pick up some work around town," Julius Schlesinger told The Post, "but it's getting pretty hard to locate the right sort of job—you really have to be good." Schlesinger specialized in economics at George Washington and hopes to find a place in the Labor Department.



PRIVOT

Asked if he hadn't expected he would have a job awaiting him by May of his senior year, he said, "No, I don't think anyone does any more."

Alarmed at a .000 batting average in the search for seniors with jobs, The Post investigators enlisted the aid of a dozen underclassmen and soon were directed to Selma Privot, described as having "two jobs."

The first, it developed, is a secretarial position she has held with the American Bedding Co. for two years, while studying business administration at George Washington. "The second," she said, "consists of being married."

War Department Scanning Activities of Gen. Moseley

But Army Denies It Has Launched an Independent Inquiry

By International News Service.

The War Department has begun a quiet scrutiny of evidence linking the retired Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley with anti-semitic activities, it was learned today.

A department spokesman denied, however, that the Army had initiated an independent inquiry into Moseley's conduct.

A high department official indicated the Army high command had vetoed proceedings against Moseley on the supposition that this would "permit him to make a martyr of himself."

Transcript Asked

It was established, nevertheless, that Col. Lawrence H. Hedrick, chief of the military justice section of the Judge Advocate General's office, had called upon the House committee investigating un-American activities for a transcript of evidence mentioning Moseley's name.

The general, former commander of the Fourth Corps Area, had been mentioned by a committee witness, George Deatherage, chief of the Knights of the White Camellias, as the choice of a rightist coalition to lead them.

The committee has seized correspondence purporting to have been written by Moseley but has made public no evidence indicating he agreed to head any revolutionary movement.

Army quarters suggested that a War Department examination of the evidence would be a routine procedure, dictated by the fact that officers, active or retired, remain subject for life to the articles of war.

General Has Pension

Moseley draws a retired major general's pay and officers pointed out these pensions might be canceled or reduced as a penalty for infraction of the articles of war.

Moseley, upon retirement last September, made a statement denouncing administration policies.

He has since made numerous anti-Communist speeches. He has urged adoptions of the principles of "Christianity and democracy" and attacked the Jews.

Subpenaed by the committee to testify last Wednesday, he asked a postponement and will probably not now be called for several weeks, according to Dies.

Commenting on the reported Army inquiry, Moseley, at Atlanta, said he "would be happy to abide by the judgment of our Army, if it can be granted perfect freedom to act." He described the Army as "the finest thing in our Government today."

Underwood & Underwood.

Maj. Gen. George Moseley, former commander of the Army's Fourth Corps Area, said in an interview at Atlanta yesterday that Dies committee investigation of anti-Semitic activities "smells too much like Russia." It was reported yesterday that the War Department had started its own investigation of Gen. Moseley's activities as a result of disclosures at the Dies hearings body to Rochester tonight. It will arrive tomorrow morning in the city, where he earned fame and fortune by relieving human misery.

Dr. Charles and Dr. William transformed a single, small town infirmary into a huge establishment embracing six large hospitals and skyscraper office buildings and laboratories. The pilgrimage of patients in 1936 alone was estimated at 80,000. They made millions, but devoted the bulk of their fortune to perpeuating their institution and training scientists to take over their task. They earned honors at home and abroad. But Charles once stated:

"MMy one great ambition is to relieve all the physical suffering possible during my life."

Famed for His Skill

He performed thousands of operations. He removed 700 cataracts from eyes. He was recognizezd generally as the originator of modern goitre surgery. He was a pioneer in surgical treatment of the nervous system. A noted European contemporary once commented:

"He is a most skillful and versatile surgeon, operating with equal facility upon every part of the body, and he has the soul and hands of an artist."

Dr. Charles first tried his hand at the medical arts when he was 12. An aid of his father, Dr. William Worrall Mayo, fainted while administering an anesthetic. The boy mounted a box and took over the job.

Charles, who was born in Rochester July 19, 1865, was graduated by the Chicago Medical College in 1888. He returned to Rochester in the 90s and he and his brother inherited the general practice of their father and his interest in St. Mary's Hospital.

They organized the clinic formally in 1912. The success of their surgery attracted wide attention. In 1915 they gave $1,500,000 to establish the Mayo foundation for Medical education and research in affiliation with the University of Minnesota. In 1919, they formed the Mayo Properties Association, to hold all properties and funds and insure the perpetuation of their endeavors. Thereafter, all receipts, with the exception of fixed modest salaries for themselves and adequate wages for the staff, were devoted to their projects.

Helped Poor Patients

Frequently poor patients were given a "paid in full" receipt and a check, too, to enable them to start anew. Dr. Charles explained:

"We make it up on the other side."

The constantly traded information on new techniques. Scientists from all parts of the world visited the clinic. Mayo delegations were regular attendants at the major meetings of the profession.

Dr. Charles served as president of the American Medical Association in 1916 and as head of the American College of Surgeons in 1924. He was given academic degrees and governmental awards and medals in the United States, Great Britain, Ireland, Germany, France, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Spain, Mexico and Cuba.

Dr. Mayo and his wife, the former Edith Graham, of Rochester, had eight children. Two daughters and a son died.

Reciprocity Club Hears Dr. Howe

Dr Fred C. Howe, of the Consumers' Council, advocated local sales of milk from any safe source at the weekly meeting of the Reciprocity Club in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday noon.

A committee reported that 38 members will attend the national meeting in Philadelphia June 2 to 4, inclusive. In the golf tournament at Indian Springs, Md., on Thursday, it was announced first and second low net scores were made by Dr. L. K. McClatchie and "Shorty" Hobbs. Low gross was made by Arthur Dezendorf, and the booby prize was won by Dr. Walter Sullivan.

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—Davis B. Lewis, 78, who retired in 1927 after 24 years in the United States Diplomatic Service, died today.

His assignments during Government service included vice consul positions in France, England and Tunisia.

Futile Hearing

It is difficult to see what, if anything, is being accomplished by the hearings before the District Commissioners on reasons for the dismissal of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith from the superintendency of the National Training School for Girls. The school has been operating under other management for a year and a half. There seems to be no thought whatever of reinstating Dr. Smith. Yet the Commissioners are solemnly rehearsing Dr. Smith's administration of the school as if another decision involving her executive ability were about to be made.

The hearing is a result of Dr. Smith's own efforts to vindicate her conduct at the school. But her request for an airing of charges against her goes back to the days immediately following her dismissal. Dr. Smith asked for a bill of particulars and a hearing before the Board of Public Welfare. She was granted neither. It is not unnatural that she continued to press the demand for an opportunity to present her side of the controversy.

The Board of Public Welfare probably wished—for the sake of Dr. Smith as well as that of the training school—to avoid publication of the testimony that has now gone into the record. Since she pressed the issue, however, it was undoubtedly a blunder on the part of local authorities to deny the hearing, while it was pertinent, and then to proceed with it under Congressional pressure at a time when it appeared to serve no useful purpose.

Even if unreasonable timing did not condemn this belated review of old charges, the obvious bias of the hearing committee would. In effect, the Commissioners are sitting in judgment on their own act in sanctioning the dismissal of Dr. Smith. No one would expect them to say, at this late date, that they had made a mistake in permitting the removal of the training school superintendent in 1937. So the hearing amounts to nothing more than a parading of witnesses for and against Dr. Smith before a body that long ago made up its mind.

Only in the impotent District of Columbia is a fiasco of this sort likely to be found.

Japan's Blockade

Until recently Japan's "pacific blockade" of the Chinese coast involved no direct interference with foreign shipping. Now, however, Japan is assuming the right to stop merchant vessels of all nationalities in the China seas and to search them for contraband. It is also hinted in Tokyo that this vague term may be defined in such a way as to include not only munitions of war but also food and medical supplies.

The implications of this development are far-reaching. If Japan is allowed to get away with this latest assault on foreign treaty rights, sea communications between the Western World and China will be wholly at the mercy of the Japanese fleet. Also, the position of foreigners residing and doing business in China will become even more precarious than it is already.

It is obvious, therefore, that Great Britain, France and the United States, the powers principally concerned by Japan's stop-and-search order, cannot allow this action to go uncontested. To do so would be to encourage the Japanese to launch further attacks on the rights and interests of foreigners in China. But with the European situation still in a state of flux, it is difficult to see what the Western powers can do.

For years Japan has made very good use of the preoccupation of Great Britain and France with European affairs to extend her domination on the mainland. In Europe, the retreat of the democratic powers, in the face of repeated aggressions, has apparently come to a halt. But that very fact may have spurred Japan to consolidate her position in China now, before there is a similar stiffening of the Anglo-French position in the Far East.

In this particular the island empire, while avoiding a direct alliance with the Nazi-Fascist combination, is acting, in effect, as an ally of theirs. The latest Japanese stroke could not have been better timed if it had been ordered by Germany and Italy. Yet there is no reason to believe it arose out of any considerations other than the Japanese desire to make hay while the sun still shines.

Emphasis On Imports

The address delivered by Secretary Hopkins at the world-trade dinner held at the New York World's Fair differed from the customary official discussion of foreign-trade problems by emphasizing the importance of increasing our imports. Mr. Hopkins rightly concludes that a "large merchandise export balance is not an unmixed blessing." To the trained economist that is self-evident.

Admitting that our foreign trade should be better balanced, it does not follow that, as Mr. Hopkins suggests, intensive effort on the part of Commerce Department officials is needed to increase imports. Before assigning his specialists to the work of "exploring potential imports from countries of Latin America," the Secretary should inquire whether the present lack of balance between exports and imports is likely to persist or whether it is the temporary outcome of constantly changing conditions.

As a matter of fact, there has already been a very decided decline in our export balance since the beginning of the year compared with the corresponding period in 1938. That is due to a reduction in exports and an accompanying increase in imports. Last year, the sharp rise in our export surplus was due almost entirely to a drop in imports. That in turn resulted largely from the domestic business recession which set in about the middle of 1937, and led to diminished buying of foreign raw materials. The cessation of emergency purchases of foreign wheat and corn to supplement domestic supplies depleted by drought was another factor in the import decline.

As past experience shows, when business in this country improves, imports rise. When business declines, they fall off, and nothing that official ingenuity can do will prevent these ups and downs from occurring.

Despite the record export balance of 1938, the total value of our export trade last year amounted to only $3,000,000,000 compared with an average of approximately $5,000,000,000 in the five predepression years. The comparatively low level of all foreign trade in recent years is far more serious than a drop in imports which may prove to be ephemeral. Unfortunately, neither the Department of State, through its reciprocal trade agreements, nor the Department of Commerce can hope to recapture that part of our export trade which has been lost through the Administration's price-raising policies.

Mr. Hopkins noted that "certain of our staple agricultural exports have not shared in the recovery recorded by our industrial products." He very adroitly avoided discussion of the reasons for this situation by adding that there was "not time this evening to go into problems of wheat and cotton, to mention only our outstanding farm exports." He did, however, take time to discuss a rather nebulous plan for stimulating exportation of machinery, transportation equipment, and other industrial supplies to Latin America through "appropriate economic participation."

It appears that Mr. Hopkins favors more liberal credit advances to neighboring countries and also long-time loans to be used in developing native industry. Furthermore, he suggests that enterprises created with the aid of American capital should be increasingly controlled by the nationals of the borrowing countries.

Such a hands-off policy is undoubtedly conducive to more friendly political relations. But unless the Federal Government itself takes a hand in financing Latin-American industries, there seems to be a remote prospect that our investors, made wise by experience, will fall in with Mr. Hopkins' plans. It is easier to envisage long-range plans for assisting other countries than it is to grapple with the problems that are close at hand and pressing for solution.

Mystic Meanings

We certainly share the amazement and awe with which members of the Rules and Ways and Means committees of the House must have listened the other day to the reading of the following passage from the Hendricks bill (R. H. 6466), which is said to incorporate the principles of the Townsend plan:

> "Throughout the act the present tense includes the past and future tenses. The masculine gender includes the feminine and the neuter. The singular number includes the plural and the plural the singular. 'Shall' means 'must" and is mandatory. 'May' is permissive."

Here quite obviously we have to deal neither with ordinary concepts nor ordinary terminologies. It is easy to see why such a stern classicist as Representative Fish, a stickler above all things for clarity, should suggest that the paragraph borders on gibberish. And, since Representative Hendricks himself confesses he does not know what the paragraph means, it is also easy to understand why rumor is now attributing the authorship to a special committee comprising Miss Gertrude Stein, Mr. Eugene Jolas and Mr. James Joyce.

However, we are certain the rumor is quite groundless. A careful study of the text reveals no trace of the echolalia of "Tender Buttons" nor of the neologisms and onomatoplasms of "Finnegan's Wake." It does, however, evince a decided strain of Oriental mysticism.

Indeed, the more one examines the text in question the more it becomes obvious that Townsendism is not, as so many of us carelessly supposed, a mere scheme for making elderly people rich at the expense of younger ones, but a kind of occult philosophy. The plan itself appears to assume the status of some kind of eternal entity, containing within itself what is, what has been and what will be.

It contains also within itself all unity and all divisibility. It contains both the male and female principles and also that principle which is neither male nor female. Just so, in the philosophy of Lao Tsu, does the Tao contain the one and the many, the positive and the negative, the masculine and the feminine.

Yes, sir, this Townsendism is a much profounder and more formidable business than we realized. It all goes to prove that nothing is ever as simple as it seems. We feel like the man who > . . . thought he saw a banker's clerk

> Descending from a bus.
> He looked again and saw it was
> A hippopotamus
> "If this should stay to dine," he said,
> "There won't be much for us."

Gaining In Health

Washington has been much concerned in recent years over its health record, and it has had good reason to be. The toll of death from preventable diseases has been appalling. Public health service has been quite out of keeping with what one would expect to find in the Nation's Capital. By and large there has been ample reason for the widespread complaint over health conditions here.

In taking this view, however, it is also well to remember that notable improvements have been made. The picture is not nearly so dark as it was when Dr. Ruhland began his long-range campaign against avoidable sickness and death. Last year the general death rate dropped to the lowest point ever recorded for this community. It stood at 12.9 deaths per 1,000 population compared with 14.7 as recently as 1936.

Infant mortality has fallen from the rate of 66 per 1,000 live births in 1934 to 48 in 1938. Deaths from pneumonia have declined about one-third during the same four-year period. Diphtheria statistics show an even more remarkable improvement. In 1938 that malady claimed only one-third as many victims as it did in 1934 and only a little more than one-fifth as many as in 1935. No doubt this record is directly connected with the notable increase in immunizations against diphtheria last year, just as the saving of many pneumonia victims is linked with the Health Department's program inaugurated in January, 1938, to control that dread disease.

Even tuberculosis appears to be yielding to scientific attacks. In 1934 this malady cost 123 lives for every 100,000 population. Last year the number was reduced to 94. Another significant indication of progress is to be found in the health service given mothers. "Maternity visits" to clinics operated by the Health Department increased from 2,839 in 1936 to more than 20,000 last year. Three years ago no treatments for syphilis were offered. In 1938 nearly 4,200 patients were given clinical aid in overcoming this disease.

It is not by accident or the favors of fortune that these improvements have been effected. In considerable degree they reflect the conscientious efforts of Dr. Ruhland and his associates to improve the health of Washington as a community. The decline in premature deaths has followed the creation of a bureau of nursing, a bureau of tuberculosis, a social hygiene bureau, a bureau of public health instruction and various other agencies with similar functions.

No doubt the rehabilitation of Gallinger Hospital under the Health Department is also contributing to the more optimistic outlook. In the single year of 1938 that institution acquired a blood bank, a new children's ward, an eye, ear, nose and throat ward, a new tuberculosis ward and three out-patient clinics. Five chief medical officers and a night admitting physician were added to the staff.

Much remains to be done at Gallinger and in most other branches of the local public health service. But the results to date clearly indicate that a high degree of public health can be attained through scientific control measures supported by reasonable appropriations.

Some men have fortunes in six figures—and many a girl has a fortune in one figure.

At times one is disposed to wonder if the world wasn't made primarily for fish and pessimists. It's almost three-fourth water and about nine-tenths trouble.

"What's the first thing you do when you wake up in the morning?" asks a psychologist. It's none of his business, but we turn over and go back to sleep.

A survey shows that 75 per cent of the people of this country believe in life after death. A surprisingly small number of them, however, are doing anything about it.

Canned Beef

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
As I read the "canned beef" news items which recently appeared in The Post, I wondered why it was that no one was able to recall the Government's destructive work with cattle in 1934, making it impossible as yet, for the canneries here in the United States to be able to have the "choice cuts" of beef to can, as they do in Argentina and other South American countries.

It will be remembered that one-third of the United States was smitten with a droughth and blasting winds in 1934, and that part which bore the brunt of the scourge was the cattle raising States of the Middle West. No one but the one who knew the West, with its large herds of cattle, could appreciate the appalling scenes. One could drive miles and miles and not even see a milk cow on a farm.

As I traveled over the devastated country, and talked with old stockmen, there was but one story, "it will take from 14 to 16 years to get back to normal in cattle production." While untold numbers of pigs were killed, it did not take so long to get back to normal with pork production, owing to the great multiplicity in breeding. But not so with cattle.

And as has been stated, the American people want and will have the best of "choice steaks" when it comes to beef, but being so low under normal production there is no surplus for canning, as in South America, so it becomes necessary to "can the scraps," as some writers said.

So, all the ado about good canned South American beef was uncalled for. Just a little truth would have given the "common people" an understanding as to why conditions are as they are about canned beef. The American people should awake to the truth as it really is, quit all this "planning" stuff and feel their way back to their forsaken God, whose rights to proper production of livestock and crops was never questioned, until the New Deal. All that is needed is to let feeble men keep on "planning," and we are liable to run into something besides beef where a real shortage is found.

About Booing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In answer to Shirley Povich's article of May 23, the fans didn't boo Travis for what Mr. Povich terms "missing a fly that he had no right to catch." Travis was given the Bronx cheer because he failed to get an easy grounder—something that he does all too frequently, and, probably because he lets the ball fight him, instead of fighting the ball.

Secondly, if Mr. Povich wants to boo someone why doesn't he pick on the right people? For example, along about the eighth inning of Sunday's game, Krakauskas, who had been somewhat wobbly, hit a single, which put a man on first with none out. Instead of putting in a runner (a new pitcher was warmed up, you know), the wobbly Krakauskas was permitted to run his legs off, and then return to the box to pitch.

The same thing happened Tuesday. Haynes had pitched as good a game as Krakauskas, and he wasn't as wobbly. But he had been doing a lot of base-running and hitting. In fact, he drove in what should have been the winning run. But he, too, was permitted to go back into the box, although a new man was warmed up.

Now go back to that fly ball that wasn't caught on Sunday, but that someone should have caught, and Estalella could have caught if there had been a field general playing captain who had been on his toes at the time.

There are fans, you know, who have had some experience on baseball diamonds. They know that the man who has to put his all into every throw that goes toward the batter isn't in quite the same position as an infielder or outfielder. When the pitcher has to burn up additional energy running the bases, he's lost something that he can't get back for that particular game. And, if he isn't an old-timer, his natural tendency to "tighten up" becomes even more pronounced. Then, if you present him with a "bungle" or two at this most inopportune moment, you get just what you deserve, another addition to the games-lost column.

BOO TO YOU.

For A Public Defender Bureau

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The soundness, economy and efficiency of official public defenders for accused poor persons, is again apparent from the recent annual report of the Public Defender Bureau of the Department of Public Welfare of St. Louis.

This bureau was created by a city ordinance, passed by the Board of Aldermen, on February 23, 1938. Prior thereto the work was done experimentally, through the co-operation of the city, the St. Louis Bar Association, Lawyers Association of the Eighth Judicial Circuit, the Voluntary Defenders Association and the WPA. Such report shows:

1. That cases handled by that bureau were disposed of "with a substantial degree of punctuality and a minimum lapse of time."
2. That the bureau "inures to the benefit of the taxpayers in the reduction of maintenance costs of prisoners between the date of arrest and the date of passing sentence;" and
3. That "every effort has been made to assist in the rehabilitation" of its clients.

The St. Louis work accords with the successful and economical functioning of official public defenders in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Chicago, Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford, Tulsa, Miami, and elsewhere. In view of the rapidly growing public trend toward justice for the poor in criminal cases—based largely upon the splendid results actually achieved in those communities—and inspired by the approval of the plan in principle by the Judicial Conference, composed of Chief Justice Hughes and the nine senior United States Circuit Court of Appeals judges and by former Attorney General Cummings—it is likely that the public defender system will become Nation-wide in the near future.

Accused poor persons—presumably innocent and often in fact so—do not want—nor should they get—defense as a matter of charity, through legal aid or voluntary defense groups. They should not be dependent upon volunteer, unpaid, or unskilled counsel, to protect their fundamental rights. Equal justice for all accused persons, through competent counsel and a fair trial, is the primary need. It must come by law, not by favor or charity.

As a member of the committee on resolutions of the American Bar Association, the writer will urge the association to pass a resolution approving the public defender principle at its July, 1939, annual meeting in San Francisco.

Why Not?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In view of the Squalus disaster I would like to inquire why rescue in such instances cannot be effected with apparatus made in the principle of the sphere used by Dr. Beebe in his deep sea explorations some years ago?

It would seem that such a sphere of suitable capacity could be constructed with an exit at the bottom, capable of being made airtight, which could be guided to an escape hole, also airtight, in the sunken submarine, where it could be securely attached.

Then coverings of the airtight holes in both the sphere and the sub could be opened, and the imprisoned crew could pass from the sub into the sphere, both holes again securely closed, and the sphere with its occupants rapidly drawn to the surface at any speed—without any fear of the dreaded "bends," no one having been subjected to other than normal air pressure.

If such operation is feasible there would be no trouble in working out a plan by which, by means of cables, the sphere could readily be guided directly to the escape hole of the sub, and collision with any other vessels by the sphere could be easily avoided, owing to the assistance of the cables.

There must undoubtedly be some obstacle to this apparently simple means of rescue, seeing it is not in operation. Will you or some of your readers not kindly tell me why it is not practicable?

Internal Debt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Congratulations on your very fine editorial on the speech of President Roosevelt before the Retailers' Federation. The speech was characteristic of the man, filled as it was with attacks upon businessmen of the country, and appeals to the hoi polloi. He seems incapable of distinguishing between cause and effect, and gets the two hopelessly confused. He clearly indicated that he would persist in his follies though the heavens fall and the country be ruined.

As indicative of his conclusions the following statement is given from his speech as it appeared in The Post: "Our national debt, after all, is an internal debt owed not only by the Nation but to the Nation. If our children have to pay interest on it they will pay interest to themselves. A reasonable internal debt will not impoverish our children."

Such a statement is an insult to the intelligence of a child. We are paying our proportion of the billion dollar interest on the national debt, not to ourselves, but to the few who own the bonds representing the debts. And our children and grandchildren unto the tenth generation will be doing likewise unless the debts should be repudiated, which is not altogether improbable.

I would shudder to leave it to Mr. Roosevelt to determine what is "a reasonable internal debt."

Soon the pumps are to be primed again with funds wrenched out of ths taxpayer by his friends, the talented spenders and mallet-wielders.

The recovery may not result but there will gush forth a product more succulent and palatable to the appetites of national reformers. Yeah, votes—lovely votes!

Mountain Berries

BELOW, the blue hills ran to a far-off sky bending to meet them. She strained her eyes to their outermost rim trying to glimpse the low range she longed to see. But an ocean of mist lay between her and the green-clad mountains where long ago a childhood summer had been spent. But no matter, she said, that season was chalked too strongly in her mind for time's erasure. Clear pages came back to her. For instance, the berries.

Spring came early to the hills that year; it crept up the steep slopes in a green flame that broke in a froth of blossoms on the mountain tops. Wild plums and dogwoods swung white branches from cliff-sides and blackberries bloomed in snowy drifts by trails and in old fields. Lower, on the forest floor, gooseberries and huckleberries dropped pale bells under the heavy growth of laurel and stout shrubs.

"Hit war goin' to be a fine yare fer berryin," the mountain children prophesied, "fer all the signs war right." They pointed to the clustered blooms on the laden boughs where bees gilded their legs in the rich pollen. They'd take her to such places as Tate's gulf when berries ripened, they promised, where gooseberries and huckleberries could be stripped by the handful until the picker got "tard" and "give up." She had looked at the tiny bushes sheltering under flowering "ivy," as the mountaineer calls the laurel (rhododendron is known as "laurel,") then she had asked: "What do wild berries taste like?"

Their blue eyes came alight, but they parried the question. "Haint ya et ary?" Her answer was negative. "Ner sarvices, neither?" No, not "sarvices." Then they formed a ring about her, astonishment springing life-size in their faces. Here, in truth, was an oddity: a human who had never eaten wild fruit, especially service berries, most prized by the mountaineer of all the wild abundance of the hills.

She demanded, "what are sarvices?" What were they?—they could show her. And she followed as they fled down a sheer ravine like a herd of wild ponies, sending an avalanche of rolling stones before them. On a shadowed ledge where the thin gloom was lit by rose tapers of the rhododendrons, they stopped and gestured upward. Slender trees leaned out, starred by white flowers. There were "sarvices."

"I just hone fer sarvices," said one of the girls; the breeze made free with her fair mop, and she gazed up, wide-eyed. "I natally hone fer 'em, too," echoed a younger child, entranced by the service trees. As summer came on, the ripening of the services laced their talk more often, for the children prefaced and ended all remarks with "wait tell ya've et sarvices!"

Wild strawberries ripened first. They took her to high, ancient pastures, or thinly wooded slopes where the pigeon's-blood fruit hid under notched leaves, pungent with the tang of wild growth and cool from their shadowed, secret places. "Thar uster be a sight of wild strawberries," a boy declared, pausing with cupped hands dripping ruby juice; he'd "heered granfer say he riccollected when thar was sich a passel of 'em down on Crock's trace that a hoss'ud git red to hit's fetlocks goin' through thar." Why were they scarcer now? A vagueness came over him, and he shook his head. "Mebbe a far got out," he offered; then he brightened. "Wait tell you've et sarvices," he pronounced.

When coral berries replaced the white stars on the service trees and had filled and rounded to a satisfying ripeness, her first handful left her baffled by their odd taste. The mountain children watched and waited while slowly she put them in her mouth; pride in sharing their peculiar pleasure filled them. One by one she lifted the fruit, knowing in her heart that "sarvices" lacked the sharp delight of wild strawberries and gooseberries.

But something was expected of her. The children waited, deferring their own pleasure until she had spoken. The young are usually frank and brutal in dealing with their contemporaries, but some saving-grace was manifest in her that day. For the children had looked forward to the "sarvices," as she, in her place, anticipated birthdays, or other occasions. Something of this she dimly apprehended. The ripening of the berries had been laid before her in burnished words: now it was up to her. They waited, their eyes bright as mountain springs.

Filling her mouth with the berries, she munched, trying to summon a pleased light to her face. It was no use. When one thought of strawberries dripping with wild, red juice, "sarvices" were tasteless.

But words had never failed her, and now she called them to her aid. Instead of blurting in the honest manner of childhood: I wouldn't give a red-cent for a bushel, she swallowed hastily, returning their steady gaze.

"Sarvices!" she exclaimed, "after now I'll always hone for sarvices."

Ambitious Dollar

LAST NIGHT, after work, George Spelvin, American, kicked over a couple of beers and went home to his bower, where he sat reading the paper while the ever-loving opened the can and spread the table for dinner. It said in the paper how this country's trouble was timid money and lazy money. So he pulled a fish out of his pants pockets, smoothed its worried face and sat there looking at it.

"So that's the way it is, hey?" Mr. Spelvin said. "So you are yellow. A ky-yi, hey? And a bum, too. Afraid to take a chance and you don't like to work."

"Who, me?" said the buck. "I ain't yellow. I ain't lazy. What do you want me to do? Go ahead if you are such a hero yourself. Stick me into a crap game. Makes no nevermind to me what the odds are. You can bet me against a dime any time you want to. I been on plenty long-shots before I ever saw you. And I have hustled all my life, when people would let me hustle. But if people stick me in a savings bank or a Government bond or carry me around in their pants is that my fault?"

Buck Talks Back And Says Mouthful

MR. SPELVIN'S beer was wearing off, and he wished he had a couple more.

"Why don't you buy some more beers?" the buck asked. "Why don't you go down to the corner and spend me if you are such a fast man with a dollar? Why don't your old lady keep a dozen on ice? I'm telling you why. It is because you are kinky yourself, and so is your old lady. You want to save me for a rainy day, instead of buying an armful of beer so the brewer can advertise, so the paper can hire another reporter, so the reporter's old lady can buy a rug, and so and so. Why don't you invest me in some stock? Because you are afraid to take a chance. You are the one that is yellow. Ki-yi yourself. All the Spelvins are ki-yis about their dough. You know if you buy some stock Mr. Big will kick the market in the flask and the taxes will grind off 30 cents, and I won't be your buck any more. Listen, I have done all kinds of work. I have worked in Wall Street, in groceries, in the movies, 'way out in the country, around the horse yards and night clubs and on the WPA, and a couple of times I have done jobs I would be ashamed to tell you about if it was any fault of mine. Get me to tell you about a spot I worked in once in New Orleans. Talk about Paris."

Thrifty Mr. Spelvin Defends Himself

"WELL, I didn't mean you personally," Mr. Spelvin said soothingly. "I mean all those millions of relations of yours. I mean, like you know, the big money that they call capital. Capital is yellow and lazy. It is on a sitdown strike."

"Well, I mean you personally," the buck said. "I mean you are yellow. We will let the lazy part go, but you are a terrible hound when it comes to action, and that goes for all the Spelvins, and I get sick of you and Roosevelt an' 'em blaming me and the rest of the bucks. My relations are all right, whether you call them bucks or capital. We will take chances and hustle if you say the word, and it is a hell of a way for you to blast us when you always said we are your best friends and you want us with you when you are sick or get laid off or get too old to work."

"The Spelvins ain't yellow," Mr. Spelvin said. He was getting a little sore. "The Spelvins are good Americans, but we were always taught to economize and save and make sound investments to educate the kids and provide for our old age. That ain't yellow. That is American thrift."

Spending Is What The Country Needs

"ALL RIGHT," the buck said, "so you go without beers, so the saloon folds up, so the barman gets laid off, so he goes on relief, so the Government taxes the corporation silly, so your stock investments go bankrupt, so——"

"I know; I know," Mr. Spelvin said, wearily. "But what is a guy going to do?"

"Listen," the buck whispered. "Your old lady is a pretty nice old bag, at that. She has been walloping pots and washing and mending all day, and her feet hurt. Why don't you take me and her down to the Boot's and buy her a bag of beer and a cheese on rye? I am game, Spelvin, but are you?"

Civic Opera Group Seeking 3,000 Music Lovers

Washington can enjoy a full season of opera next winter, if 3,000 music lovers will back the newly founded Civic Grand Opera Association, it was announced yesterday by A. Conti Berenguer, executive director of the association.

The board of governors has approved a plan to establish grand opera here on a self-sustaining, popular priced membership basis. Memberships will be sustaining, $50; regular $5, and junior, $2.50. The latter will be open only to children under 18 years of age.

The board of governors elected to guide the organization through its first year includes Mrs. William T. Byrne, Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, Mrs. Amelia Conti, Dr. Edith Seville-Coale, Dr. Thomas Cajigas, Miss Clelia Fioravanti, Dr. Mario Maiolatesi, Manuel J. Davis and Berenguer.

Toward An Anglo-Russian Pact

IN HALF a century, Great Britain's relations with Russia have gone through two full cycles.

Half a century ago, Russia was the Bear That Walks Like a Man. She was, in British eyes, an Asiatic despotism to be watched with unsleeping suspicion because she threatened the security of the British Empire.

Russia was then pushing across Siberia and down toward those buffer states guarding the land approaches to India. It was also suspected that the Czarist government still coveted Constantinople and the Golden Horn which the British preferred to see owned and occupied by Turkey, the Sick Man of Europe. Later, the fires of anti-Russian feeling were fed in Great Britain by the reports of Russian penetration into Manchuria.

THOSE WERE the days when relations between Great Britain and Germany were all that could be desired. Bismarck was about to be dropped as the pilot of the Reich's foreign policy, but the great efforts he had made to preserve Anglo-German friendship were to continue to bear fruit for years to come. Russia was then Great Britain's enemy No. 1.

Around the end of the century the picture underwent a radical change. Relations between Germany and Great Britain became more tense as the Reich sought to supplement her army the best and most powerful in Europe, with a navy capable of challenging that of the mistress of the seas, as Germany began to dream dreams of a railroad connecting Berlin and Bagdad, as her trade offensive began to cut into traditional British markets in various parts of the world

BY 1904 the German danger had developed to such a point as to cause Great Britain and France to bury the hatchet and establish the cordial entente. And with France acting as intermediary, Great Britain and Russia came to terms three years later.

It must not be assumed that the establishment of the Russo-British entente automatically ended all suspicions between the two countries. It did not. Great Britain continued to regard Russia warily. But between 1907 and 1914 British suspicions of Russia were distinctly overshadowed by British fears of Germany. That is precisely the situation today.

FROM 1918 to 1922 Great Britain was the spearhead of the interventionist efforts made by various powers to overthrow the Bolshevik regime. And it speaks volumes for the change in the situation between that time and this that one of the most ardent of British interventionists, Winston Churchill, is now one of the most enthusiastic advocates of a Russo-British alliance.

From 1922 on, the relations between the two countries improved somewhat. But there was no love lost between them. As an arch-capitalist state, Great Britain came in for violent denunciations by the Bolsheviks. As the fountainhead of world revolution, Russia was viewed by conservative Englishmen as an ever-present danger. Nor was there more than a temporary and half-hearted change in Anglo-Russian relations when Hitler first came on the scene.

THE EDENS and Churchills of Great Britain felt the necessity of forgetting ideological differences between their country and Russia in order to establish a common front against aggression. The Chamberlains, the Simons, the Hoares thought quite differently. And in the critical years of 1937 and 1938 it was the latter group which held the whiphand at London.

At Munich, Russia, one of Europe's five great powers, was left out in the cold by the other four. The fate of Czecho-Slovakia, with which Russia was allied, was settled without her. Henceforth, so Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier believed, the peace of Europe was to be insured by the co-operation of Great Britain, Germany, Italy and France and their respective European satellites.

IT DID not work out that way. At the turn of the century another Chamberlain—Joseph—had sought good relations with Germany through the path of appeasement. He had failed and the ententes with France and Russia followed.

The son is now following in the father's footsteps. He has not done so willingly. Despite rebuffs, he has clung to hope of good relations with Germany. And his suspicions of Russia have been paralleled by Russian suspicions of him.

For ten weeks, off and on, Great Britain and Russia have been trying to achieve a modus vivendi. For a long time nothing came of these efforts. But the circumstance that the efforts were not abandoned suggests that both in Moscow and London the recognition of present needs has been at least as great as the awareness of past antagonisms.

Alliances are never made because two nations love each other or because they happen to be sympathetic to their respective political and economic ideologies or for any other sentimental reasons. They are made because the two nations feel themselves menaced by a third.

That is why Republican France and Czarist Russia became allies in prewar days and that is why Tory Britain and Soviet Russia are getting together today. Hitler, like the Kaiser before him, has apparently succeeded in doing the seemingly impossible. He has made bedfellows of the British lion and the Russian bear.

Bail Put Up After Woman Visits Kuhn

man machine gunner in the World War who is now a naturalized American, was brought back from Pennsylvania, where he was arrested. He was paraded at the police lineup, fingerprinted and photographed, and pleaded not guilty to the charges against him.

In court he stood unsmiling at the rail, drumming with heavy fingers on a Bible used for witnesses taking the truth-oath, until the clerk droned:

"Fritz Kuhn, you are charged with grand larceny in the first degree, grand larceny in the second degree, and forgery in the third degree. How do you plead?"

"Not guilty," Kuhn replied emphatically.

The judge showed surprise when the district attorney asked $5,000 bail.

"If it was left to me I would not have fixed it so low," he said.

That figure was set, however, after the prosecutor explained the low amount was in acknowledgement of Kuhn's having waived extradition and having returned from Pennsylvania voluntarily with the arresting officers.

Several professional bondsmen refused to furnish the bail, however, and Kuhn was taken to the Tombs, staying there until his bail was arranged in the late afternoon.

Kuhn was smiling and scornful in the police lineup, under spotlights and the searching gaze of 250 detectives.

"Are these charges against you true, Fritz?" he was asked.

"No."

"Why were you arrested?"

"I don't know, yet."

Leaving police headquarters to enter a police van for the ride to court, Kuhn was grinning until someone in the street crowd yelled:

"Hey, Fritz, wie matcht der Hitler? (How's Hitler doing?)

Kuhn turned to glare at the crowd and then climbed into the barred wagon.

Long Beach, Calif., May 26 (AP).—The romance between Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader, and Mrs. Florence Camp, Long Beach divorcee, is ended, her brother said today.

Newton Todd, an attorney, explained there had been a romance between his sister and Kuhn but it "has been off now for several months."

Todd related Mrs. Camp met Kuhn aboard ship returning from England several months before her Reno divorce a year ago from a wealthy Long Beach oil man.

Rancour Lifting

President More Tolerant

IF BUSINESS seeks the cheer it greatly needs, it might find a faint glea... in a small incident at the President's press conference Friday. A newspaper man asked if there was any news about the tax prog am. Mr. Roosevelt said there was no news except that the program is going very well now; and added that because the program is going well, the best policy about it is silence. Mr. Roosevelt went on to say that the principal impediment to the tax program in the past had been newspaper stories, the accuracy of which he strongly indicted. But the newspapers can overlook this, and everybody concerned can overlook everything else, for the sake of this cheering rift in the clouds of rancor that have beset the tax program. There has been rancor between Government and business, rancor and buck-passing between President and his party leaders in Congress, rancor and face-saving between the President and some of his own subordinates.

The central present fact is there is now agreement and good will all around upon a mild but helpful degree of tax revision. And this small gleam of cheer may be part of a larger disposition to move in the direction of understanding and amity. That something like this exists is suggested by some other incidents which reflect a more urbane attitude on the part of the Administration toward business, and a more poised attitude toward party leaders who do not agree with the President in all matters.

New Tax Program Should Be Clarified

WHAT THIS tax program is should be made clear. There are several details. One is the "undistributed surplus tax." Let us see what this is:

A business corporation makes a profit. On all this profit the corporation pays the regular tax. Then the corporation decides to distribute part of the profit in dividends to the stockholders. But the corporation retains a portion of the profit in its treasury. This is called the "undistributed surplus." On this undistributed surplus, an extra tax is laid.

This is said to be a "deterrent" tax, a "friction" tax. That is, this particular tax impedes business expansion more than other forms of tax, and more than the amount of money involved. The reason this tax has this quality of putting a brake on business, is plain. The corporation, being more or less forced to pay out all its profits each year, has nothing left in its treasury with which to expand, to increase its plant, or to buy a new plant. Moreover, when a bad year comes, the corporation has nothing with which to keep on operating, and keep its employes at work.

Innocent Suffer For 'Crime' of Few

FOR MR. ROOSEVELT'S advocacy, until now, of keeping the undistributed surplus tax, there is one sound but immaterial reason. He has said over and over, and it is true, that in a very small number of cases, profits are kept in the treasury of a corporation beyond the needs of the business. This is done, Mr. Roosevelt says, truly, merely for the purpose of saving the stockholders from paying heavy personal income taxes on the dividends they would receive if the profits were paid out.

But the number of cases of this kind is, as Mr. Roosevelt admits, very small. They are cases of closely held corporations with a very small number of stockholders, "family corporations." The total amount of revenue to the Government involved in the undistributed surplus tax is, as Mr. Roosevelt said, last Monday, only $20,000,000—in a total national revenue of more than $5,600,000,000. In the mood in which Mr. Roosevelt was last Monday, $20,000,000 seemed to him a small amount for the businessmen and the party leaders in Congress to clamor about—but did not seem a small amount for Mr. Rosevelt to stand firm about.

The motive of getting $20,000,000 more taxes out of a very small number of family corporations, is the motive that has been in the front of Mr. Roosevelt's mind recently. But when this "undistributed surplus tax" was first invented some two years ago, a broader motive was in the minds of some New Dealers. The motive was to keep corporations from having much funds in their treasuries.

President Seems More Tolerant

THE NEW DEALERS felt that if a corporation had much money in its treasury, it might expand its business in its own discretion, and therefore perhaps recklessly. And a fundamental part of the New Deal philosophy—in its early years and perhaps among some New Dealers still—was that no business should be allowed to expand without first getting the consent of the Government. It was a part of the New Deal's philosophy of "planned economy," and their planned economy has always meant, in its effects, planned restriction. A good way to enforce this planned economy was to keep corporations low in funds by means of the undistributed surplus tax.

So, the present grounds for cheer are several: A fundamental part of the New Deal's philosophy of planned economy seems dropped; a tax that acted as a deterrent to business expansion is going to be repealed; and the President seems in a more poised and tolerant mood.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Report On The Opposition

IT BEGINS to look as if May 8 to May 12 will turn out to have been the turning point in the politics of this session of Congress. On the eighth the Senate added almost $400,000,000 to the agricultural appropriation for the fiscal year beginning on July 1 next. The total was made up of nearly 100 items which were adopted without a roll call.

On May 12 the Senate adopted the bill as a whole with only 14 Senators recorded as opposing. Among the opponents was Senator Vandenberg. But Senator McNary, the Republican leader, and Senator Taft, the outstanding Republican Presidential candidate in the Senate, were not among those who went on record as opposed to a spending measure which has increased by 45 per cent the appropriation asked for by the New Deal.

This was more than a spectacle. It was an event which marked not only the moral collapse of the so-called economy bloc but, very probably, it marked also the disintegration of the organized political opposition in this Congress to the President and the New Deal. At the polls last November public sentiment expressed itself by a vote which, on the face of the statistics, indicated that there was a popular majority against the New Deal. This sentiment has been represented in Congress by a loose coalition of conservative Republican and conservative Democrats. Between May 8 and May 12 this coalition fell to pieces.

Opposition Collapses And Roosevelt Acts

MR. ROOSEVELT has not been slow in recognizing that the political opposition was demoralized, nor did he fail at once to take advantage of the opening. With the collapse of the opposition in Congress, the opposition from the Treasury within the Administration lost its effectiveness. Then, the President, with a few face-saving concessions to Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Hanes, plumped for the policy of continued and enlarged spending. He took the New Deal into its fourth, or is it its fifth, phase. For the ideal of a budget in which income and outgo would balance, an ideal to which he had always hitherto paid lip service, he substituted the conception of large-scale public investment as a permanent national policy. This newest phase of the New Deal will probably be signalized and confirmed by a new system of Treasury bookeeping so as to separate the ordinary budget for current expenses from the budget for capital outlays.

The political position in Washington has very suddenly been transformed in that the President and the New Deal have regained the initiative which they lost in November, and the opposition is disorganized and demoralized. If the Administration succeeds, as it may, in forcing Congress to take a record vote on the Townsend plan, the plight of the opposition will be pitiable.

No Concrete Issue For A Party Fight

THIS REVERSAL of the political position during the past two weeks is almost certain to have very far-reaching consequences in the elections of next year. For with the collapse of organized resistance to public spending, with the demonstration that the Republicans, with few exceptions, will in fact vote to spend when they are put to the test, there is no very important concrete issue on which a factional or a party fight can be waged. Since it is axiomatic in politics that you cannot beat a horse with no horse, Mr. Roosevelt's political position is very greatly strengthened. Barring events that are now unforeseeable, he will dominate the next Democratic convention and he can create a discord in the Republican convention by confronting it with issues, measures, and acts on which the Republican politicians are greatly divided.

That the Republicans in Congress were headed for trouble has been increasingly evident to anyone who has observed them since they arrived in Washington last January. To those who realized the tremendous need of effective opposition, the spectacle of the Republicans as a body, certain individuals excepted, has been thoroughly depressing. They have misjudged the real situation just about completely, and their policy, such as it is, has been based on amateurish illusions.

Thus, they have based their oratorical attack against the spending policy on at least three illusions. The first was that national bankruptcy was near enough to frighten the voters. It is not. European experience shows that governments can spend a much larger proportion of the national income than we do, and carry on more or less indefinitely. The second was that the spending policy does not induce recovery. The fact is that enough spending does induce some recovery, and while morally and politically it is an exceedingly dangerous method, it does work. The third illusion was that the Republicans could declaim against spending in general without having to face particular issues with the pressure groups.

G. O. P. Has Shown Incompetent Acts

THESE THREE illusions put the Republicans in a position where they first prophesied disasters that were not happening, and then failed to take a stand to prevent the disasters they were prophesying. That is not very competent politics.

They then misinterpreted altogether the discontent which exists over the New Deal reforms. They imagined that this discontent signified the existence of strong opposition to the reforms themselves whereas, in fact, it arises principally out of discontent with the administration of the reforms, as in the case of WPA, or with the failure of the reforms, as in the case of agriculture, to achieve what was promised.

This has caused the Republicans to get themselves into a position where they seem to be opposed to the reforms, where they can be charged with being opposed to them, though they have not and will not propose the repeal or even the radical amendment of any of them. That is not competent politics.

Untenable Position In Foreign Relations

IN THE FIELD of foreign relations they have made their position equally untenable. Their cardinal mistake here has been to misjudge altogether the real gravity of the world situation, and to act, therefore, as if foreign policy were a domestic factional and partisan question. They have accused the President of magnifying the dangers of world war when as a matter of fact the danger has been and still is very, very real. They have represented his efforts, which have been by no means ineffective, to prevent a world war as an intrigue to entangle the United States in a world war.

The net result has been to diminish somewhat the influence of the United States, but politically the personal position of the President has been greatly strengthened. For as long as war is averted, a great mass of the people will recognize that he has played a part in averting it. If war comes, those who hampered his efforts to avert it, will be in a very uncomfortable position, whereas Mr. Rosevelt will be recognized as the man who foresaw the danger and prepared, as far as he was able, to meet it.

With the peace of the whole world teetering in the balance, it is not competent politics to say that the danger is imaginary and to tie the hands of a man who is trying to avert the danger.

New Deal Foes Are Disorganized

I DO NOT KNOW what conclusions are to be drawn from all this. This is a report of the facts as I see them. And the main fact is that the opposition to Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal is disorganized, which is regrettable, since effective opposition is indispensable under our form of government.

Colonial Society Meets in Historic Md. Statehouse

Annapolis, Md., May 26 (AP).—Delegates to the triennial national assembly of the General Society of Colonial Wars met in the aura of great deeds today.

The 150 delegates held an informal session in the historic old Maryland Statehouse Senate chamber, where Gen. eGorge Washington resigned his commission in the Continenetal Army after the Revolutionary War.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor alluded to the great ghosts of the colonial period in his brief address to the delegates in the old Senate chamber.

"It is conceivable and probable that ancestors of many of the delegates here today were here when Gen. Washington made his historic pronouncement," O'Conor said.

Classifying The Critics

A gambling man is Johnny Doe—
The reckless, plunging type;
He thinks U. S. traditions are
Not merely so much tripe;
He likes to look before he leaps
And see what lies ahead—
He is a gambler very vile,
So knock him in the head!

II

He keeps his books the simple way
That he was taught in school;
When spending more than he takes in
He thinks himself a fool;
He holds that two and two are four
And never nine or ten;
He is the vicious gambler type,
Take warning, fellow men!

III

He thinks that when he's in a hole
He ought to stop and think;
He doesn't say, "Let's spend some more
And we will never sink!"
He holds to lessons of the past—
He's shy of brand new ways—
A worthless gambling guy is he,
So scorn whate'er he says.

IV

He thinks when he is in the red
It's time to think things out;
Before he spends more he would know
Just what it's all about;
A budget to him is no joke—
He views it with respect—
A gambler wild, I hear you say,
And you are quite correct.

V

He'd try a little breathing spell—
Give industry a chance;
He hates a program to the tune
Of "On, boys, with the dance!"
He'd stick to a well-charted course
And shun the rocks and flats
The New Deal Democrats!

VI

He thinks when certain plans go bad
They ought not to be pressed;
By deficits enormous he
Is easily distressed;
He is the type of gambler who
Would like both ends to meet,
So rouse yourselves, Conservatives
And let's turn on the heat!

The Hash Issue

Hi.—I agree with you that too many types of hash are made today and that some standardization is needed. But I still think of the old gag about the cook replying to the query of how he made hash, "I don't make hash; it just accumulates."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Can't Decide Who Is Most Selfish—She or Her Husband; Their Love Is Dying; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am married, have one child and am employed. I am growing further and further apart from my husband, and something must be done to heal the breach. Prior to marriage, I supported my mother, now aged 47—who suffers from an ailment without, however, being an invalid; and who is further handicapped by the fact that she cannot speak English very well. I have a brother who was reared in another country by my father's parents and is, therefore, much prejudiced against mother, as she and father were divorced.

He has never contributed much to mother's support and makes it clear that he intends to do very little for her, except to give her a place to stay. But since his wife doesn't favor that idea, I am sure they would not make her comfortable. Mother lived with them a short while before my marriage, and the two women had terrific arguments. I am not blaming my sister-in-law solely, because my mother is quite selfish, domineering and very spoiled.

My husband and I married after five weeks' acquaintance, although I had explained to him that I had a mother to support. He made me feel that we could work it out satisfactorily and, much against my wishes, he insisted that mother come to live with us. He didn't think we could afford a separate establishment for her. I realize now that my first mistake was in consenting to this arrangement.

Our baby was born during the first year of marriage, and I had to stop working for nearly four months, during which time mother was a constant source of vexation because of her discontent, inability to adjust herself to living according to others' plans, and because she couldn't see her own kind of people very often . . . Well, we lived through it and I went back to work, chiefly to justify my mother's presence in the home and so that I could feel I was contributing to her support.

While I was in the hospital, my husband talked me into buying a home that was much too expensive for our income. I was incapable, at the time, of putting up much of an argument, and I hated to deny him something he especially wanted. Now I find myself in this home, paying off a heavy mortgage, etc., no closer to solving my mother's problem than before, and with all my salary absorbed by living expenses and household bills.

My husband insists that mother hasn't proven herself a deserving person, and that my brother (for whom I feel no love or admiration and who feels, I am sure, the same toward mother and me) should be forced to contribute to her support. We are in constant conflict on the subject; and yet my husband seems fairly happy and content most of the time, while I am miserable. I cannot endure my husband's happy presence and act as if there is nothing wrong, because I see him now as a very selfish and stubborn individual who wants what he wants regardless of my wishes.

Perhaps I am the one who is selfish. I wish someone could help me clarify the situation, because I am so mixed up that I don't know what is best and wise. There must be some happy medium; some compromise that we may reach. I don't want to break up my home and yet I cannot rest unless I know I am doing right by my husband, mother and baby. Thank you for any help you may be able to offer. E.

'Alloy of Selfishness

DEAR E.: Granted that your husband is "a selfish and stubborn individual," his may prove to be a realistically protective and even constructive type of selfishness, serving as valuable alloy to the malleable gold of your muddling sentimentality. Had your path never crossed his; or had he lacked the hardihood to persuade you into marriage somewhat against your judgment, while cheerily taking in his stride the problem which your dependent mother represents, it is possible—even probable—that you would never have known the experience of marriage and motherhood, which, with all its inevitable penalties, also has its profits and compensations.

The daughter who is overly-conscientious in her sense of responsibility toward a dependent parent must, in the majority of cases, be rescued from her buried-alive existence—if she is ever to be rescued, that is—by a man who is at once as strong-willed, selfish and insidiously domineering as that parent whose place he usurps. And when a woman must choose between the two masters of a parasitical parent, on the one hand, and a genially autocratic mate, on the other hand, I am convinced that the latter will prove, in the last analysis, to be the better selection.

The going will be difficult in either case, but the essential difference is recorded in the final harvest. In sacrificially serving an insatiably demanding parent, one is usually spending one's substance in a lost, or short-lived cause—laying up no store whatsoever against the future. But in serving a mate who is consistently animated by a lively concern for the social and material well being, present and future, of the partnership, one's sacrifices and efforts may be considered an investment, calculated to repay increasingly substantial dividends as the years unfurl.

Thus, while you resent the fact that today your salary is "absorbed by living expenses and household bills," I daresay the same situation prevailed when you were an overtly free agent, contributing to your mother's support. Only then you had neither husband nor child, nor a handsome home that was gradually being paid for by dint of collaborative effort. Before you married, too, you suffered your mother to live under your brother's roof (unhappy though she may have been there), thus indirectly compelling that contribution from him which your husband today defines as minimum justice, and at the same time tacitly accepting (even condoning) the seeming fact that some deprivation must be her portion.

While your husband may fall considerably short of sainthood's standards, I am of the opinion that he deserves more praise than censure for his doughty generalship in marriage. He isn't a slacker; he isn't a coward; he isn't a pessimist. He is a realist and something of a gambler. He has the vision and courage to chart bold, clean-cut and potentially fruitful plans, and he is (according to your story) a man of enviably happy nature, carrying with sunny temper a load that would quickly sour the disposition of a more craven or weaker spirit.

As for you: I don't think you are so selfish, essentially, as you are (a) chronically fatigued, since marriage; (b) sentimental and shortsighted, rather than realistic and clear-thinking; (c) inclined (perhaps as a result of maternal influence and example) to buck-passing, or blaming others for vicissitudes that are largely self-invited; and (d) not yet sufficiently mature to stand by your husband, in contradistinction to clinging to your mother, when the pressures of life bear painfully down. I imagine that deliberately or instinctively, she is contriving in subtle ways to poison your mind against him; that she is not a little responsible for your current antagonism toward him.

Since you give no evidence of being what we might call the "executive type" of person, and since your life-pattern has been complicated since childhood, it seems to me you have cause to be grateful that your husband is aggressive and managerial. I think you will do better to hang on to his coat tails than to drop by the wayside. And I think you should follow his lead, in reason, in working out the problem of your mother's maintenance. I think it will be best for everybody concerned if she is divorced from your establishment, as well as from your brother's. I think your brother should be required to assist you in supporting her (since his obligation to her is greater than your husband's) and that the humane compromise probably inheres in finding her lodgings among "her own kind of people."

How to Prevent Mold on Bread

The most successful method of preventing mold on bread is this: wrap the bread in fresh waxed paper and keep in the refrigerator. The low temperature of a good refrigerator will retard development of mold. In using this method in our laboratories we have found that bread will keep for five days in good condition.

It is always wise, of course, to buy a small loaf of bread if you eat bread only occasionally. Most bakeries today make a pound-size loaf that is especially suitable for small families.

Fat or Thin, Most Legs Need Exercise Stretching Best Aid to Reduction It Also Will Develop Pipe-Stems

WITH THE SEASON of rising temperatures and hemlines practically upon us, the girls who spend too much time indoors have their exercise cut out for them: legwork! Making legs over completely takes more than a few weeks, but 15 minutes a day can make you really eligible for the shorts you intend wearing.

If you are in doubt as to whether you need exercise, check up on your legs by the following table, which lists measurements for the medium frame:

HEIGHT	CALF	ANKLE
5 feet	12½ inches	7⅛ inches
5 feet 1 inch	12½ "	7⅛ "
5 feet 2 inches	12¾ "	7⅛ "
5 feet 3 inches	12¾ "	8 "
5 feet 4 inches	12¾ "	8 "
5 feet 5 inches	12¾ "	8 "
5 feet 6 inches	13 "	8⅛ "
5 feet 7 inches	13⅛ "	8⅛ "
5 feet 8 inches	13 "	8⅛ "

Flabby musculature shows up worse on the legs than on any other measurement. When the legs are too fat and the muscles soft, the legs look larger than they really are. And if the legs are thin and underexercised, they seem dangerously spindly. Now, you can't expect to have legs like Eleanor Powell or Ginger Rogers in a couple of months, but you can tighten the musculature and either trim down or build up the contours so that they are more presentable.

Legs that are fat and flabby benefit most from leg-stretching exercises, such as the following:

Sit on the floor with both legs straight out in front. Keep both knees perfectly straight and reach over with the hands, grasp the left foot and pull it up toward the chest. Return to floor and repeat with right leg. As the foot is pulled up, an extra stretch is given the calf muscles by pointing the heel.

Another way to stretch your legs is to practice the old bending exercise. If you are proud of your ability to reach over and touch your hands to the floor, by all means do it. Keep the knees perfectly straight and try to place the palms of the hands flat on the floor. Where it benefits you is in those muscles in the backs of the legs.

For stretching and contracting, which is needed by thin legs, try this one:

Squat down with the weight on the left heel, the right leg thrust straight out in front of you, heel on the floor. Hold on to something, if necessary, to keep your balance. Try to slide the right heel down on the floor as far as possible, curling the toes back, and giving the right leg muscles an added stretch at the same time that you contract the muscles of the left leg. Change sides and repeat ten times.

New Cookbook's Recipes Stress Time-Saving

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

AN ANSWER to the prayer of a hurry-up cook and the busy housewife on maid's day out is given in a practical, snappy and concise cookbook which was written for the purpose of economizing on time in the preparation of meals. Irma S. Rombauer has solved many problems in her new book, "Streamlined Cooking," just published by Bobbs-Merrill Co. This book will serve a multitude of purposes, for it is strictly up-to-date and full of delicious new recipes for the use of canned, packaged, and frosted foods, as well as fresh ones.

Tenderized ham is a food that is treated in an interesting manner by its use with pineapple and sweet potatoes.

Ham Cakes, Pineapple and Sweet Potatoes

Heat oven. Combine 2 cups minced or ground ham with 1-3 cup dry bread crumbs or ½ cup fresh crumbs, 2 eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt, and 1 teaspoon prepared mustard. Shape these ingredients into six cakes. Heat in a skillet 5 tablespoons shortening and saute in it, 6 slices canned pineapple, drained. Remove pineapple. Saute the ham cakes until they are brown. Remove them from the pan. Sprinkle the sweet potatoes with a dash of cloves and ¼ cup brown sugar. Caramelize the potatoes slowly in skillet. Grease an ovenproof plate. Place cakes on the pineapple slices. Arrange the sweet potatoes around them. Moisten with pineapple juice and reheat in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 10 minutes, or under a broiler. Serves six.

If canned sweet potatoes are used, cut 3 large ones into halves or use 6 small ones.

Awarding the Prize

President—We now come to the awarding of our annual prize to the member of our club who has performed the most noteworthy civic service during the year. I will turn the meeting over to our second vice president in charge of civics, Mrs. March.

Mrs. March—Madame President and Ladies: I am very happy to be here and I want to take just a few minutes to tell briefly of the aims and purposes of the civic work of our club . . .

(Editor's note—Readers desiring a full text of Mrs. March's speech may send self-addressed envelopes for same to this column.)

. . . and now in conclusion let me present to you, the chairman of the program for our civics section, Mrs. Gabler.

Mrs. Gabler—Madame Chairman and Ladies: I am very happy to stand before you on this momentous occasion and I want to take just a few minutes to give a brief resume of the work of the civics section during the last year . . .

(Editor's note—Readers desiring the full text of Mrs. Gabler's speech may send self-addressed envelopes for same to this column.)

. . . and now in conclusion, let me introduce to you the chairman of the civics section's committee on awards, Mrs. Quince.

Mrs. Quince—Madame Chairman and Ladies: I am indeed happy to be here and I think that it would be most appropriate at this time to say a few words on the aims and purposes of the annual prize that our section awards for civic service . . .

(Editor's note—Readers desiring full text of Mrs. Quince's remarks may send stamped self-addressed envelopes for same to this column.)

. . . and now in conclusion, let me introduce to you the chairman of the judges' committee for our annual prize award, Mrs. Preen.

Mrs. Preen—Madame Chairman and Ladies: I am indeed happy to stand before you at this moment, and I wish at this time to explain briefly our aims and purposes in selecting judges for this award . . .

(Editor's note—Readers desiring full text of Mrs. Preen's address may send stamped self-addressed envelopes for sambe to this column.)

. . . and now in conclusion let me introduce to you the chairman of judges, Mrs Chatt.

Mrs. Chatt—Madame Chairman and Ladies: I am indeed happy to come before you at this time and I wish first to explain briefly the aims and purposes considered by the judges in making this award . . .

(Editor's note—Readers desiring full text of Mrs. Chatt's demarks may obtain same by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope to this column.)

. . . and now we come to the climax of this important occasion. May I now introduce to you the distinguished chairman emeritus of our judges' committee who has been selected to make the award—Mrs. Horatio Spellmaster!

Mrs. Spellmaster—Madame Chairman and Ladies: I am indeed gratified beyond words to stand in your presence on this momentous occasion. Now I know you do not want to hear a speech by me at this time, but I do want to say just this much—that I think women are WONDERFUL! This assemblage today proves it. And now, in a very few minutes I want to discuss briefly the aims and purposes of womanhood in the 5,000 years that have just passed . . .

(Editor's note—Readers desiring complete, unabridged text of Mrs. Spellmaster's address may send stamped self-addressed envelopes for same to this column.)

. . . and now in conclusion may I beseech you in the name of the womanhood of America, in the name of the womanhood of the world, to enlist under the white banner of progress in the triumphant march up the golden stairway to the World of Tomorrow!"

(Thunderous applause)

President—The meeting now stands——

Mrs. Flint—Madame President, I rise to a point of order. The prize has not been awarded!

Fashion Art Self Taught

AN EXCITING CAREER—that of fashion artist. You'd love to do interesting drawings, sell them for good money!

But it seems so hard—you wouldn't know how to begin? Does it seem simpler when you know that professional artists draw their glamorous figures in easy steps, as we've illustrated?

If you have even a germ of talent, you can learn to draw fashion figures at home. With the aid of charts, instructions you learn how to progress from simple "visuals" to the finished drawing which wins the check!

In Step 1 you "construct" your figure. You draw horizontal and vertical lines, use them to determine the slant of the shoulders, the tilt of the face—to help locate the line of the brows, the waistline.

Then to make your "rough," as in Step 2. You sketch lightly from point to point, getting the general effect of the figure, the lines of dress or suit. With this "rough" to guide you, on to Step 3—the detailed, finished drawing.

You quickly learn how to render different fabrics, get the effect of patterns such as plaids with a few simple lines or brush strokes.

Carmen Miranda Makes Hit With New York Reporters

New York, May 26.

SOMETIMES I get a bit fed up with poking around the Hudson River piers, where the big boats come in from foreign parts I haven't visited since 1936. I was in London then. But occasionally something hot turns up, and life begins to grin instead of glower.

This happened a few days ago, when I was hanging around and getting in the way of the stewards and porters. A big skiff came in from South America (howya, good neighbors!) and who was on board but a very hot number named Carmen Miranda (at least that's the name she uses). This baby doll is Portugese by origin but Brazilian in fact and is going to sing and dance in a new Broadway show called "Streets of Paris." Is that an original hunch?

What attracted me, and 50 male reporters, to this Miranda was her high spirits and anxiety to please. Most stage shots come in with a long, dismal pan and a Garbo complex, but not our young friend Carmen. She posed for "cheese cake" for the cameramen—meaning pictures with the knees crossed and ample hosiery on display. Then she delighted the reporters with her English vocabulary, which consists of 20 words.

Well, that's pretty workable. In addition, the girl is a beauty, and on the ship's deck she did a few dance steps, shaking her red hair, which she admitted was "a little dyed."

Mrs. James Hughes Entertains Cabinet, Congressional Set

Navy Folk Turn Out for Macondrays' Garden Tea; Diplomats' Wives Are Among Guests of Senora de Guimaraes

Yesterday was one of the gayest days, socially speaking, of a very gay "little season." Several luncheons and a large tea kept society on the jump from early afternoon until nightfall.

Mrs. James Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes, of Delaware, was hostess to many ladies from the Congressional and Cabinet groups when she entertained at luncheon at the Woman's National Democratic Club. A similar party, only much smaller, was that held by Senora de Guimaraes, wife of the first secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, at her home in Foxhall road.

Many members of Capital society motored out yesterday afternoon to Seminary Hill, Alexandria, for the large tea given by Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray. This was something of a swan song for them, as Commander Macondray has been ordered to Charleston, S. C., and expects to leave next week. His clever wife, who is active in Junior League work here, will remain behind with the children until the epidemic of infantile paralysis now going on in the Southern city is over.

The Macondray tea was a garden affair, with mint juleps (a sure sign of approaching summer) a feature of the afternoon. Buffet tables, centered with "all the flowers from the garden," to quote the hostess, were set up on the lawn, and punch as well as juleps was served. Mrs. Macondray wore a trailing frock of white eyelet organdie, with a green velvet sash.

A highlight of the afternoon was a concert by a group of Negro spiritual singers, who entertained the guests as the latter strolled about the grounds or sat comfortably on grassy banks.

Many Notables At Garden Fete

Navy folk were much in evidence in the throng of several hundred. Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, wife of Commander Bryan, was particularly chic in a red and white print with a floppy hat. A blue and white polka dot ensemble was chosen by Mrs. William D. Brereton. Other Navy people, foreign and domestic, included the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Benech, the Naval Attache of the German Embassy and Frau Witthoeft; Capt. and Mrs. Alan Chantry and Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson.

Others seen enjoying the garden were Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, up from Warrenton for the party; Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, chic in a pink and wine colored frock with a hat to match; Mrs. Sims Snow, who has returned after a winter in California and New York and has taken an apartment at the Shoreham; Mrs. William T. Mann, Lieut. Donald MacDonald, Merritt Swift, Miss Betty Shouse, in a turquoise colored frock, and hatless, and many, many others.

Mrs. Garner Is Guest of Honor

Others in the company were Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mme. Ertegun, Mme. Oumansky, Mrs. Ralph William Close, Lady Marler, Mrs. Robert Brennan, Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Josh Lee, Mrs. H. H. Schwartz, Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, Mrs. William T. Byron, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Harry H. Huse, Mrs. Leslie Bissle, Mrs. John S. Littell, Mrs. Harry Blair, Mrs. Walter H. Wyatt, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial, Mrs. Joseph A. Murphy and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin.

Also there were Mrs. H. E. Stephenson, Mrs. Rixey Smith, Lady Jacoby, whose husband is consul at the Duchy of Luxembourg; Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax, Va.; Mrs. Onan Hydrick, Mrs. Ormond Arledge, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Mrs. Alva Brewer, Miss Patricia Brewer, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Franklin T. Schneider, Miss Anne Graham and Mrs. Carl Scull, of Dover, Del., and Mrs. John Patrick Martin, of Camden, Del., daughter of the hostess; Mrs. Charles duPont Ridgely, of Camden; Miss Laura Belle Wyatt.

At each guest's place was a corsage of pink roses similar to those used in the centerpiece.

Party for Eight Pleasant Event

Eight women gathered around the luncheon table of Senora de Guimaraes, who had chosen as a centerpiece a bowl of pink snapdragons and blue delphinium.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles Courtney, wife of Rear Admiral Courtney, who will leave this summer for a stay at her Long Island home before joining her husband in France, for which he will sail in July; blond Mrs. Victor Mallet, wife of the Counselor of the British Embassy, who wore a navy blue frock with a white straw hat; Baronne Baeyens, whose husband is Second Secretary of the French Embassy—she was smart in a green and navy blue print, with a turban of the latter shade; Mrs. Charles Spruks, who topped off her black suit with a white hat; Mrs. Laurence Duggan, who was in beige and green; Senora de Araujo, wife of the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy.

Italian Envoy Honor Guest at Fotitch Dinner

The Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, who so far has been guest of honor at a dinner every night this week, was feted again Thursday evening when the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch entertained in his honor.

Others present were the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, Senator and Mrs. William King, Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, the Counselor of the Greek legation and Mme. Depasta, the Naval Attache of the Italian embassy, the Marquis of Sant 'Orsola, the secretary of the German embassy and Frau Blankenhorn, George T. Summerlin, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Miss Harriet Winslow and Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Hinton.

Daughter Visits Mrs. R. M. Danford

Major General Robert M. Danford, Chief of Field Artillery, who left Washington last Wednesday for an inspection trip of Army posts throughout the country, will be away for a month.

Meanwhile visiting Mrs. Danford at their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street are their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs James Wells, and their two-year-old son Teddy. Lieut. and Mrs. Wells will remain in Washington until the middle of July, when they will leave for Fort Benning, Georgia, where Lieut. Wells will be a student at the Infantry School next fall.

Byrons Take Beach Cottage

Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron, of Maryland, have taken a cottage at Rehoboth Beach for the summer and will move in July 1.

Representative and Mrs. Byron were hosts at a dinner on Wednesday evening at the house in Kalorama road which they lease from the United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick Sterling. The Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, was guest of honor, and others present included Senator and Mrs. James Hughes, Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Russell Train, Mrs. Goodloe Edgar, mother of the hostess; Dr. and Mrs. William Morgan, and Mr. and Mrs. David Byron.

Miss Shanks and Mr. Howard Are Married in Cathedral

MR. AND MRS. BUSEY HOWARD, JR.

Bishop Freeman Performs Ceremony; Couple Will Make Home in Capital After Trip to New York Fair

The Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Lee Shanks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Shanks, and Busey Hunt Howard, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Howard, of Washington. The Bishop of Washington, James E. Freeman, officiated at the 4 o'clock ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of bridal white taffeta faille, fashioned with a tight bodice, full bouffant skirt and long train. Her long tulle veil was caught to her hair with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias.

Mrs. William Shannon was the matron of honor and wore a gown of blue taffeta with a matching bouffant marquisette redingote. She wore a picture hat of leghorn with blue ribbon trim and carried an arm bouquet of garden flowers.

Miss Marie Thompson, of Hightstown, N. J., was the maid of honor and her costume matched that of the matron of honor.

Three Sisters Are Bridesmaids

There were three sisters among the six bridesmaids, Miss Sally Archer, Miss Frances Archer and Miss Ethel Archer. Others were Miss Agnes du Fief, cousin of the bride; Miss Helen Krauss, and Miss Claire Porter. They were all gowned in yellow taffeta with marquisette redingotes, and their leghorn picture hats and arm bouquets matched those of the maid and matron of honor.

William E. Shannon, 2d, was the best man and the ushers were John C. Holzberg, Charlton E. Graves, 2d, Wilbur R. Garrett, Allen M. Warfield, D. Page Cornwell, Lowell E. Bradford and C. Arthur Slater, jr.

Immediately after the ceremony there was a garden party reception at the home of the bride's parents in Wesley Heights. The bride's mother was gowned in gray lace with dubonnet hat and accessories and wore a corsage of orchids. The mother of the bridegroom wore dusty pink embroidered net with a blue hat and accessories and a corsage of sweetheart roses.

To Make Home In Capital

When the couple left for their wedding journey, the bride was wearing a cactus green tailored silk suit with a white hat and matching accessories and a corsage of gardenias. After a tour of the New York World's Fair they will make their home at the Woodley Apartments in Washington.

The bride is a graduate of Randolph Macon Women's College at Lynchburg, Va., and Mr. Howard was graduated from Norwich University.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Norman Carpenter, of Baltimore, a cousin of the bride's father; Mrs. John R. Shelter, of Philadelphia, and Alonzo Chancellor, also of Philadelphia.

Miss Bumpus Becomes Bride

At noon Thursday in the Memorial United Brethren Church, Miss Mary E. Bumpus, daughter of Mrs. Frank M. Bumpus and the late Mr. Bumpus, of Washington, became the bride of Gordon Neuman Freeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Freeman, of Pine Bluff, Ark. The Rev. Simpson B. Daugherty officiated.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Harry Hoffman, the bride was gowned in a navy blue ensemble, and wore a matching hat with a starched white lace brim, white gloves and navy shoes. Her corsage was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Doris White, the maid of honor and only attendant, wore a green crepe costume with toast accessories and a tea rose corsage. Doyle White was the best man and there were no ushers.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the Collingwood Inn. After a wedding trip to Florida and Havana, the couple will make their home in Pine Bluff, where Mr. Freeman and his father publish the oldest paper in Arkansas, the Pinebluff Commercial. Mr. Freeman is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Walter Lippmanns Entertain for Ruth Schmuck

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann entertained last evening at a buffet supper in their Georgetown home in honor of their house guest, Miss Ruth Schmuck.

Guests included Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Commander and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, Commander and Mrs. Charles A. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Frank West, Miss Frances Sortwell, the First Secretary of the French Embassy, Jacques Dumaine; John Hay and Archibald McComb.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. AND MRS. Morris G. (Lefty) Flynn, of Tryon, N. C., have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. B. Cushman for several days at the Cushman home, Windsor, near Upperville, Va. Mrs. Flynn was formerly Miss Nora Langhorne, of Charlottesville and Richmond, youngest sister of Lady Nancy Astor, and one of the five famous Langhorne girls of Virginia.

The Flynns are going on to Exeter, Andover, Mass., to visit his son, who is there at school. They will visit Williamsburg, Richmond and other places in Virginia upon their return trip and again will stay with the Cushmans

ON THE calendar today are several sports events in Virginia. First there is the Blue Ridge Hunt Show in the grove of Carter Hall, estate of Gerard B. Lambert, at Millwood. It will begin at 10 a. m. and last all day. Mrs. George Burwell and her son, George Burwell, jr., are entertaining at a buffet luncheon during the recess hour, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerard B. Lambert will be hosts following the show.

THE GYMKHANA races at Stuyvesant Horse Show Grounds, Warrenton, also begin this morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. William B. Street is entertaining at a cocktail party afterward. One of the largest parties tonight will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Larrabee at their home, Oak Wood.

The Deep Run Horse Show, to be held in Richmond today and tomorrow, will draw a large crowd of sportsmen from many parts of the State. The event is being held with the co-operation of the Junior League of Richmond.

AMONG THE MANY showing is Miss Betty Couzens, of Washington, with Repulsion, hunter champion of the show last season. George Benoit, of Fredericksburg, will show Sport Marvel; Mrs. Howard Butz's sensational jumper, Hobo, will perform. Also to be seen will be Mrs. George Watts Hill's Lucky Buck, hunter champion of the recent Hampton show, and Bo-Bend, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, of Keswick.

FROM THE SOCIAL angle, the week-end in Richmond promises to be very gay. Oliver Jackson Sands, secretary of the show, gave a buffet supper in honor of his house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith and Miss Willitt Leach, of Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Durham, N. C., and Miss Eloise Pujo Molter, of New Orleans. Tonight a buffet supper will be served on the club grounds by the ladies committee in honor of out-of-town exhibitors.

JUDGES for the show are Raymond T. Norton, of Washinton; Capt. T. Fred Marsman, of Jacobs Hill Hunt, West Warwick, R. I., and Harry W. Spratley, of Elberon, Va. A luncheon will be given by Capt. and Mrs. William Murray Forbes Bayliss at their place, Kenwyn, tomorrow in honor of the judges.

TURNER WILTSHIRE, of Middleburg, has just returned from Atlantic City, where he judged the horse show there. Miss Mildred Gaines, of Warrenton judged at the recent Fredericksburg show.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin V. Baird have issued invitations to a party tomorrow afternoon.

A.A.U.W. Hears Talk on Art

Saint-Gaudens, father of American sculpture, is a forgotten man in Washington, William Marks Simpson, director of the Rinehart School of Sculpture at the Maryland Institute in Baltimore, told members of the Art Appreciation Group of the A. A. U. W. Thursday night.

The statue to which art students make a beaten path in Rock Creek Cemetery is the seated figure with a veiled face which is a memorial to the wife of James Truslow Adams. It is one of the greatest works of art in the Capital, he said.

Efforts to interpret the figure as Grief, Sorrow, Time or Death are useless, he said. "It is the artist's soul, and that makes it great. It speaks for itself."

Miss Louise L. Newell, chairman of the art group, presided at the dinner and introduced the speaker and also Mrs. Simpson, who was a guest of honor.

Estigarribia Gives Dinner

The retiring Minister of Paraguay, Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia, who is President-elect of Paraguay, entertained at dinner at the Shoreham blue room Thursday evening in honor of the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla. Gen. Estigarribia is leaving Washington June 10 to assume his new duties.

Others in the company included the Military Attache of the Bolivian Legation and Senora de Acosta, and the Counselor of the Paraguayan Legation and Senora de Insfran.

The Rumanian Minister and tions to a reception on Tuesday, June 8, celebrating the anniversary of the accession to the throne of His Majesty, King Carol II.

Witness Calls Health Bill A Fascist Idea

A. M. A. President Admits He Contributed o Anti-Roosevelt Body

By Gerald G. Gross

Examination of a New York City surgeon by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, in which the witness admitted he contributed to an anti-Roosevelt organization, highlighted the closing of testimony yesterday by American Medical Association heads on the Wagner health bill.

It had been expected Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the association's works before the SenateSHRDLUe Journal, would furnish the fireworks before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

But it was his predecessor as a witness, Dr. Gordon Heyd, professor of surgery in the New York Postgraduate School of Medicine and former president of A. M. A., who noticeably irked Wagner with his charge that "this bill is an implement of the totalitarian state."

The Senator asked him if he had anything to do with the national committee to uphold constitutional government. When the witness gave an affirmative reply, Wagner read a copy of a telegram, signed by Dr. Heyd, which condemned the proposed legislation for a Nation-wide health program. The witness said he did not know how many persons had received the telegram, explaining he had given the "constitutional government committee" permission to use his name under the form telegram.

Says It Would "Freeze Medicine"

Dr. Heyd said he is a contributor to the organization as a citizen, not as a doctor.

He charged that the health measure, if enacted, would "freeze medical science and make it stagnant," would provide a "vast bureaucracy," prolong illness rather than reduce its duration, and decrease the efficiency of medical schools.

Dr. Fishbein criticized the Federal Government's existing medical services, except Army and Navy, as being unco-ordinated and overlapping, and deplored the "relentless, persistent and almost ruthless drive" to have the Wagner bill enacted.

In response to questioning by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, Dr. Fishbein said that the only voices heard in support of the health bill at the A. M. A. convention in St. Louis last week belonged to "the State health officer group." The association's house of delegates adopted a committee report rejecting the Wagner measure.

The Journal editor charged that the name, Interdepartmental Committee to Co-ordinate Health and Welfare ctAivities, is a misnomer because, he said, it is doing nothing to co-ordinate medical services of the Children's Bureau, Treasury, Agriculture, Commerce and Interior departments and other executive agencies.

It was this committee, appointed by President Roosevelt, which sponsored the National Health Conference held here last July which, in turn, led to drafting of the national health bill

Calls It "A White Elephant"

A hospital for crippled children recently erected in Hot Springs, N. Mex., with $2,000,000 in State and Federal funds has become "a white elephant," Dr. Fishbein charged, because there are not enough physically handicapped youngstres in the area to populate it.

Discounting New Deal statistics on the extent of medical need throughout the country, Dr. Fishbein said flatly that 10 per cent of the population wants no medical careand won't accept it under any circumstances, whether it is paid for or free.

A milder critic of the bill was Dr. Charles C. Lund, chairman of the legislative committee of the Massachusetts Medical Society, he suggested the Federal Government unify all of its medical services, except Army and Navy; name representatives to advisory councils to work with State medical officers; expand activities only where and when the needy is proved, and avoid competition with existing private hospitals.

The measure was supported by Dr. A. T. McCormick, Kentucky State health commissioner, who suggested, however, that the fund-allocating machinery be simplified, that new hospitals not be constructed if there are empty beds in existing institutions and that a preamble be added giving assurance against any Federal aim to regiment physicians or socialize medicine.

H. H. McCormick's Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for Hugh Holmes McCormick will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Grace Episcopal Church Cemetery, Berryville, Va., with the Rev. Robert B. Nelson, of Winchester, officiating. McCormick died Thursday at the Chastleton Hotel in Washington.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edith Allen McCormick, of Charles Town, W. Va.; two sons, a daughter and six sisters. The children are Hugh Holmes McCormick, jr., of Martinsburg, W. Va.; Robert Owen McCormick, of Charles Town, and Miss Edith McCormick.

Hilliburton Search Futile Thus Far

Capt. Richard K. Turner, of the Navy cruiser Astoria, radioed the Navy Department yesterday that his search of the mid-Pacific for Richard Halliburton's junk Seadragon and its crew of 14 had turned up no sig nof the writer-adventurer.

Paul Mooney, son of Mrs. James Mooney, of 2350 University place northwest, and a former Central High and Catholic University student, sailed with Halliburton from China aboard the 75-foot craft. Bound from China to San Francisco, they were last heard from March 24. Capt. Turner said he would continue the search.

Barkley Assailed For Trip to Derby

had finished. Pointing out that "the Senate has been in adjournment on most Saturdays during the session," Barkley observed, "I care nothing for the ungenerous remarks made by my friend that on one of those Saturdays I happened to go to Kentucky to witness the Kentucky Derby."

Barkley suggested that Neely had gone to his home in West Virginia when the Senate was not in session, too.

Angered by failure to obtain action on the bill, Neely asked the Senate to vote on a motion to take the measure out of the hands of the Interstate Commerce Committee. He eventually withdrew his motion, however, when Chairman Wheeler promised a committee vote on the bill not later than Wednesday.

"A blindfolded, crippled snail on crutches could have gone farther in six seconds than this bill has gone in six months," charged the West Virginian.

Purposes Outlined

Opposed by "the moving picture trust," the bill is "designed to prohibit two of the most monstrous trade practices that have ever cursed the American people," Neely asserted.

He said that discussions of the measure began 11 years ago and the bill finally passed the Senate last year, but died in the House. Neely declared that Barkley at this session of Congress insisted on new hearings, although several sets of hearings have been held on the same subject in the past.

The hearings were concluded over a month ago, Neely said, "and I am now asking the Senate to give me a chance to drag, pull, haul or shake this bill out of the sub-committee."

Barkley and Wheeler both explained that Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the sub-committee, had previously been occupied with the agriculture bill and now was absent from Washington because of the illness of his wife.

The majority leader explained he was unable to attend hearings on the block-booking bill because of the press of other committee duties.

"Ever since I assumed the position which I now occupy in the Senate, I have seriously contemplated asking to be relieved from service on all committees," he said.

figured in the testimony and police transcripts of conversations between Faulkner and officials of the Maryland-Virginia Association.

Faulkner was alleged to have boasted that he obtained secret and advance information from the subcommittee's office before it was developed at the hearings. Faulkner denied the allegation but admitted he had recommended the girl's appointment.

Chairman Bates, in his letter of acceptance, said: "I regret very much the circumstances which necessitated your resignation."

Terms More Rigid

Derrick was under cross-examination by Darr throughout the day. Darr developed that Derrick had submitted a proposed contract to Embassy-Fairfax last month in which the conditions were more rigid than the terms of co-operating dairies which now have contracts.

Later Burroughs brought out the statement from Derrick that when the contract was submitted it was intended to "close the door" to further negotiations. Derrick stated that he had become convinced the dairy officials were not willing to operate in a legitimate manner.

Over Derrick's objections, Darr had placed in the record the names of the seven private detectives employed by the association to trace "bootleg" cream. Derrick objected that the usefulness of the men would be diminished if their identities were known. Chairman Bates ruled however, that Darr's question should be answered.

Sarcasm Exchanged

Frequently throughout the cross-examination Darr and Derrick exchanged caustic comments.

Darr charged that Derrick had never tried to find any other dairy, except Embassy-Fairfax "bootlegging," and Derrick replied that he "would sock a co-operating distributor as quickly as an independent."

Darr brought out that 23.2 per cent of the milk sold in the Washington market by the producers' association goes into the surplus, or manufacturing market. This amounts to 14,710 gallons a day or 5,368,990 gallons a year. It is this milk which cannot be sold by the distributors and is separated into cream and skimmed milk, the cream going back to the association and the skimmed milk being retained by the dairy as a service fee.

When Darr suggested that the surplus milk might be sold at special depots to relief recipients, Derrick recalled that an attempt was made to sell cheaper milk in Washington during the depression but that "the poor people would buy it."

Derrick said he would be willing to support such a proposition, providing it was under strict Government supervision and the sales were restricted to persons on relief.

In discussing reduced prices for relief milk, Derrick remarked that he didn't see why farmers of Maryland and Virginia should bear the District's relief load.

"If I were as uncharitable to you as you are to me," said Darr, "I might say you have no concern for the poor people of Washington."

"You know that's not true," Derrick snapped.

Questioned about the difference in the retail price of milk in Baltimore, where the consumer pays 13 cents a quart, and Washington, Derrick pointed out that Baltimore's raw milk has an average of 65,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter as compared with the 18,000 average in the District.

Baltimoreans "More Rugged"

"Do you think that the health of the Baltimoreans is endangered by the milk they drink?" Darr asked.

"The people in Baltimore are of a more rugged type than the residents of Washington," said Derrick, "because of the industrial work they do."

Darr and Derrick became embroiled in statistical juggling over the cost, to the consumers of the premiums paid for high grade milk under the health department's rating system. Darr figured that consumers paid $700,000 a year because of the reduction in bacteria from 325,000 to 18,000 in raw milk or 24,000 to 7,000 since 1924.

Derrick put his own accountant to work with a pencil and announced proudly that the increased price to the producer was only $144,000 a year.

Price Called Unjustified

Representative Gross, while saying that milk could be transported hundreds of miles with safety, if properly refrigerated, told the subcommittee that the millions of dollars local producers have invested in plant equipment would be lost if the District market was opened to Western producers who have not had to comply with such strict health regulations.

At the same time he insisted that the 14-cent retail price for milk in Washington could not be justified. The milk could be sold for 10 to 12 cents a quart, he said, without any reduction in the price paid the farmer.

Whiteford interjected a question as to how much Gross received for his milk on the Newark market, and brought out the fact that he gets $2 less per 100 pounds than do Maryland and Virginia producers.

Figures on Profit

Replying to assertions by Gross that the 6½-cent spread on a quart of milk between what the distributor pays and receives for a quart of milk, Whiteford said the net profit of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy was less than one-third of a cent. On 14-cent milk delivered at the home, he said, it is even less.

"Even when we deliver the milk, cheese and butter to a customer," he added, "our profit is one-fifth of a cent a day or 75 cents a year."

Cream Makes Money

More than half of the dairy's profits come, Whiteford said, from the sale of cream.

Gross expressed the opinion that too much stress is laid nowadays on the type of barn and equipment required for a dairy producer.

"A rich producer with a very fine barn may have poor, cheap cows, irresponsible help, and merely be trying to cut down his income tax," he said. "On the other hand a small farmer with a little barn and a dozen cows may turn out far better milk."

One in 59 Frets As Va. Income Tax Deadline Nears

Richmond, Va., May 26 (AP).—The State Department of Taxation reminded the taxpayers today their returns must be filed by next Thursday to escape penalties, but comparatively few Virginians will pay any attention to the warning.

The reason—only one in every 59 residents filed returns last year, and the proportion is expected to remain the same in the 1939 returns, which are based on 1938 income.

Unmarried persons with a gross income of more than $1,000 must file returns.

Priest Says Auto Injured Arms, Sues for $25,000

The use of his arms in his priestly functions was valued at $25,000 by the Rev. Joseph J. Kelly in a suit filed in District Court.

Father Kelly, pastor of the Church of the Holy Redeemer, 210 New York avenue northwest, blamed Walter H. Clements, of 208 Randolph place northwest, for an automobile accident January 26, which he said permanently injured both his arms.

Attorneys Simon F. McHugh and James P. Donovan filed the action, which said the priest was struck at Seventh street and Florida avenue.

15,000 Jam Annapolis as Gaiety Starts

Sweet Briar Girl Named for Coveted June Week Kiss At Naval Academy

Annapolis, May 26.—Seven days of solemn ceremony and gay celebration began today as historic June Week graduation ceremonies got under way at the Naval Academy.

Against a backdrop compact of breeze-tossed greenery, the sapphire Severn and the gray facades of the Academy buildings, 2,400 midshipmn and nearly that many sweethearts, and parents, relatives and tourists numbering 15,000 began the colorful annual ritual that had its beginning almost a century ago.

Finals of the Quarterdeck Society public speaking contest and the officers' ball were the only formal events scheduled for today as June Week officially opened, but the town was thronged for the full program of sports and ceremonials that starts at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Roads, Rails Crowded

Extra cars were run on the interurban railway into Annapolis, each jampacked with trunk-and-bag-laden debutantes, thrilled and twittering. One special train carried gray-clad cadet athletes from West Point, who will clash with Navy color-bearers in golf, tennis and lacrosse tomorrow to close the spring sports season.

Roads into Annapolis from Baltimore and Washington were lined with crawling cars carrying licenses from all the 48 States.

Scheduled to arrive was the "most envied girl in the United States," Miss Frances Norfleet Moses, of Little Rock, Ark.

The president of the Junior Class at Sweet Briar College, Va., was chosen as color girl of the regiment by Midshipman Ben Jarvis, of Ferda, Ark., who won the right to name his "OAO"—one and only, in Navy jargon—when his company won the interregimental drill.

Climax on Thursday

The gaiety of June week, to be climaxed Thursday when more than 500 midshipmen graduate into commissions as ensigns in the fighting fleet, will be in contrast to the grave solemnity of memorial services which dot the week-long program.

The class of 1921, most of them new lieutenants commander, will add the names of four shipmates who died in service in the past 12 months to their memorial plaque tomorrow. The memory of Roger S. Ransehousen, Thomas E. Zellers, Henry A. Brandenburger and Harlow M. Pino will be honored by the two-and-a-half stripers who were graduated during June week 18 years ago.

The Naval Academy museum, just completed to house the trophies brought back from the seven seas by sailormen since the time of John Paul Jones, will be formally opened by Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, academy superintendent.

Alumni Gather

Later in the afternoon, officers of the fleet, from admirals down to ensigns recently graduated, will gather for the annual alumni luncheon. It is the yearly homecoming of the men who were long ago or only lately midshipmen.

An officers' hop and the regimental ball for midshipmen will conclude the day's program tomorrow night. The baccalaureate sermon Sunday will highlight the third day of the June week ceremonial.

45 Missionary College Seniors To Get Diplomas

The Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park, Md., will graduate 45, largest class in its history, at 8 p. m. tomorrow in a special pavilion at Flower and Maple avenues.

Dr. Lynn H. Wood, of the Theological Seminary, will give the commencement address. Dr. Benjamin George Wilkinson, president of the college, will award the diplomas.

The graduation ceremony will follow a campus program opening at 10 a. m. tomorrow with a parade.

Alumni meetings, drills and musical programs will be held during the afternoon. Baccalaureate services will be held at 10:45 a. m. today, and a musical recital at 8 p. m.

Ocean City Plans Improved Streets

Ocean City, Md., May 26 (AP).—City officials had $10,000 in the town cash drawer today and widened their program of municipal improvements with plans for better streets and completion of a sewage disposal system.

The money was raised from a bond issue, sold to Stein Bros. & Boyce, of Baltimore.

Surfacing of the new beach highway between Ocean City and Rehoboth Beach, Del., will begin June 2 and is expected to be completed early in July.

D. C. Police Testify in Defense Of Kite in Rum Fraud Case

5 Colleagues Attest to Good Reputation Of Suspended Officer Being Tried On Distillery Tax Charge

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 26.—Testimony was completed today in the trial of Lester V. Kite, 64; his son, Melvin Kite, 38, suspended Washington policeman, and Charles Good, 37, charged with attempting to defraud the Government of taxes in the operation of a legal distillery.

Five Washington policemen took the stand today to testify to the good reputation of Melvin Kite.

Police Capt. George M. Little, Sergt. George C. Deyho, Detectives Walter D. Perry and Charles C. Carver and Officer William McEwen testified in behalf of the younger Kite, who has been under suspension from the Metropolitan Police Force of Washington since his indictment in Danville in March. Edward O'Connor, a Washington battalion fire chief, also testified as to the general reputation of Kite.

Arguments will be completed tomorrow by defense and Government attorneys. Federal District Court Judge John Paul gave brief instructions to the jury today and outlined the six counts included in the indictments against the three men. Assistant United States Attorney Howard Filmer, and Defense Attorney Everett will present arguments this afternoon.

In his brief instructions and summation of the evidence, Judge Paul called attention to the two counts charging operation of a legal distillery with intent to defraud the Government of taxes and four counts charging removal and concealing of untaxed liquor.

Judge Paul told the jury that the same verdict did not necessarily have to apply to all three defendants.

The younger Kite took the stand as the first defense witness and testified that he had no interest in the L. V. Kite fruit distillery at Stanley in Page County.

Md. Fire Destroys 2 Factories, Perils Community Hall

Mardela Springs, Md., May 26 (AP). The Mardela Truck Body Works and an adjoining shirt factory were razed today by a fire that threatened the community hall before firemen from four towns brought it under control.

Twelve men in the Mardela Body Works fled the building when the oil coating of an overheated engine caught fire and spread flames over the rear of the body plant.

The shirt factory was idle. All equipment in it was destroyed. The eaves of the brick and slate community hall were charred before firemen from Sharptown, Vienna, Mardela and Hebron finally extinguished the flames.

100 Chickens and Takoma Park In Stalemate Over Ouster

2 Expeditions to Harry Dodge's Property Following Complaints of Neighbors Come to Nought; Police Chief Told to Get Off

Harry Dodge, of 316 Burch avenue, Takoma Park, and his 100 chickens, have the town government temporarily at bay. It's the town's move in an effort to get rid of the chickens, and the town fathers haven't yet decided what to do.

Two expeditions have been made to the Dodge property, following complaints by neighbors about presence of the chickens. Neither came to anything, and now Dodge declares he will not permit anyone on the place without a court order.

About three weeks ago, Chief of Police Duehring said yesterday, Dr. G. Burton Queen, medical officer, was sent to the property, to see whether sanitary regulations could be invoked. Dr. Queen could not find any menace to health.

Later Duehring and Philip C. Huck, the latter chairman of the health committee, organized an expedition. As reported by Duehring, it amounted to:

Dodge: "What are you doing on my property?"

Duehring: "We came to inspect your chicken house."

Dodge: "What do you know about chickens?"

Duehring (a watchmaker): "Nothing."

Dodge: "Then get off my property."

Girl, 11, Kills Brother, 4, and Shoots Herself

Barbourville, Ky., May 26 (AP).—Sheriff R. C. Partin said Elsie Higgins, 11, fatally shot her 4-year-old brother, Joe, then fired four shots into her own breast at their home at Bailey Switch, 4 miles from here.

The little girl was brought to a hospital here. Physicians said her wounds probably would prove fatal.

1 Dead as Flood Hits Southwest Va.

Lebanon, Va., May 26 (AP).—Residents of this Russell County section re-established normal communication today with the outside world after flood waters from sudden rains drowned an aged woman, swept away several homes and halted highway traffic.

Rolling down the bed of Cedar Creek and its tributaries west of here, the high water caused heaviest damage at Bolton.

Mrs. Cleve Statzer, 83, was drowned while trying to make her way from her flood-surrounded home at Bolton and Mrs. Ida Sullivan, 70, received a leg fracture while being rescued from her home about 2 miles west of here.

Year's Deficit of $3,005,014 Faced by Md. Roads' Board

Fiscal Overdraft Laid to Expanded Construction Program; Surplus Gas Tax to Clear Half of Debt

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 26.—The State roads commission faces a deficit of approximately $3,005,014 in its construction fund at the end of this fiscal year, Commission Auditor William A. Codd reported today.

Codd said about half of the overdraft—$1,509,000—could be cleared up promptly September 30 by application of certain surplus gasoline tax revenue, but that the remainder probably would be carried on commission books until early in 1941.

Construction funds are for major State highway construction projects, he explained. Since 1937, construction costs have exceeded anticipated income as a result of expanded building programs launched by the commission, Codd said.

To balance the overdraft, the commission must set aside excess revenue from the one-half cent grade crossing elimination tax.

Net result of the financing, after half of the deficit is paid up September 30, would be a loss of $1,500,000 in anticipated income for major highway work during 1940-41.

At the end of 1940, an additional $1,100,000 in surplus gasoline taxes will be applied to the overdraft, leaving approximately $400,000 to be wiped out in the early months of 1941.

Largest item in a dozen construction accounts expected to show red when the 1939 books are closed is $725,000 the State had to put up to obtain its $2,061,000 share of Federal grade crossing elimination funds.

He estimated the construction fund would total $5,700,000 for the 1940 fiscal year, beginning October 1, and $5,800,000 for the 1941 fiscal period. Most of the overdraft must be paid out of 1940 funds.

Area Parleys Set At Waynesboro And Strasburg

Richmond, Va., May 26 (AP).—The League of Virginia Municipalities has announced the ninth and tenth of a series of regional meetings for May 31 at Waynesboro, and June 1 at Strasburg.

Frank Switzer, Harrisonburg councilman, will preside at the Waynesboro session and J. Frank Forsythe, jr., Mayor of Front Royal, at the Stratford meeting.

Seth Burnley Charlottesville city manager and president of the league, is expected to attend the two conferences at which regulation of fire escapes, elevators and boilers and recent court decisions affecting municipalities will be discussed.

A round table on general municipal problems will be conducted at Waynesboro by George A. Cottrell, Mayor of Staunton, and at Strasburg by J. P. Harpino, Mayor of Broadway.

Va. Boy Stricken With Spotted Fever

Charlottesville, May 26 (AP).—The second known case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever this year in Virginia was reported today at University Hospital.

Phillip Barkesdale, jr., 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Barksdale, of Afton, Nelson County, is the victim of the disease caused by the bite of an infected tick. He was admitted to the hospital here Sunday. An attending physician said he thinks the boy will recover.

The other case was reported recently from Fairfax County.

Six Given Jail Terms On Illegal Still Charge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 26.—Six men charged with unlawful possession of an unlicensed still were sentenced to jail for six months and fined $100 each by Trial Justice George F. Conway at Bowling Green yesterday.

The men were Albert T. Moss, of Gum Springs; Russell Woolridge, of Granite; Bernard Lane, Joseph Smith, James Smith, of Midlothian and Richard Waller, of Welchs.

3 Drownings Reported As W. Va. Swelters

Charleston, W. Va., May 26 (AP).—Three drownings were reported in West Virginia yesterday as hundreds went swimming to escape the 90-degree heat.

The dead were Zelma Pauline Collins, 15, drowned near Charleston; Harold Harvey, 13, colored, drowned at Wheeling and Hilda Coplin, 20, who died in the Buckhannon River near Clarksburg.

Va. Lions Favor 'Carry Me Back—' As State Song

Roanoke, Va., May 26 (AP).—Virginia Lions found themselves stretched squarely across the horns of a dilemma today as they sought to reach a solution of the problem of dividing the office of district governor, but they were in complete accord on the selection of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" as the State song and the pushing of plans among Virginia Lions to erect a memorial to its composer, James Bland, colored minstrel of the nineteenth century.

For almost three hours today the about 500 Lions attending the sixteenth annual convention of the twenty-fourth district here debated heatedly the dividing of the responsibilities of the present single district governor among two joint governors.

Proponents of the plan pointed out that the present 54 clubs were too widely scattered to be serviced as they should be by one district governor.

Former Soldier Accused of Attack By District Girl

James Edward Gibson, 34, former soldier, of Fort Myer Heights, Va., was held in $50,000 bond for the Federal grand jury yesterday in Alexandria on a charge of criminally assaulting a 20-year-old Washington telephone operator He pleaded not guilty.

The girl told United States Commissioner Monroe that Gibson posed as a WPA surveyor, and offered her a job as secretary. She testified she met him May 11 in a restaurant at Rosslyn, Va., and that they went down to the Virginia side of the Potomac between the Key and Memorial bridges.

She testified Gibson threatened to kill her when she resisted him. He was arrested the next day.

Carnival Woman Freed In Fatal Va. Shooting

Charlottesville, Va., Ma y26 (AP). Judge A. D. Dabney in corporation court today dismissed charges against Sally Casey, carnival concession employe, after Commonwealth's Attorney L. W. Wood and Police Chief Greaver said they did not think they could make a case against her.

She was charged with fatally shooting Jack Snider, another concession employe, on May 17, at a local hotel. Arraigned before Judge Dabney, she recounted events leading up to the shooting, which she said was an accident.

Damage Appeal Granted

Richmond, Va., May 26 (AP).—The State Supreme Court of Appeals granted an appeal today to Ivan H. Martin, jr., who complained of a judgment of the Nelson County Circuit Court awarding Virginia Wallace $1,500 damages for injuries suffered in an automobile accident on Afton Mountain April 6, 1938.

The other members of the class are Isabelle Royston, Polly Green, Ethel Doffemeyer, Daisy Walters, Mattie McDonald, James Ryker, Donald Levi, Robert Creamer and Dalton Carpenter.

Hagerstown Building Hits 10-Year High

50 New Residences, Large Warehouse Started; Shortage Of Workers Noted

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—A building boom, such as this section has not had since the lush days of a decade ago, is under way here. The projects include both private contracts and Federal-aid ones.

The Merchants Wholesale Grocery Co., Inc., announced that it had awarded a contract to A. R. Warner & Son, Waynesboro, Pa., for the erection of a large, modern warehouse. The building will be of reinforced concrete fireproof construction. It will have a basement and will be two stories above the ground level, 187 by 80 feet, with a total of 45,000 square feet of floor space.

Approximately 50 new residences are under construction in Hagerstown and in the county.

As the result of the absorption of most of the skilled construction labor here, it has been necessary for the contractor on the new city hall building here to obtain brick masons, carpenters and steel workers from the outside. There are approximately 50 men employed on this project, and 30 on an $80,000 project for improving the municipal sewerage disposal plant.

Six school projects, each of which is receiving PWA assistance, are under way. They include a new Williamsport High School building, alterations to the Williamsport Elementary School building new gymnasium to a junior high school here, additions to the Boonsboro High School and the Clearspring High School buildings, new school building at Downsville.

Hagerstown to Lay Cornerstone Today For New City Hall

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—With Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor delivering the oration and the Grand Lodge of Masons of Maryland presiding, Hagerstown will lay the cornerstone of its new $400,000 City Hall tomorrow afternoon, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles W. Lee Elgin, who conceived the idea of a new City Hall during his administration as mayor of Hagerstown, will be master of ceremonies.

A concert by the Municipal Band will open the cermonies at 2:30 p. m.

Tonight the committee had finally decided upon the contents of the metal box, hermetically sealed, which will be placed in the cornerstone. Among the contents will be a copy of the pictorial section of The Washington Post, showing Hagerstown from the air.

Bosox Make 5 Double Plays, Beat Nats, 4-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, May 26.—The best pitcher in baseball, to hear the Boston fans tell it, is a former country boy from Iowa of whom you might have heard. His name is Robert William Andrew Feller and Boston folks aren't exactly scooping the rest of the league on the idea that he is tops among the pitching fraternity.

POVICH

There wasn't much left for them to do but admit it after Feller served up a one-hit game for the Cleveland Indians against the Red Sox the other day, striking out ten along the route and being deprived of a no-hitter only because Bobby Doerr hits a cheap Texas League single best described as a blopper.

The natural thing, of course, is to compare Feller with Red Ruffing who hasn't lost a game in seven starts for the Yankees, and it is a tight fit between the pair of 'em. But one thing is certain: Ruffing never did boast the fast ball that Feller throws. And there is also a well-defined suspicion that Feller has developed a curve the equal of Ruffing's. There is reason, too, to discount some of Ruffing's victories. He pitches for the Yankees who perform such feats as winning a game, 5 to 2, on four hits as they did the other day.

Around the league, rival managers no longer attempt to detract from Feller. They've seen him come up with a curve ball and a change of pace to buttress his fast ball. That makes for a potent mixture. Time was when Feller was a rank busher when attempting to pitch with men on bases (The Yankees stole eight bases on him in a single game last season), but he has conquered that little deficiency.

Boston Nearly Had Feller

The fact is that Bob Feller would now be pitching for Boston instead of Cleveland if, three years ago, Judge Landis had enforced the letter as well as the spirit of the baseball law in the famous L'Affaire Feller. Irregularities in the manner in which the Cleveland club brought him up from the minors gave Landis full license to declare Feller a free agent when the Des Moines club squawked.

In the expectation that Landis would declare Feller a free agent, emissaries of the Red Sox and Yankees, camped in the lad's home town of Van Meter, Iowa, during the winter, in a rush to grab him off with offers of a fat bonus for signing.

Billy Evans was representing Tom Yawkee on the scene and a pair of Yankee scouts, check books in hand, were representing the late Jake Ruppert.

"How high should I go for him?" Evans asked Yawkey by long distance telephone.

"A hundred and fifty thousand dollars," replied Yawkey. "That ought to fetch him."

"Suppose it doesn't?" persisted Evans.

Whereupon Yawkey, a director in 24 Wall Street corporations, with a fortune estimated at $30,000,000, set something of a record in offering bonuses.

"I don't care how much you have to give him," said Yawkey, "just don't lost him to the Yankees."

Landis Declares Him Free Agent

But the bidding was all in vain when, in December, 1936, Landis ruled that Feller was not a free agent but the property of the Cleveland club which was rebuked for its handling of the boy by being taxed an $8,000 fine which was to go to the Des Moines team.

The Red Sox almost outbid the Yankees for another former Cleveland star, Outfielder Tommy Henrich, to whom the Indians lost title when Landis cracked down on the Cleveland club's method of signing minor leaguers. When Henrich was declared a free agent, Yawkey dispatched Evans to his Minneapolis home to sign the outfielder, but Landis told the Red Sox to "lay off." He did that because Evans was suspected of having put "the finger" on Cleveland in the Henrich case originally and Landis did not want the Boston club to benefit from the whistle-blowing.

But, returning to Feller, there isn't much doubt of his greatness remaining to be dispelled. When he lost his no-hit game here the other day because of a lone, cheap single, it wasn't the first time that he had been cruelly deprived of the honor. In the second game of 1938, Feller lost a no-hitter because Billy Sullivan, of the Browns, beat out a bunt which was St. Louis' only hit of the game.

It is no myth, either, that last season Feller struck out 18 Detroit Tigers to shatter all records for a single game. Not so many weeks before that effort, he fanned 16 Red Sox by way of warming-up for his record-breaking feat. Only 20 years old, husky and of good habits, Feller, if placed on the player market, would probably bring the highest all-time offer for a ball player, not excepting the $250,000 Yawkey says he would pay for Jo DiMaggio.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 26.—One of the chief charms of visiting the press box at Forbes Field, in Pittsburgh, is that you will be presented with a 1938 Pittsburgh World Series press button. It is a handsome little thing for the lapel, made of gleaming gold and bright enamel, and it must be classed as a rare collector's item. It bears this legend:

World Series
1938
Pittsburgh, Forbes Field
Press

CONSIDINE

We feel that we are breaking no confidence by telling you that, like the Braddock-Schmeling heavyweight championship fight, this 1938 World Series at Pittsburgh was strictly of the nether world. However, the phantom fight between Braddock and the German never had a chance of coming off, and the Garden spent so little money and time in preparation for its mystic fistic night that it spelled Schmeling's name incorrectly on the tickets. It was different with the Pirates.

The home run that Gabby Hartnett hit off the Pirates' relief pitcher, Mace Brown, meant the loss of at least $1,000,000 to the city of Pittsburgh. It cost the stockholders of the Pittsburgh team a young fortune and wiped out $150,000 in World Series bonuses for the Pirate players. Many of them had already spent their money, and this was not particularly foolhardy, for when the National League race wandered into September, they were seven games out in front.

Press Box Cost $40,000

The day before Hartnett's fabulous homerun a corps of workmen at Forbes Field finished a new $40,000 press box, built to seat 460 reporters and telegraph operators, the usual number that cover a series. A specially constructed radio booth was built to take care of the big network hookups. Full arrangements had been made for a $10,000 press and radio party at the Hotel Schenley, and many of the liquid provisions were in. Hotels smoked out their regular guests, as is the custom, to make way for the army of furniture-cracking series followers. Every hotel room in town was spoken for, and the railroads had completed plans to run dozens of excursion trains into the city.

A little more than $1,500,000 in advance money for tickets to see the Pirates meet the Yankees poured in a golden tidal wave into the offices of the Pittsburgh team. There weren't nearly enough seats in the old park to take care of the people who wanted to see the beloved Corsairs wield their clubs on Ruffing, Gomez and Pearson. So during the last week in September the club bought lumber, tore out a great section of the center field fence and built temporary stands. Art Rooney, with a $15,000-a-year football player in Whizzer White, was refused permission to bring his gridiron Pirates into Forbes Field for their first three games, and it just about broke him.

Then, late on the afternoon of September 28, in Chicago, a catcher named Al Todd, since exiled to Brooklyn, peered through the gathering gloom at Wrigley Field, and squatted down so that his protruding knees hid the signal he was about to give.

But It Didn't Curve—It Wouldn't Curve

It was the last half of the ninth inning. The score was tied, 5-5; two men were out and Hartnett had missed Brown's first two curves by a mile. All the Pirates had to do was get Gabby out. A tie at that stage of the season was as good as a victory to the Pirates, because it would have meant that the clubs would have played a double-header the next day, and Hartnett didn't have a pitcher to his name. He had worked Lee limp on the team's rise to this challenging position.

So Todd hunched there behind the plate and flicked out two fingers for Brown to read. He was calling for the old No. 2 ball—another curve identical to the ones which Hartnett had just missed. Brown wound up and let it go with a winging motion. The ball straked up to the plate, knifing the murky dusk.

But it didn't curve—it wouldn't curve.

When it came time for it to spit in the face of its destiny, and twist to the left, it didn't do it. It came down there straight as a string and fat as a balloon.

And Hartnett hit it over the fence.

The Pirates have yet to recover. Of course they lost their last remaining games last season. But this year, as they play in the shadows of that great, mocking, empty press box, they seem to be still stunned by the blow that sunk them, and the merchants of Pittsburgh, last September. It isn't likely that this current bunch of Pirates ever will recover from the most far-reaching homerun of all time.

First Defeat Is Suffered By Leonard

Knuckler Hurls Shut-Out Ball After Third; Case Slugs Hard; Rich Registers Victory

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Boston, May 26.—To the accompaniment of the mournful click-click of five Boston double-plays and the wild shrieks of 7,500 ladies day fans, the Nats swatted themselves into a 4-to-2 defeat this chilly afternoon.

Officially it was registered as a triumph for young Woodrow Wilson Rich, right-handed Red Sox rookie, late of Little Rock, but actually it was a smashing performance by the Boston infield that removed the menace from the Nats' attack.

For the Nats it was a tormenting afternoon. Five times they made motions to blast young Rich off the mound, and five times his supporting cast came with a rescue act on steaming ground balls pounded to an infielder. To exaggerate a bit, every time you looked up the Red Sox were choking off a Washington rally with a double play.

Leonard Defeated

In fact, the only run the Nats scored in the first eight innings—they got their second run in the ninth—was scored while Taft Wright was in the act of hitting into one of the pesky doubleplays.

For portly Dutch Leonard, seeking his fourth straight pitching victory, it was his first defeat of the 1939 season. Leonard was no ball of fire on the mound, but after the Red Sox scored a cluster of three runs in the third inning, he valiantly attempted to keep the Nats in the ball game by pitching shut-out ball over the remainder of the distance.

Ten hits were allowed by Leonard, half of them of the extra-base variety, including a three-bagger and four doubles. But he pitched four-hit ball after the third inning in the forlorn hope that the Nats would stage an uprising of their own.

Rich Chased in 8th

The Nats did blast young Rich off the mound, finally, in the eighth inning, but Joe Heving, his successor, benefited immediately from the fourth Boston double play of the ball game.

The Red Sox knocked Leonard loose from a run in the first inning when Doerr opened with a single, raced to third on Cramer's double down the leftfield line and moved home on Vosmik's fly to Welaj. And in the third they improved their lead to 4-0, with a three-run attack consisting of Cramer's infield single, a walk to Vosmik and singles by Williams and Tabor.

Back in the second inning the Nats were frustrated for the first time when, after Myer raced to second on a wild throw by Tabor, and Wasdell walked, Giuliani smashed into a double play started by Cronin.

In fact, the Nats could do very little that was right today. In the fourth inning, for instance, after Wasdell reached base when Williams dropped his fly ball, Giuliani's hot grounder toward rightfield hit Wasdell and he was automatically out.

There were signs for a big inning by the Nats in the sixth, when they

Eleven Feet Up With Central High's Daves

One of the scholastic athletes who brought Central's total in the interhigh track and field meet yesterday to within two points of Eastern, the winner, was Daves, whose best pole vault was 11 feet. Daves, shown topping the bar with space to spare, beat Eastern's Sanders and his own teammate, Baxter, for the title

Eastern Wins Interhigh Track Meet

Sid Hooe, Eastern's long-legged timber topper, tied the interhigh record he set Thursday in the 220-yard low hurdles and the all-time interhigh record for the 120-yard high hurdles, as he led Eastern to a close 52 to 50 victory over Central, the host school and defending champion, in the annual Interhigh Track and Field Meet yesterday. Hooe's time for the high timbers was 16 seconds flat, as good as the mark set in 1931 by Everett, of Eastern, and his :25.8 time in the low hurdles was four-tenths of a second better than the record set by Emmerick, of McKinley, in 1934.

Only one other record fell in the annual event, as Tech placed third with 46 points, Roosevelt, fourth, with 41½; Western, fifth, with 16½, and Woodrow Wilson last with four.

As expected, Al (Babe) Hayden cracked the 440-yard dash mark of five years standing when he galloped the distance in :51.3. He took the lead at the start, ran an exceptionally well-timed race, and was out in front at the finish by 5 yards. He added the 220-yard dash to his performance, and as the meet came to a close, ran the last leg on Central's winning mile relay effort.

It was the final event, incidentally, which really decided the winner. Eastern's second place gave it just the required margin, and had the combination of Walker, Simmons, Hipsley and Hooe fallen back to third or fourth place, Central would have copped the title.

Nats Today Play First Double Bill; Harris Puzzled

Boston, May 26.—The Nats face their first double-header of the season tomorrow when they meet the Red Sox in a pair of games that poses a pitching problem for Manager Harris.

Joe Krakauskas will pitch one of the games, but Harris tonight was uncertain about his second pitcher. He is hesitating to start young Joe Haynes, who has had only three days' rest since his last outing. Either Jimmy DeShong or Pete Appleton may go to the box in the second game.

Lefty Grove and Elden Auker are Joe Cronin's pitching choices.

Reds Defeat Cards, 7 to 5; Take First

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 26.—Persistence and courage had their rewards today as the fighting Cincinnati Reds finally caught up with the St. Louis Cardinals today, 7 to 5, and jumped over them into first place in the National League.

It was the eleventh straight victory for the Reds, who had been trailing in second place since May 11, trying desperately to overtake the Cardinals. The defeat, their third in the last 16 games, broke a seven-game winning streak for the Cardinals.

Deacon Will McKechnie, manager of the Reds, and Pitcher Bucky Walters were the men with courage in the Cincinnati victory.

McKechnie let Walters pitch the entire game, although a jittery manager would have yanked Walters in the seventh inning when the Cardinals scored four runs with the aid of two wild pitches. Both men showed nerve in the ninth inning.

With one man out, Stuart Martin doubled and Pepper Martin beat out an infield grounder. The mighty Joe Medwick strode to the plate. Walters bore down, and Medwick hit into a double play, ending the game and sending the Reds into first place.

Bill Werber, Cincinnati third baseman, was a thorn in the side of the Cardinals. He walked in the first inning, went to second on a sacrifice, stole third and scored on Ival Goodman's outfield fly. He doubled the next time up in the third inning and raced in from

Yankees Win On Henrich's Home Run

Blow Comes With 2 Out in Sixth; Champs Held to Four Hits By Henry Pippen

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—The World Champion Yankees either live a model life or a charmed one, or both.

Held to four hits by Henry Pippen today, they beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 1 to 0, on a home run by Tommy Henrich with two out in the sixth inning.

It was the second victory against two defeats for Oral Hildebrand, who was frequently in trouble because of six hits and seven passes he gave.

In fact, the outcome might have been different except for some sparkling defensive play led by Third Baseman Red Rolfe. The A's loaded the bases on one hit and two walks in the first inning, but Rolfe ran down a foul fly for the third out.

In the third the Athletics obtained two hits, but Rolfe tagged Dee Miles trying to steal. Finally in the seventh Bill Nagel worked Hildebrand for a walk, went to second on a wild pitch and on to third on a bad throw to second by Bill Dickey, but was trapped off third by Rolfe. Wayne Ambler doubled and two walks filled the bases later in this inning so that Rolfe's putout really saved the game.

Pippen, a lanky righthander up from Sacramento in the Coast League, was making his first start, although a loser once in a relief appearance. Except for Henrich's homer, his fourth of the season, the rookie was in trouble only twice. In the second the Yanks got two men on with a single and a walk and in the fifth they coupled two singles.

Just yesterday the champions defeated Detroit on four hits and earlier in the season they stopped Philadelphia on three.

District Tennis Title Is Won By Mary Belin

By Jack Munhall.

Manifesting complete disdain for the jinx that had prevented all but one player from repeating a championship effort in the tenth annual City of Washington Women's tournament, Mary Cootes Belin yesterday blasted Willie O'Steen, pride of the local playgrounds, to a straight set defeat at Army Navy for her second title in three years.

Romping home by the scores of 6—3 and 6—1, Mrs. Belin, a tall and stately young matron, duplicated the feat of Mrs. Margaret Robinson, now living in Alabama, by taking the coveted crown a second time. Mrs. Belin, then Mary Cootes, first won the championship in 1937, when she also took the District title, while Mrs. Robinson won in 1936 and 1938.

It is significant that Mrs. Belin did not play in last year's tournament to test her ability against the well-rounded game of Mrs. Robin-

Pacific Coast Team Looms Easy Victor

Southern California Gains 15 Places in Finals, Semifinals; Smashes Two Marks

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—The University of Southern California's track and field men, who had threatened to make a walkaway of the team race in the sixty-third I. C. 4-A championships, backed up that threat with unbeatable arguments today.

In the opening day's qualifying competition at Triborough Stadium, the Trojans tried for 15 places in tomorrow's finals and semifinals and won them all. The Pacific Coast Conference champions also established two new meet records.

Bob Peoples, U. S. C. sophomore from Oklahoma City, was in front all by himself in the javelin throw, tossing the spear for a new meet mark of 223 feet 1¼ inches, 14 inches better than the 8-year-old standard credited to Ken Churchill, of California. Early Vickery, last year's runner-up, skimmed the low hurdles to finish the 220 yards in 23.1 seconds, one-tenth under the former track record set in 1937 by Ham Hucker, of Cornell.

The Trojans sent Peoples, Reed Trusel and Hugo de Groot into the javelin final; Phil Gaspar and Art Wrotnowski into the discus final and Bill Anderson, Payton Jordan and Barney Willis into the semifinals of the century. Jordan also won a place in the 220 semifinals.

Other Qualifiers

Others who qualified for U. S. C. for tomorrow's program, when 16 titles will be decided, were Jim Humphrey with a 14.6 high hurdles performance, the best of the day; Erwin Miller and Howard Upton in the 440, and Bob Fisher and Don McNeil, last fall's football captain, in the shot put.

Alnwick, Hoya Ace, Qualifies in '100' At I. C. 4-A Meet

New York, May 26.—The University of Southern California was not the only school that batted .1000 in placing all of their entries in the finals and semifinals of the I. C. 4-A meet here today. The District of Columbia's only representative, Morty Alnwick, of Georgetown, reached the semifinals of the 100-yard dash by placing second in his heat.

Alnwick ran one of the fastest centuries of his career, pressing the winner, Willie Anderson, of U. S. C., who was clocked in 0:9.9.

2 Americans Eliminated At Hoylake

By Scotty Reston.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Hoylake, May 26.—Alex Kyle, an iron-hearted Scot with a miraculous sawed-off putting cleek, eliminated big Bill Holt, of Syracuse, in the semifinal of the British Amateur Golf Championship today and joined Tony Duncan, handsome Welsh soldier, in tomorrow's 36-hole final tussle.

Kyle, who eliminated Jim Bruen, 19-year-old Irish sensation, 1 up in the morning's quarter finals, exploded from traps or chipped up and one-putted 7 of the last 9 holes to put out the long hitting, hard fighting Holt, 2 and 1. It was the same Kyle who clinched the Walker Cup for Britain at St. Andrews last year.

Duncan advanced to the final by beating Dick Chapman, Connecticut Yankee, 5 and 3, in the quarter-finals and then thumping Charlie Stowe, English miner, 3 and 2, in the afternoon.

Though Holt scarcely reached the form that he displayed yesterday, British golf critics thought his performance remarkable considering that fact that this was the first seaside course he ever saw

Holt consistently outdrove Kyle and usually was nearer the pin with his seconds, but the Scottish cloth designer always either chipped dead or hit the ball somewhere on the green and then sank it. Kyle was a good consistent golfer full of confidence, but human until they turned for home with Holt one up. Then he was more than human.

A wood, chip and putt gave Kyle the tenth, but at the short eleventh he hooked one down far below the green, almost on the sea shore, while Holt thumped a long iron 8 feet from the cup. The gallery of 2,000 perched on the surrounding sand dunes didn't know it, but Kyle disappeared below the green and hit the shot that put him in the final. It was a half niblick exploded out of an almost impossible gravel pit. The ball sailed up, took one bound past the cup and settled 4 feet from the pin.

"When that 4-footer went down," Kyle said later, "I had that strange feeling you get about once in a year that everything is going to be all right."

And after that everything was all right. At the long twelfth, though, he sliced his drive into the rough, hooked his second 100 yards short of the green, he rolled in an 18-foot sidehill putt for a birdie, and was 1 up. Holt missed a chance to get it back at the short thirteenth when he followed Kyle into a trap and the Scot went on from there to win the fourteenth by chipping up and holing another 6-foot putt.

Trailer Bill looked certain to get one back at the fifteenth, where two full woods and a chip left him 6 feet from the cup, but Kyle, after hooking his drive and second into the rough, finally pitched on the green 25 feet from the hole, from where he dropped it in.

However, Holt, still fighting, hit two screaming woods on the green at the par 5 sixteenth and rolled dead for a birdie 4 only to have Kyle chip on from off the green again and can the putt fo ra tie. Dormie two, then Kyle played for a safe 5 at the seventeenth.

Record Field of Sailing Craft in Gunston Cove Race Today

Fleet Leaves Alexandria At 1 o'Clock

Post to Donate 7 Trophies to Victors In Sailing Events Over the Week-End

By Bob Knight.

With all the pomp in the history of the event, a record field of nearly 40 sailing craft will flash across the starting line at 1 p. m. today in the fifth annual running of the Alexandria-Gunston Cove long-distance race, which is being sponsored by The Washington Post.

Last night the race committee of the Potomac River Sailing Association reported that nearly twice as many entries as last year had been received. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will board the committee boat Ranger shortly before 1 p. m. to take part in the starting ceremonies.

The Ranger will be anchored off the Old Dominion Boat Club at Alexandria. After the lats class has whisked across the starting line, Skipper John W. Marsh will haul anchor of the ocean-going yawl and proceed under power to establish a finish line at the Cove.

Post Donates Trophies

As a part of its program to encourage the development of water activities on the Potomac, The Washington Post has given eight trophies for winners in sailing events over the week-end. The regatta will be a three-day affair, climaxed by a return race Memorial Day. Tomorrow the racing flotilla will go into action at 10:30 a. m. A series of two races have been scheduled upon which cup awards will be made.

When the fleet arrives at the cove at approximately 5 p. m. this afternon, more than 100 skippers and their crews will land for a beach barbecue, to be held on the grounds of Fort Belvoir. They will be greeted by more than 100 others who will motor to the cove after watching the start at Alexandria. Bonfires will be lighted at dark, when a malty facsimile of rum rations will be served all hands. Owners of the larger boats will spend the night aboard to be on hand early for tomorrow's competition.

The Post traphies will be awarded the victors in the five classes competing tomorrow. An additional trophy will be given the runner-up in the Comet division, due to the large number of entries received from skippers in that class. Post trophies also will go to pilots of the first boat to finish in the down-river race, and for the return race over the same course.

Receive Trophies

Winners on corrected time in the two long distance hauls will receive the Commodore's and the Treasurer's cups, an annual prize offrd by incumbnt officrs of the sailing association.

Contestants attending the sailing rendezvous will be offered docking facilities at Fort Belvoir, in accordance with arrangements completed earlier in the week with Col. Thomas Robins, commandant.

The starting schedule for this afternoon's race will be:

1 p. m.—Class C Handicap.

1:30 p. m.—Snipes and Class B. Handicap.

2 p. m.—Comets and Class A Handicap.

Willie O'Steen Beaten in Finals

this year to provide what would have been a sensational final. It is son, nor was Mrs Robinson on hand likely, however, that these rivals will meet in the coming District championships, for Mrs. Belin said yesterday she expected to be here. Mrs. Robinson has expressed her desire to defend her honors.

Determined Spirit

Winsome Willie O'Steen, a 20-year-old youngster who learned her tennis on the hot, rough playgrounds without benefit of the privacy of club courts and expert professional advice that has been the fortune of many of her rivals, gave her best yesterday. She played with the same determined spirit that enabled her to turn back Margo Lee in her semifinal match, but she nor any other local woman here at present could have handled Mrs. Belin, who seems at her best when the chips are down.

The pretty, young wife of Peter Belin had entirely too much experience and too many strokes for Miss O'Steen to combat. After running into a little trouble in the first set, when she trailed Willie 2—1. Mrs. Belin gradually warmed up until at the end she was playing nigh-on unbeatable tennis. Her serves were crisp and accurate and her forehand was a thing of beauty and destruction. Her drives crackled to the corners, kicking up the sideline chalk, or whistled past Miss O'Steen as she futilely stormed the net in an effort to swing the tide.

In short, Miss O'Steen was forced to play the way her cagy rival desired, the same misfortune that had happened to Anne Ellis, Mrs. Belin's semifinal round victim. Willie attempted to play to Mrs. Belin's backhand—much less powerful than her smashing forehand—and she also, at times, became the aggressor, forcing her rival from one side of the court to the other with well-placed backhands.

But for every fresh attack or change of strategy Mrs. Belin had a conclusive answer. She rolled up nearly twice as many placements and was more steady in every department of the game than Miss O'Steen who made several errors of inexperience and also was constantly fighting a faulty service. She was guilty of four double faults, two of which cost her crucial points. Mrs. Belin double faulted only once.

Miss O'Steen dropped her service, opening the first set, but rallied to take a 2-1 lead. The score then rocketed to 2—2, and 2—3, in Mrs. Belin's favor, before she pulled away convincingly, holding her service and breaking Miss O'Steen's for a 5—3 advantage. Willie broke through impressively in the eighth game, taking her opponent's service with loss of 1 point, but that score was reversed against her in the ninth as she gave up the set point on a double fault.

The second set was a little closer than the score indicates for the third, fourth, fifth and sixth games went to deuce. But all but the sixth went to Mrs. Belin, who just couldn't miss when she really needed a point. She ended the match with a stinging placement down the middle of the court while Willie stood flatfooted in one corner. That was typical of her power and accuracy.

Junior Tennis Tournament Begins Today

34 Boys Open Play at Columbia Country Club Early This Morning

Every local public high school and several of the private institutions have representatives among the 34 boys who open play today in the City of Washington Junior Tennis Tournament at Columbia Country Club. This event, recognized as a center tournament, offers contestants the chance to qualify for the Middle Atlantic championships here next month; the National Junior Championships at Culver in July, and the National Interscholastic Tournament later in the summer.

Leonard Sokol, Central's one player and City of Washington boy champion in 1936, has drawn the No. 1 seeding. Following his in order are Tom Wadden, Wilson's No. 1 player and former boy champion of this tournament; Byron Matthews, Ham Bonham, Bobbie Bensinger, last year's boy champion who is entering junior competition this year even though he is still within the boy class age limit; Eddie Richardson, runner-up to Bensinger in 1938; Maurice Cowan, St. Alban's No. 1 player, and Chandler Brossard, a ranking boy player last year.

First-round matches start at 9 o'clock this morning and will continue until noon. Contestants are requested to come dressed for play because Columbia's lockers are overcrowded. Contestants also are urged to bring with them their junior age identification cards, or in lieu of one, their birth certificates.

The pairings for the first round: The pairings:

9 o'clock—Leonard Sokol vs. David Kerr. John Hutchinson vs. David Kay. Benjamin Millstein vs. Maurice Cowan. Chandler Brossard vs. Everett Harris. Ladd Thurston vs. R. Mayfield. Taylor Chewning vs. Slater Clarke. Byron Mathewa vs. John Lincoln. Hamilton Bonham vs. S. Pratt. Herron Bartley vs. Ben Fisher. De Witt Armstrong vs. Griffin Holland. E. L. Gottlieb vs. Robert Bensinger.

10 o'clock—Jack Martin vs. Eddie Richardson. Bud Edwards vs. Arthur Ferrington. David Smith vs. Tom Wadden.

11:30 o'clock—M. Madden vs. winner, Bonham-Pratt match. Reggie Cooper vs. Clint Doggett.

Sterling Lee and Paul Ackerman will not play their first-round match until Monday.

7-Up and Blues Clash Tomorrow

Either Bob (Lefty) McIntire, veteran southpaw, or Lanny Birch, effective right handers, will draw the starting pitching assignment for the 7-Up Athletic Club tomorrow afternoon when it opposes Lou Blue's Boys' Republic baseball team at Boys' Republic Stadium, Ballston, Va., at 3 o'clock

Birch recently turned back Boys' Republic in a nocturnal game, 8 to 4.

Kuhel's Homer For White Sox Beats Cleveland

Dietrich-Harder Pitching Duel Broken As Chicago Wins, 2-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, May 26.—Joe Kuhel climmed a homer over League Park's short right field wall and gave the Chicago White Sox a 2 to 1 victory over Cleveland in the series opener today.

Chicago's Bill Dietrich and Mel Harder were locked in a tight 1-1 pitching duel when Kuhel connected in the seventh, with bases empty. The Indians filled the bases with none out in the ninth,r chasing Dietrich, but Clint Brown coaxed Frankie Pytlak into hitting into a double play and struck out Jeff Heath. Joe Dobson twirled the last two innings for the Tribe after Harder was removed for a pinch-hitter.

Shoot Course Record 67's for Half-Way Mark Total of 140

By the Associated Press.

White Plains, N. Y., May 26.—Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Frank Moore, of Bretton Woods, N. H., set a new competitive record today in gaining the lead at the Metropolitan Open golf championshi's half-way mark.

Both came through with crackling 67's to better the competitive record of the par 71 Metropolis course. And those 67's, added to 73's, made in the first round yesterday, gave them the meet's joint leadership at 140.

One stroke behind was a dangerous trio consisting of Jimmy Hines, defending "Met" champion; Paul Runyan, the P. G. A. champion and home course pro, and Slammin' Sammy Snead, the West Virginia siege gun. Runyan toured around his own course in another par-pulverizing round, a 69, but that two under standard figure had to take a back seat to the play of Moore and Thomson.

Baltimore, D.C. Golfers to Meet In Club Final

Caldwell or Overton To Face Burnett or Myers in B.C.C. Play

Baltimore, Md., May 26.—Golfers from Washington and Baltimore will battle here tomorrow afternoon at the Five Farms course for the Baltimore Country Club Invitation Championship. That much was determined by the outcome of the second round matches today.

The participants in the final will be learned after the semi-finals tomorrow morning, in which Erne Caldwell will play Spencer Overton, to see who will carry the Rolling Road pennant agains tthe Capital entry, and Dick Meyers, of Manor Club, will meet Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, former winner of the tournament, to nominate that entry.

Of course the most noted missing name is that of Otto Greiner, Middle Atlantic and Maryland amateur champion, sharer with Burnett and Overton of the three-way tie for the medal. He was eliminated in the first round in the major upset of the play by Walter Newman, newspaperman from Hanover, Pa., 1 up.

The tighest match of the afternoon round was that between Eddie Semmler, of Hillendale, and Voleny Burnett. The Hillendale battler kept trying and by successive birdies on the last two holes, squared the match. The extra hole was the big thrill of the day for the small clubhouse gallery. Semmler missed his second shot, and Burnett played the hole in a winning par.

Meyers, so badly sunburned he wore bandages on both arms, made short work of Newman in the afternoon 6 and 5. He was three up by going out in even par, and through he lost two strokes to par on the next four holes, he won three and halved one to clse out the match.

First sixteen:

First Round

Volney G. Burnett (Indian Spring), defeated Edgar Lucas (Baltimore Country Club), 4 and 2.

Eddie Semmler (Hillendale), defeated Harris Jones (Baltimore Country Club), 3 and 1.

Richard Myers (Manor Club), defeated Nathan H. Kaufman, Jr. (Suburban), 1 up 19 holes.

Walter H. Newman (Hanover, Pa., C. C.), defeated Otto Greiner (Rodgers Forge), 1 up.

Spencer S. Overton (Rolling Road), defeated Tom Carrick (unattached), 7 and 6.

Eddie Meyer (Clifton Park), defeated Johnny Farrell (Hillendale), 1 up.

Second Round

Burnett defeated Semmler, 1 up 19 holes.
Myers defeated Newman, 6 and 5.
Overton defeated Meyer, 4 and 3.
Caldwell defeated Jones, 2 and 1.

Pairings (Semifinal)

9:40 a. m.—Burnett vs. Meyer.
9:50 a. m.—Overton vs. Caldwell.
(Final at 2 p. m.)

filled the bases with none out on Case's infield l.it, Lewis' single to right and Travis' single to center. But they got only one run out of the proceedings because Doerr converted Wright's smash into a double play.

And in the next inning, after Wasdell walked with one out, Vosmik backed against the wall to haul down Giuliani' drive and the rally fizzled completely when Leonard grounded into a double play started by Tabor.

Things were going along at the rate of a double play per inning by that time. In the eighth, when Case led off with his third hit, a two-bagger high against the centerfield wall, and Lewis drew a walk with none out, Rich was lifted in favor of Heving. The Nats achieved nothing because Travis' hot smash was knocked down by Heving, who started a twin killing.

There was, of course, another double play in the ninth. It happened after the Nats had scored a run on Myer's drag bunt, Welaj's infield out and Wasdell's single to right. Pinch-hitter Charley Gelbert sealed the Nats' fate by slamming a double-play ball at Joe Cronin.

Jack Ehrlich's Net 60 Low in Ad Men's Golf

Brother Wins Low Gross Honors at Kenwood Country Club

The Ehrlich brothers monopolized the honors in the twenty-first birthday party of the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday at Kenwood, dividing the low net and low gross prizes between them.

Jack Ehrlich, of the Daily News, given a 16 handicap by the committee in his first local tournament, shot well below the figure with a 76, from nines of 39 and 37, and had a net 60. The score was just six over par and low for the day.

M. G. Ehrlich, an attorney, had low gross with 81, from nines of 38 and 43. His score was topped by his brother, but only one prize went to each contestant. Jack won the Kal Advertising Trophy for low net and M. G Ehrlich the Morris Plan Bank award.

Walter Furlow, advertising manager of the Star, had the most fives, with 11, while A. D. "Jess" Willard, jr., general manager of Station WJSV, had the lowest score on any hole, a deuce on the seventeenth.

Louis Krakow, advertising manager of D. G. S., had the highest on a hole, a big 12 on the ninth, while George Burrus, Peoples Drug Store advertising manager, won the blind boged with a net 80.

W. Frank Gatewood, chairman of the event, won the selective nine-hole prize with 40. The guest prize for low gross went to Jack Keele with an even 80

Strong Field To Compete in Deep Run Show

Annual Event Carded Today and Tomorrow At Richmond

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 26.—Some of the finest five-gaited saddle horses in this section will compete in the annual Deep Run Hunt Club Show here tomorrow and Sunday.

The list includes a number of blue ribbon winners, such as Lovely Anne, owned by R. R. Charles; All American, owned by Oscar F. Smith; Air Flow, owned by R. R. Douglas, and Nick Wright's Hytone Artist and Mary Hunt, the former being the champion saddle horse of last year's Deep Run show. These horses come from the Norfolk Area and a number of them were shown with success at Madison Square Garden.

Other entries include Poetry of Motion and Charming Gypsy, from the stables of Albert Handley, of Goldsboro, N. C.; Highland Ebony, owned by V. Lance Phillips, and Free Silver, owned by Dr. J. P. McDonough.

The first class of the day will be for ponies under saddle in a morning program given over to children and pony events. A feature of the show was expected to be the effort of George Benoit, of Fredericksburg, to capture both the hunter and jumper championships with Sport Marvel.

Colored Teams Meet Here Today

"Crappy" Brown's nationally known original Baltimore Black Sox are to visit Griffith Stadium this afternoon for a 3:30 o'clock Negro Eastern League baseball game with Don Taylor's second place Washington Royal Giants.

Tomorrow afternoon the Royal Giants will play host to the High Point, N. C., Red Sox in a 2:15 o'clock double-header.

The Royal Giants today are to start an uncle and nephew battery comprised of Rockville, Md., boys, Mike Snowden, a right-hander, will pitch, and Babe Snowden, his burly nephew, will catch.

Prim Hall, erstwhile southpaw pitcher, will be shifted to first base by Manager Taylor.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

The old blind hens in Wall street picked up a bit of corn this week and it wasn't so long ago that the Wolf of the street said, "I can blow on the market and make it go up 5 points."

But that was yesterday. Today, the market is doing a very neat but slow job of knitting. Where it used to jump every time a door slammed it now purls one and drops one.

If it ever reaches the stage where it purls two and drops one, then the recession will be over.

Marion Brown, Mrs. Davy Tie In Indian Spring Ladies' Play

Pair Card 82-4, 78 to Win Low Net; Mrs. Dale Wins Kenwood Tournament

Marion Brown and Mrs. Myron Davy tied for low net over a large field in the Ladies' Day tournament yesterday at Indian Spring. They had 82-4, 78.

Mrs. K. S. Giles and Mrs. H. W. Sharpe were first and second prize winners for the most fours, Mrs. W. R. Stokes and Mrs. J. H. Bullock ran 1-2 in the fives competition and Mrs. R. C. Dunbar and Mrs. W. B. Vogel tied with the most sixes.

Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Manor, led the guests with a 91—18, 73 net, with the most fours going to Mrs. L. G. Pray, the most fives to Mrs. E. Tresize, Manor, and the most 6's to Mrs. H. A. Mihills, Manor.

KENWOOD

Mrs. J. C. Dale won low gross prize in the tournament among the Kenwood members yesterday, with a 94, while Mrs. W. R. Stone had low putts, 30, and Mrs. William Peterson topped the selective holes with 22.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mrs. W. R. Bush topped the ladies' day play at Congressional with 91—11, 80, with Mrs. George Goetzmann and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy each among the prize winners with 90—9, 81. Mrs. A. Weber had low putts, 29.

Navy Draws 'No. 3' Lane for 'Keepsie Race

New York, May 26 (AP).—Columbia, Cornell and Navy drew the favored "inside" lanes today for the 4-mile varsity race of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie June 17.

Columbia drew lane No. 1, closest to the west shore, with Cornell and Navy, last year's winner, in the second and third "slots." Wisconsin drew No. 4, Syracuse, No. 5, and the far Western representatives, Washington and California were in 6 and 7, respectively.

For the 3-mile junior varsity race, with all but Wisconsin represented, the order was: No. 1, Washington; 2, Cornell; 3, Navy; 4, California; 5, Syracuse; 6, Columbia.

For the 2-mile freshman dash with Navy missing, the draw was: No. 1, California; 2, Wisconsin; 3, Syracuse; 4, Cornell; 5, Washington, and 6, Columbia.

Miss Epe and James Pal Run Dead Heat at Charles Town

Jockey Vassar Hurt When Mount Falls

Blind Talk, in 2d Race, Disqualified For Interfering; Double Pays $19

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 26.—A little bit of everything that goes to make up a thrilling day at the races was on the Friday program here, including a soul-stirring dead-heat, Mrs. G. Hutchins' Miss Epe and A. Parker's James Pal finished all even in the fifth race and their backers split win money. Miss Epe paid $3.20 and James Pal paid $3 The race was marked by accident when Runout, going to the first turn, tripped and fell hard, sending Jockey Willard Vassar in the dust. He was knocked out and suffered only a bitten tongue.

James Pal had the lead to the stretch when Miss Epe, under Jockey Palumbo's drive, moved up to take a brief lead in the straightaway Then Apprentice Everson went to the whip on James Pal and the gelding "came again" and appeared to have gotten up in time. The picture was close enough for a dead heat in any book.

A disqualification marked the running of the second race. Blind Talk, which finished second, was taken out of the results line-up for interfering with Crusand, one that moved into third position through the ruling. Fred Almy was the winner by a length and a half and paid $8. The 10-year-old started a $19 daily double.

Free Ride, another of those fit horses trained by R. F. Cook, was up in the final stride to win the third race and put the finishing touches on the "double." Beverly Hacker brought the filly along in time to nip Nay Nay on the wire.

The day's feature race, in sixth position on the card, went to Capt. Evart Johnston's Oats Cradle, a $9.80 shot. She answered Jockey Root's urging to defeat H. M. Simpson's Surprising Traumerei by a neck. J. A. Manfuso's Accidental was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NANCI'S BEST, $3.80, $3.00, $2.80; ALCA, $2.80, $3.20; GRAND WALTZ, $6.60.

NANCI'S BEST, rushed to be closest to GRAND WALTZ'S pace in early stages, shook off latter to draw clear and opened a gap to win easily. ALCA broke on top and went evenly thereafter while saving ground. GRAND WALTZ outran field to first turn and weakened gradually when caught. POMPEY'S ROSE improved position along rail to show good effort. HER ODDS had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00. Off at once. Winner, S. Kenley's b. g. Finished second but was disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRED ALMY, $8.00, $3.60, $2.40; BEAUFAST, $3.80, $3.20; CRUSAND, $2.60.

FRED ALMY, rushed to front going to first turn, drew out to good lead and held sway to end while under intermittent punishment in closing stages. BLIND TALK, slow to begin, bumped horses for which he was disqualified. BEAUFAST came through on inside to improve position and closed gamely.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:31½. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREE RIDE, $7.20, $3.20, $2.80; NAY NAY, $3.40, $2.80; WANDER BIRD, $6.60.

FREE RIDE, taken in on rail to save ground when outrun in early stages, came out while making move and wore down NAY NAY in final strides. NAY NAY assumed command in opening furlong, retained good lead approaching stretch, but weakened under intermittent punishment nearing end. WANDER BIRD was closest to pace to stretch and closed with good energy and appears ready. BLOND REEL saved ground. LILTEEN weakened.

Daily Double, Fred Almy and Free Ride, Paid $19.00.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:56. Off 3:58. Winner, C. Gribbens' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAT'S CRADLE, $9.80, $4.20, $3.40; TRAUMEREI, $4.80, $4.00; ACCIDENTAL, $5.40.

CAT'S CRADLE was hard ridden from start and withstood a long drive to hold away under TRAUMEREI and drew clear to finish. ACCIDENTAL came with good energy in closing test.

SEVENTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:17. Off 5:18. Winner, Mrs. Glorioso's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT WATCH, $6.40, $3.80, $4.00; TERN HILL, $7.60, $5.60; LADY GRANDACE, $7.20.

NIGHT WATCH assumed command going to turn, was steadied along in front and won under pressure. TERN HILL was rated while close to pace, responded to drive, but was held safe. LADY GRANDACE came willingly in final stages. MR. MEX was used up trying to get to leader. GEE SHARP closed with good energy.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:44. Off 5:45. Winner, Mrs. G. O. Russell's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHARMING MARY, $7.40, $4.80, $3.00; ORKIL'S RUSSET, $5.80, $20.00; HEART PLAY, $5.00.

CHARMING MARY, nicely handled, came around horses to take command over ORKIL'S RUSSET and drew out under drive. ORKIL'S RUSSET, off alertly and sent to top in opening furlong, set good pace and continued with good energy when disposed. HEART PLAY moved up menacingly along backstretch, but was held safe.

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., May 26.

Dear Al:

Jockey W. L. South arrived today from California and will start riding tomorrow. He is a brother of George South, a fair rider for years. Two more jockeys bit the dust here today. Jockey Woodrow Kirk, who rode three winners yesterday, was suspended for five days for rough riding. Jockey Al Treptor got the same dose for cutting over too sharply. That makes six jockeys and one trainer set down here since the meeting began. Three of the first ten daily doubles here paid more than $125. R. F. Cook, of Washington, is the leading trainer here with five victories. Lou Machado and Buddy Root continue to battle it out for the riding honors. Lou has 11 winners to 9 for Buddy. The Ben Dulaneys, of Georgetown, were entertained in a clubhouse box. Among the horses shipped in recently are Nottingham, Rathford, Pungent, Time Piece, Silver Way, Lady Gursel, Beauty B., Dress Maker and Miss Maker. The last named is the filly which won impressively at Bowie. There have been four claims at the meeting. Happy Road, Adhelmar, Ivonia and Clever Girl have changed hands. If you put two bits in the claiming box you can take Clocker Mike.

BILL.

First race—Fair Deal looks like the right one in this rather open affair. Seems to have the speed of the party. Seldomgo was an impressive winner over this track and is dangerous. Radial would be a factor on an off track.

Second race—Vendor's Lien will be better suited here than in those short sprints. Looks like the right spot. Princess Lady's last was a good one and she will be right in there battling. Lyde might take it all if in action.

Third race—Canteret needed that last. This route suits and she may take it all at fair odds. Pukka Heaven ran a nice second last out and is dangerous. Lady Dunlin would be right there if track conditions change.

Fourth race—Intelligensia turned in a surprising amount of speed in that first outing here. Should show enough improvement to win under the light assignment. Goldun had lots of speed and is fit. Game Chaser is a bit better than last out.

Fifth race—Lady Cirek gets in light and goes well from an outside post. I'm going to string along. Hagerstown Boy is on the reserve list but should be a keen factor if in the competition. Pegadette to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Lady's Favor gets in light and turned in a powerful race in her first appearance of the year. With the right handling and the inside post position this mare may take it all. Is going to be there. Royal Business should improve at the long route. Ocean Roll has a bad post position.

Seventh race—Famous Clayton breaks off the rail and is a hard running horse. With good handling he could get home in front. Unlimited and Jinneal are on the reserve list but will be dangerous if in the post line-up.

Eighth race—Big Bud was second last out and goes a longer route in this. I'm going to string along. Bav and Canimar to take care of the others.

Sub race—If this race is used I'll take Beaming Lady, Counora and Victory Light.

Best bet—Fair Deal.

Central Beats Roosevelt, 6 to 5; To Play Eastern for Title

Sectional Victors Meet Wednesday

Clash at Stadium; Richie Rozzelle Winning Pitch; Vermillion Defeated;

By Bill Burnett

The "Gas House Gang" of interhigh baseball, Central, pulled another fancy finish yesterday on Roosevelt's lot, coming from behind with three runs in the ninth to beat the host school, 6 to 5, and take possession of the west section title. Next endeavor of the scrappy nine, which happened in the divisional championship game with Roosevelt only because Woodrow Wilson was forced to forfeit a game, will be the public school championship game with Eastern Wednesday at Griffith Stadium.

Though it bounced into a 3 to 1 lead in the second frame and held on until the seventh, there were moments aht game came to a close that Central's prospects were very dark. Billy Robertson, Roosevelt's shortstop and part-time pitcher, started the darkening process in the seventh with a double that sent Byron Waters and Bill's twin brother, Jimmy, across the plate with the tying tallies.

Vermillion Starts It

Matters came to a downright opaque state in the eighth, however, when the Riders took a two-run lead. Eddie Vermillion, the husky lad who almost pitched the Riders to a series victory but fell because of errors behind him, hit his only single of the game to score Johnny Thrift and Ernie Travis. It was a brilliant effort to win his own game at bat, but his pitching in the next inning proved his downfall.

Vermillion's weakening started when he walked Archie Panago, and it was culminated with consecutive singles by Ken Bransdorf and Zello Lagos to fill the bases. Bill Robertson took over, and Bennie Steiner clapped one of his first pitches against the centerfield fence to know the score. It was a simple matter for Len Sokol to fly out and sent Lagos in with the winning run.

Rozzelle Winning Hurler

Vermillion, despite hsi nine hit work for eight and one-third innings, was the losing pitcher, and little Richie Rozzelle the winner. Rozzelle, 125 pounds of control and curve ball, whipped the Riders because his 11-hit allotment was scattered well. He struck out only two, but was just as stingy with his walks, allowing but two.

Danny Boothe, with a double and two singles led the plate punch of the losers, and teiner, Rozelle and Sokol that of the winners. Each of the latter had a pair of bingles. Only one double play was registered throughout the game, and that went to Roosevelt when Wilbert Lewis caught Sokol's fly in the ninth and relayed it through Jimmy Robertson to catch Steiner at third.

Jersey City Wins, 5-0, Over Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, May 26.—Billy Harris, veteran right-hander, registered his fifth victory of the season today as he hurled the Jersey City Giants to a 5 to 0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles, the opening test of a four-game series.

In notching his second shutout of the campaign, Harris gave up but five hits, fanned five and walked three. Only one Baltimore runner advanced to third base. That was Art Graham, who got there with two out in the eighth, only to be left stranded.

The Giants rapped Johnny Tising, Baltimore starter, for seven hits and three runs in the first six frames and then picked on his successor, Roy Bruner, for four hits and two more tallies in the seventh and eighth.

Miller Lewis Wins Monroe Sports Award

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 26.—Miller Lewis, four-sports star at James Monroe High School for the past four years, was awarded a silver loving cup at assembly exercises at the school today for being the outstanding athlete in the graduating class. The cup, known as the "Fenlon Award" in honor of Johnny Fenlon, former coach here, is given annually by Benjamin T. Pitts, of this city.

The cup was won last year by Randolph Heflin, star baseball and football player who is now under contract with the Boston Red Sox.

Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Blake Lewis, has compiled a record while a student at James Monroe that stamps him as one of the institution's greatest athletes. He has successfully held several positions on nearly every Jacket team. In four years he has won 16 major sports letters.

At the same time of the award, 21 varsity letters were given members of the track and baseball teams. Winners were:

Baseball—Craig Carr, captain; Lewis, Buddy Ingalls, Sam Branscome, Donald Herron, Bob Chichester, David Cline, Bladen Billingsley, Frank Billingsley, Ed Brown, Charles White, Emmett Heflin, Ranny Cooper and Russell Carneal, manager.

Track—Lewis, Ingalls, Chichester, Carr, Otho Simpson, Wilbur Weedon and Taylor Dickenson, manager.

Shangay Lily Belmont Winner

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 26 (AP).—Shangay Lily, a Chilean bred 7-year-old flying the silks of W. V. McGrath, confounded students of form here today when she won the Firenze Handicap, for fillies and mares, and paid 20 to 1. Ruperto Donoso, who hails from Santiago, Chile, drove the surprise horse home by a half length. Shangay Lily was listed as a non-winner prior to this event, she having failed in four 1938 starts and seven attempts this year.

Pixey Dell, the 11 to 5 favorite in a field of seven, saved second money by a length and a half, while Rust, which opened favorite but receded to 13 to 5, barely earned the show in front of One Jest. The time for the 1 mile was 1:38 4-5.

Fights Are Racket, Sen. Johnson Claims

Attacks Ring Game at Hearing on Federal Law Barring Shipping of Fiht Films from One State to Another; Forster Urges Change

By International News Service.

Professional boxing has become a "racket," with a few persons monopolizing the business, Senator Edwin Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, charged yesterday.

His roar for the prize-fight interests to "clean their own house" was made during a hearing by a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee on a bill to lift the prohibition against interstate shipment of prize-fight films.

After T. Wageman, of New Hampshire, former boxing referee and athlete, had testified there was "no future" in professional fighting, Johnson remarked:

"I am interested in for what the witness said about there being no future for a professional boxer. My own idea is that professional boxing has been so highly commercialized and so completely in the control of just a few persons, who are operating it entirely for their own individual profit, that they have absolutely ruined the professional fight game.

"It has become more of a racket than anything else and I think that the fighting fraternity ought to be warned by Congress that while we are glad to repeal the ban on fight film shipments, yet, at the same time, unless they clean house, with their professional boxing, Congress or somebody is going to have to step in and clean it for them.

"Congress does not want to do that if they will do it themselves."

In urging passage of the Barbour bill to lift the ban on films, Edward C. Foster, Rhode Island boxing administrator, said fight films teach boys sportsmanship and the "fighting spirit."

"That's a very good point," interjected Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire. "We need the fighting spirit all the way up and down the line in this country today, and should not be expecting the government to wet nurse for us."

Support for the bill also was voiced by President Charles F. Reynolds of the National Boxing Association, and M. C. Moore, of Jacksonville, Fla., president of the Southeastern Theater Owners' Association.

England Leads In Davis Cup Play

Wimbledon, Eng., May 26 (AP).—England took a 2-1 lead over France in their European zone Davis Cup round today by winning the doubles match after splitting yesterday's opening singles engagements.

The veteran Frank D. H. Wilde and Charles Hare were carried to five sets before overcoming the French doubles pair, Yvon Petra and Pierre Pelliza, 6—3, 6—3, 3—6, 4—6, 6—3.

The remaining two singles matches will be played tomorrow.

C. U. Trackmen And La Salle Meet Today

Cards' Weakness In Field Events, Worries Coach

Making its first appearance since winning the Mason-Dixon Conference championship, Catholic University's track team will be out to end an undefeated dual meet season this afternoon as it plays host to unbeaten LaSalle at Brookland.

The Cardinals have a record of five victories in dual and triangular meets but Coach Dorsey Griffith is pessimistic of their chances to prolong that streak. The big reason for his fears is the visitors' strength and his team's weakness in the field events. In Javelin Thrower Harry Williams and Discus Heaver Phil Looby the Explorers have a pair of men who appear mortal cinches to beat C. U.'s best.

Williams has thrown the spear 175 feet 9 inches, or more than 10 feet farther than the best mark Frank Cairo, of C. U., has made this season. Looby's best for the discus, 134 feet 4 inches, is more than 15 feet better than Cairo's previous maximum for this event. LaSalle's superiority in the high jump is expected to be even more pronounced because they have four men who can do higher than 5 feet 10 inches, which is tops for any C. U. leaper.

The Cardinals, however, hope to pile up many points in the races, led by Johnny Corbett, middle distance ace who set a record in the Mason-Dixon 2-mile run and who, in recent practice, has turned the distance in 9:49:7, fastest time ever posted by a C. U. runner.

Eddie Shore Will Buy Springfield Ice Club

Springfield, Mass., May 25 (AP).—Eddie Shore, veteran all-star defenseman for the championship Boston Bruins, said today he had reached an agreement with J. Lucien Garneau, former owner of the Springfield Indians, for the purchase of that International-American Hockey League Club.

Blue Ridge Horse Show Starts Today

180 Entries Slated For Competition at Berryville Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., May 26.—One-hundred and eighty entries, from some of the best known stables in northern Virginia are listed on the program of the Blue Ridge Hunt horse show which will be held tomorrow in the oak grove at Carter Hall, Millwood, beginning at 9 a. m. This is the forty-fourth annual exhibition sponsored by one of the oldest hunts in the State.

A Mackay Smith, manager, announced that besides the numerous entries that have been received from the Clarke County stables, the following have been received from outside the county: C. V. B. Cushman, of Upperville W. C. Seipp, Middleburg; Peach Bros., Upperville; Mrs. J. B. Anderson, Marshall; Fox Hollow Farm, Sperryville; B. H. Kelley, Round Hill; Miss Anna F. Hedrick, Arrington; John Hanna, Warm Springs; Mrs. E. H. Lihne, New York; J. B. Skinner, Middleburg; Turner Wiltshire, Middleburg; Mrs. Beatty Brown, Upperville; R. S. Tartiere, Middleburg; William F. Hitt, Middleburg and others.

All classes are well filled and the family class in which three or more members of a family must ride will again be featured.

Among the child riders will be Billy Greenhalgh, Norman Haymaker, jr., Barry Lee, Johnny Lee, Teddy Hewitt, Danny, Hetty and Matthew Mackay-Smith, Missie Randolph Elizabeth Beverley and Elaine Marie Tartiere.

As Clarke County thoroughbred breeding establishments have produced many winners, this show will draw a large crowd, among which is to be found many buyers.

The Clarke County Nurse Association will serve delicious lunches on the grounds. They are also selling the programs for the benefit of this association.

Oxon Hill Team Big League Timber

Manager Bob Talley, whose Oxon Hill (Md.) team in the Prince Georges County League meets Maryland Aces tomorrow at Sunny Brook, has four men in his line-up whom he thinks are of big league timber. They are Xander, a catcher; McFadden and Smith, pitchers, and Jack Shugrue, an outfielder.

Because he is a former big league catcher himself, having served with the St. Louis Cardinals for two years, Talley naturally thinks that Xander is the prize of the lot. The big backstop has been under the constant coaching of Talley, and according to him, will be wearing a major uniform before long.

Oxon Hill, which has won its three league games to date, has also set up an enviable team record. It has scored 63 runs off 65 hits, and despite the huge scores has turned in only two misplays. It will be favored to whip Maryland Aces tomorrow, as Fort Dupont clashes with Young Democrats and Capitol Heights faces Police Boys in the other two league games.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

George Case moves into a tie with Taft Wright for Man of the Month honors following his performances yesterday at Boston, where he was the big gun of the Nats' attack.

To Case, five points, because he made three of the Nats' nine hits including a double, and each time attempted to start a rally by leading off an inning with a hit.

To Dutch Leonard, three points, because he kept the Nats in the ball game by pitching shutout ball after the third inning.

To Jimmy Wasdell, one point, because he drove in a run in the ninth with a single.

Taft Wright	24	Jake Early	8
George Case	24	Rick Ferrell	8
Cecil Travis	18	Dutch Leonard	8
Alex Alexandra	17	Buddy Myer	7

Southern California Gains 15 Places in Finals, Semifinals

U., which placed 10 men for the second-best showing, and Wes Wallace, of Fordham, all made the grade in the quarter-mile and thereby won another crack at Long John Woodruff. The giant Pittsburgh senior took the heat in 48.4 seconds and then loafed through a half-mile in 1 minute 57 seconds to qualify for defense of both his individual titles, with the day's fastest trials. Tomorrow, in addition to the 440 and 880, the Negro will anchor Pitt's mile relay team against Southern California, California, N. Y. U. and Cornell.

Behind U. S. C. and N. Y. U., the top place winners were Pittsburgh, 1937 winner, with 9; Yale 7, California and Cornell 6 each, and Fordham, Michigan State and Penn State, 5 each.

Nova Can Force Baer to Fold Up, Gene Tunney Says

Nyack, N. Y., May 26 (AP).—Former Heavyweight Champion Gene Tunney crawled far enough out on the limb today to predict that if Lou Nova elects to do so he can make Max Baer quit in their 15-rounder at Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

"Baer is a sucker for a one-two punch and this boy has a honey," said the learned Mr. Tunney after watching Nova go through a rather tame six-round rehearsal.

"This is the first time I've seen him since his fight with Tommy Farr. He has acquired a lot of polish and is rapidly learning how to handle himself in there."

Two-Day Show At Fort Myer Opens Today

Top Field of Entries Get Last Schooling For Washington Meet

Fort Myer's annual two-day horse show, which swings into action today at the show grounds just west of Memorial Bridge, has attracted a top field of local entries eager to get in a bit of last-minute schooling for the Washington Horse Show next week.

Among the entries are Mrs. N. H. McDowell's smooth-fencing mare, Modern Melody; Mrs. Chip Robert's John the Baptist and her 3-year-old colt, Shiner; William Washburn's amazing little mare, the Jitterbug; Lieut. Charles B. MacClelland with the Government's Smacko and Chance Me; Capt. Henri Luebbermann, a trifle stiff from an overdose of polo but still ready to show Dress Rehearsal, his well-mannered hunter, and chunky little Sandy; Mrs. Leslie Carter's good hack, Dream Girl; Bertha Buckley's Timber Queen, and many others.

Georgetown Opens Road Trip, Beating Temple Nine, 14-7

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, May 26. — The Georgetown University baseball team today successfully opened a two-game road trip which will climax its season by walloping Temple, 14-7, for its ninth victory and Temple's ninth loss.

The Hoyas' biggest inning was the sixth, in which they pushed over seven runs aided by George Pajak's homer with three on base. Temple errors helped along several of the Hoyas' rallies.

Wixed went the route for Georgetown.

Revision of Classes Noted for Events To Be Held July 3, 4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 26.—Important changes and revision of classes are noted in the premium lists just off the press for the Culpeper Horse Show and races, to be held on Monday and Tuesday, July 3 and 4.

With this sporting classic of northern Virginia just six weeks off, President Melville Church 3d, and his committees have been putting in some effective work on the program, and through John S. Thornton, secretary-treasurer, have announced increase in cash prizes and a greater number of sterling silver trophies.

The list calls for 31 show ring classes and four flat races each day. The popular outside course jumping class will be shown each day and on the closing day will feature the Corinthian and Hunt Club teams, with riders in the field colors.

The Good Hands class, inaugurated last year by Lewis L. Strauss, of Culpeper and New York, will be shown again this year. Mr. Strauss, vice president of the show, donates a silver trophy in the class. He also sponsors the Culpeper Challenge Plate, which must be won three times for possession. The plate was retired last year when awarded to The Bear from Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Stables. Whoever wins a leg on the plate this year will also win a miniature of the larger plate, held for permanent property.

Gold Standard Gone Forever, Dr. Nadler Says

Atlantic City, N. J., May 26 (AP).—Dr. Marcus Nadler, of New York University's Graduate School of Business Administration, predicted today that the gold standard would never return.

He told 600 Pennsylvania bankers at the final session of their forty-fifth annual convention that no nation wanted to return to the gold standard, and that the rapid flow of gold into this country "sooner or later is bound to cause a serious problem."

"The gold standard has been discarded," he reiterated, "and in spite of the lip service rendered to it in a number of countries by leading statesmen, there is no desire to return to it."

Dr. Nadler said the idea of a "managed currency" was becoming even more firmly entrenched, both in the United States and in Europe, despite the fact most of the new money schemes "have not worked out satisfactorily."

Discussing the national debt, Dr. Nadler remarked that "in spite of the huge spending, the large public debt, and the devaluation of the dollar, the United States is fundamentally sound."

Dr. F. F. Lininger, of Pennsylvania State College's department of agricultural economics, told the bankers farmers were ashamed to borrow money from banks, and that the bankers should do something to "correct this point of view."

Export Subsidy Proposal Lifts Cotton Futures

New York, May 26 (AP).—Cotton buyers, encouraged by Secretary Wallace's stand today for an export subsidy for the staple, bid prices up 2 to 11 points.

Wallace's speech at Little Rock, Ark., stressed the need to expedite foreign sales of cotton and called for continuation of Government price-pegging loans. Consequently today's buying of futures centered on new crop deliveries, with both foreign and domestic trade interests active.

The near month closed only 2 points up, after weathering light selling, limited to Southern offerings, profit taking and some Bombay pressure.

Also cheering to cotton buyers were Worth Street estimates placing cotton goods sales for the day at close to 10,000,000 yards. Prices were firm.

Wheat Prices Jump to New Season's High

Demand for Flour and Eastern Buying Held Factors in Rise

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 26.—Revival of flour demand and purchasing credited by some brokers to an Eastern professional trader lifted wheat prices unexpectedly more than 2 cents a bushel today to new highs for the season.

Overcoming early weakness, with prices dipping as much as ⅝ cent, the market rallied 2½ cents from early lows to 79¼ and 79⅛ for July and September contracts and 80 cents for December delivery. Heavy profit taking pared the gains partially but wheat closed 1⅛@1⅝ higher than yesterday. July 78⅝@78¾, September 78½@78¾.

Lifting of hedges on flour business helped to stiffen the market after prices showed signs of further weakening due to well distributed rains in both the winter and spring wheat belts. At least one sale to a large baking concern involving 200,000 barrels of flour in the Southwest, the equivalent of almost 1,000,000 bushels of wheat, was confirmed and there were reports that other business was done.

In addition, further trade comment on continuation of Federal spending and possibility of greater producer participation in the Government wheat loan program attracted attention. The ease with which prices advanced encouraged buyers and touched off short covering.

Other gains followed wheat upward. Corn closed unchanged to ⅞ higher, July 51⅝@51¾, September 53@53⅛; oats ⅛@½ up; rye ⅝@⅞ higher; lard 3 to 8 higher.

Elfast's Exchange Seat Sold for $63,000

New York, May 26 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange seat of Henry C. Elfast, who was expelled from the organization Wednesday, was sold today for $63,000.

Sale of the membership was ordered by the exchange's committee on admission in the interest of those who may have claims against the former firm of Elfast, Frisk & Co. Elfast's expulsion was based, the exchange reported, on alleged irregular practices in the handling of customers' accounts. The price obtained for Elfast's seat was unchanged from the last transaction.

Tin Production At Five-Year Low

New York, May 26 (AP).—World production of tin in March dropped to 7,500 tons, the lowest for more than five years, the May bulletin of the International Tin Research & Development Council said today. March output brought the total for the first quarter to 33,400 tons, a decrease of 23 per cent from 43,000 tons in the like 1938 quarter.

Apparent world tin consumption in March was estimated at 13,400 tons. Consumption in the first three months declined to 35,700 tons from 41,000 a year ago.

Stocks Are Firm but Range Is Narrow Steel and Metal Shares Make Progress Street Hopes for Tax Adjustments

New York, May 26.—The stock market held firm today, doing its best to consolidate the progress of the previous two sessions. There was a modest rally in the fourth hour but it didn't get far and on the whole the list kept to a narrow range, closing up 0.24 point on the average. Trading was more restricted than during the preceding days, only 623,870 shares changing hands. Oils and rails were barely steady but there was fair progress in the steel and metal divisions.

Fractional gains predominated throughout the list and except in the higher priced stocks there were few issues that moved as much as a point between their highs and lows. The composite average met resistance on the upside exactly at the level where it stopped on Thursday.

Sentiment in the street is more optimistic than would seem to be justified by the charts of business progress. Two important considerations which contribute to this are the promise of tax adjustments and the fact that at least one major cause of the poor business statistics has now been removed, namely the coal strike. In the automobile industry, however, the prevalence of labor trouble is continuing to slow up activity, and the figures on automobile output published today reflected this. The estimate of Ward's placed the week's production at a new low for 1939 and with a legal holiday next week the industry will have an additional deterrent.

The Federal Reserve's index of industrial production, made public today, supplies evidence that supports the belief that April's low markets were due more to our own domestic business situation than to threats of war abroad. The index of industrial production broke sharply from 96 per cent in March to 92 per cent in April. In a large measure this reflected the bituminous tie-up, for the component on minerals declined from 110 per cent to 94 and this affected carloadings, which were down from 66 to 60 per cent.

Trade Turns Upward

There are hints of slight upturns now and the resumption of coal mining should be reflected in the indices within a week. Dun & Bradstreet report that for the most part the trend of trade and production was mildly upward this week. Retailers averaged above the low levels of a year ago but complained of weather conditions while in wholesale lines the more liberal attitude toward forward buying shown last week continued in evidence. Rising commodity prices have contributed to buying and the moody index of domestic spot commodity prices had edged upward to its highest level since early in March. Further strength in commodities would without doubt cause businessmen to get away from the prevalent hand to mouth buying policy.

Nothing developed on the tax reform front to shake the confidence of the street that some alleviation will be granted. While changes will not go as far as was hoped early in the session, the fact that any are to be made constitutes a victory for business and the saner element in Washington, for it is a recognition of the wisdom of permitting business to make a profit—a right which in some quarters has, for political reasons, been painted as more or less immoral.

Loft a Feature

Loft stood out in today's trading, gaining nearly a point. United States Rubber held to its upward course and Bethlehem and United States Steel were up fractions while Youngstown Sheet & Tube added a point. Chrysler and General Motors were slightly below their previous closing levels while among specialties Canada Dry came forward nearly a point. Johns Manville and Kodak gained 2 points each and Westinghouse a point while among the utilities the preferred of Commonwealth & Southern gained a point.

Wheat featured commodity trading, advancing to new highs for the season on flour demand and professional buying. Shorts were made uncomfortable and all grains were carried forward on sympathetic support. The close for wheat was up 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents a bushel while cotton added 2 to 11 points.

Treasury Bonds Lower

With the exception of United States Government securities, listed bonds presented a firm front today. Gains were general in the corporate and foreign departments, both speculative and investment issues reflected modest but steady buying. Treasury bonds slipped slightly lower, possibly on apprehensions of further expansion of the deficiteering policy of the Roosevelt Administration. Turnover in all bonds was $5,450,000, which is half a normal day's business and less than the dealings of the previous session.

Recessions in long term Treasury bonds ranged to 7/32 point, continuing the modest set-back that resulted from evidence of fresh spending ideas in Washington. The decline is of little significance, compared to the rise in longest bonds of some 5 points since the start of the year. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations were quiet and barely changed. Telephone issues and best grade power and light bonds held in the corporate department. Leading rails and industrials were neglected.

Prime Rails in Demand

The better railroad bonds in the speculative group remained in demand, and the more moderately priced issues likewise advanced. Borderline and default rails were quietly firm. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles improved slightly, largely on the continued advance in equities. Local tractions were idle and irregular, perhaps on the theory that unification talks will continue for a long while to come. International Telephone bonds continued their brisk upswing.

Foreign dollar bonds were marked upward with hardly an exception. Best grade issues of Scandinavia, Canada and Australia did well on the prospects for continued peace. Polish bonds improved sharply, and a little buying appeared in German, Italian and Japanese bonds. Colombians moved up in the Latin-American section on the resumption of debt settlement negotiations, while others advanced because of Administration plans to lend other peoples' money to our so-called good neighbors.

Gold Imports Drop to $86,365,218 in Week

Gold imports dropped again to $86,365,218 in the week ended May 19. The amount was about the same as two weeks previous, after the intervening week had jumped gold arrivals to $160,319,093.

The latest week's imports included $61,075,437 from England, $9,408,812 from the Netherlands, $3,920,427 from Canada and $5,469,540 from Japan.

Silver imports dropped slightly in the week to $1,000,610, including $622,430 from Mexico and $145,810 from Peru.

Retail Advertising 7.9% Over Year Ago

Chicago, May 26.—During the week ended May 13, volume of retail display advertising placed in the newspapers of 80 major cities was 7.9 per cent greater than during the corresponding week of 1938, Advertising Age reported today.

Retailers placed a total of 21,658,697 lines of display advertising in newspapers in these cities during that week, compared with 20,065,199 lines placed in the same cities last year. The gain for the week is the largest registered thus far this year, with the result that for the 19 weeks to date, 1939 linage is almost identical with that of 1938.

Sargent Resigns As C. & N. W. President

Chicago, May 26 (AP).—The Chicago & North Western Railway announced today Fred W. Sargent, its president since 1925, had resigned May 24 because of ill health. The announcement said he also was relinquishing his directorships in all the railroad's subsidiaries.

No date has been set for the election of a successor.

More Jobs Await College Men This June

63 of 100 Universities Report That Demand Exceeds Year Ago

Minneapolis, May 26.—More jobs await the nation's college graduates this June than were available for last year's seniors. More employers are represented on college campuses this spring, and more jobs are offered per employer, the Northwestern National Life Insurance company finds in its fourth annual survey of employment demand.

Of 100 universites and colleges reporting in the survey, 63 find the number of employment calls definitely greater than a year ago; increases range from 10 per cent to 200 per cent. Only 14 schools find employment demand lower this year, and the remaining 23 report about the same number of job calls for their graduates as in the spring of '38.

Based on current employment demand, 57 of the colleges estimate that 80 per cent or more of their June seniors will be in positions before the end of 1939; a number see ample demand to furnish jobs for all their graduates who are seeking employment.

Technical and industrial concerns are active bidders for new personnel this year, with aviation showing the greatest expansion in demand. Accounting and sales promotion jobs are offered by a wide diversity of manufacturing, wholesale and retail concerns. Various phases of government work provide the bulk of the placement opportunities for several schools.

Starting salaries are at approximately the same levels as last year, generally ranging between $95 and $135 per month, though outstanding seniors are getting offers of $175 in some cases.

Aviation 5-Year Research Cost Is 44 Millions

New York, May 26 (AP).—John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, tonight made public an industry survey showing, he said, that American manufacturers of airplanes, engines and propellers spent $44,000,000 on research in the last five years. The work, he added, cost the industry 63 per cent more than its net profit for the period.

"As a result of the industry's heavy investment in technical development," said Jouett, "it has continued to produce airplanes of recognized superiority throughout the world.

"That is evidenced by the large volume of sales abroad despite the most intense kind of competition from some foreign industries which have been aided by their own governments with liberal subsidies and credits."

He placed at $143,000,000, or 30.6 per cent of the industry's total sales, the amount of goods sold abroad during the period of the survey, 1934-38 inclusive. He stressed that the combined domestic and foreign commercial sales amounted to $250,000,000, or 53.4 per cent of the total.

"In other words," he concluded, "more than half the industry's business has been outside the military and naval services of the United States."

He placed gross sales at $468,000,000 and net profit at $27,000,000.

Federal Income Tops 5 Billion As Debt Hits Peak

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury announced yesterday that the Government's income passed $5,000,000,000 on May 24.

Although revenue was approximately $425,000,000 behind the same date last year, officials expected that receipts at the end of the fiscal year June 30, to surpass the $5,520,070,000 estimated in the President's last budget message, because another quarterly installment on income taxes is due June 15.

Expenditures for the fiscal year to May 24 totaled $8,174,907,183, which was about $1,500,000,000 more than in the similar period of the previous fiscal year, and the deficit, now at $3,168,617,689, is about $1,900,000,000 more than on the same date last year.

While revenues now appear to be in excess of anticipations expenditures are slated to fall slightly under the budgeted $9,592,329,000. The public debt is at a record high $40,240,436,509, which is $3,075,896,194 more than at the beginning of the fiscal year.

Certain-Teed Elects Hartley President

New York, May 26 (AP).—Henry J. Hartley, former president of Nichols Engineering & Research Corporation, was elected president of Certain-Teed Products Corporation, building materials manufacturers, today.

He succeeds C. L. von Egloffstein, who recently resigned because he "was not in sympathy" with the company's management policies.

Manufacturing Output Held Close to Needs

But Activity in First Quarter Was Well Above Last Year

New York, May 26.—Following the moderate set-back in December from the 1937 peak in November, manufacturing activity has been at an unusually steady rate, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The index of factory output, on the basis of 1923-1925 as 100 and unadjusted for seasonal variation, after declining from 103 in November to 98 in December, remained unchanged during January and February, and then rose only 1 point in March to 99.

Manufacturing activity in the first quarter, however, was at a considerably higher rate than in the same period last year. The increase in factory output from the volume of a year ago amounted to 29.4 per cent. At the same time, production this year was 16.4 per cent smaller than in the first quarter of 1937.

Prices of manufactured goods have shown little change since last November and, consequently, the value of factory output, as well as the quantity produced, held relatively steady during the four months ended with March. The index of the value of factory output ranged from a low of 79.5 in January to a high of 80.5 in March.

The index of the value of factory output during the first quarter of this year was slightly above the estimated 1939 index of factory income, which is a measuring rod of normal for the value of factory output. The excess in the value of factory output during the first quarter was so small, however, that no pronounced corrective movement is indicated.

In fact, expansion is a possibility, since there have been many times in the past when over-production has been considerably larger than it has been so far this year. If such expansion occurs, however, it will probably be postponed until later in the year. At the present time, there seems to be a tendency for manufacturing activity to show some slackening.

Federal Savings Rise in Virginia And Maryland

More people are placing their savings in insured savings and loan associations in Maryland and Virginia than ever before, Nugent Fallon, general manager of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, said yesterday.

In Maryland the number increased from 16,985 in April, 1938, to 27,285 on May 1, this year. In the 12 months, the amount of their savings rose from $13,348,030 a year ago to $19,079,450 on May 1, or $5,731,420.

During April the 43 insured associations in Maryland made 259 loans on homes totaling $859,000. As of May 1, the aggregate amount of "direct reduction" loans on the books of these institutions was $16,858,000.

In Virginia investors increased from 7,834 in April, 1938, to $10,952 on May 1, this year. In the 12 months, the amount of their savings rose from $7,808,410 a year ago to $10,920,080 on May 1, or $3,111,670.

During April the 20 Federal associations in Virginia made 167 loans on homes totaling $458,000. As of May 1, the aggregate amount of "direct reduction" loans on the books of these institutions was $15,284,000. A "direct reduction" loan is one which decreases with each monthly payment. The payments are applied both to principal and interest.

Com. Inv. Trust Votes Regular Dividends

New York, May 26.—Directors of Commercial Investment Trust Corporation yesterday declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1 per share in cash on the common stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 10.

The regular quarterly dividend of $1.06¼ on the convertible preferred stock, $4.25 series of 1935, was also declared, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 10.

Hope of Profit Life of Trade, Bank Declares

Boston First National Cites Historic Failures Of 'Collective Living'

Boston, Mass., May 26.—"The prospect for profit is the mainspring of economic activity and around this has centered our great industrial progress of the past 150 years," the June letter of the First National Bank of Boston today says. "The release of individual energy under such a stimulus is the secret of the success of the great American system and the key to progress. Individuals will work hard and long to provide for themselves and their dependents. But take away personal incentive, then the contribution of individuals to the community at large is substantially lowered.

"This has been demonstrated over and over again in various attempts at collective living. Communism was tried in New England 300 years ago. The Plymouth Colony adopted a plan whereby the colonists 'all worked for a common storehouse from which all were fed and clothed.' But actual famine stared them in the face as 'the emigrants did not labour' and 'paralysis was affecting the settlement.'

"In consequence of this situation Gov. Bradford permitted the breaking up of the contract and assigned each family its own parcel of land to raise its own food. 'The cheerful effort of personal energy succeeded to the sloth of communal interest, and plenty followed.' In the course of time the spirit of the Massachusetts Bay pioneers built up a flourishing world commerce and laid the foundation for private enterprise in this country. Under this system the United States with less than 7 per cent of the world's population accounts for nearly as much wealth as all the other countries combined.

Failure in Russia

"The outstanding modern example of the failure of the socialized motive is found in Russia which built a communistic society upon the ruins of the Czarist regime. Private ownership was ruthlessly abolished and the state confiscated all tools and equipment while income was distributed in accordance with one's needs. But in order to avoid collapse of the economic structure Russia has been compelled to adopt the principle of 'differential' awards and we find today as great a discrepancy in wages between skilled and unskilled workers in Russia as in this country. The 'intelligenssia'—the scientifically trained and professional workers—are a privileged class who receive better pay, wear better clothes and have more comforts than the others. So in little more than two decades, Russia, after having gone the whole

Montgomery County Plans Memorial Rites

MONTGOMERY COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Memorial Day will be widely celebrated in Montgomery County with a number of exercises starting tomorrow and continuing through Tuesday.

Heading the list is the annual program conducted by Cissel-Saxon Post, No. 41, American Legion, which will start at 12 noon tomorrow at the memorial stone in front of the Silver Spring National Guard Armory.

A memorial mass will be celebrated in St. John's Catholic Church in Forest Glen at 11 a. m. tomorrow by the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy. The sermon will be given by the Very Rev. Joseph Nelligan, of Baltimore.

Special Memorial Day exercises will be held Tuesday by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rotary Club at the Columbia Country Club in Chevy Chase. Veterans of the Civil, Spanish-American and World Wars will be honored by the program being arranged by a committee headed by Dr. Floyd J. Carter.

Red Cross Observance

A county-wide observance of the patriotic holiday is planned Tuesday by the Junior Red Cross, which is arranging to have the children of the county schools distribute baskets of flowers and decorate graves of war veterans in the county cemeteries.

The gifts of flowers will go to shut-ins and others not able to go to cemeteries. Three branch headquarters have been established and flowers may be left at the Bethesda Fire House, Chevy Chase Firehouse or the Jesup Blair Community Center in Silver Spring.

District chairmen in charge of this program are Mrs. F. Eliot Middleton and Mrs. J. Frederick Imirie, Bethesda; Mrs. Roger J. Whiteford, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. D. W. Gilchrist and Mrs. Joseph B. Matre, Silver Spring.

Former United States Senator Blair Lee will be the speaker at the American Legion exercises in Silver Spring tomorrow. The Rev. J. Wesley Loftis, pastor of the Silver Spring Baptist Church, will pronounce the benediction. Music will be furnished by the St. Michael's School Band, and William E. Hewitt, bugler of Service Company, First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, will sound taps. The Service Company will attend the exercises in a body, coming to the memorial stone from the Silver Spring Baptist Church, where they will attend special Memorial Day services. The Sons of the American Legion also will attend in a body.

Arrangements for the services are being made by a committee consisting of Capt. Frank L. Hewitt, chairman; Paul Cogger, William H. Small and Frank Proctor.

Deceased members of the post for whom the services will be held are Alair Woodson, Leroy Small, John Saxon, Edward Burdette, Cecil Bacon, Hontz Ely, Walter Conrad, John Wagner, Marvin Jones, Jesse H. Veitch, Don E. Clark, William Hargraeves, Daniel Geary, Daniel Doherty, William S. Sheets, Joseph Shadle, Paul March, William T. Miller, Carroll Cissell, Paul Hull, William Lusby and Charles R. Stubbs.

Recital at Silver Spring

Silver Spring—A dramatic recital followed by a garden party will be held at the Academy of the Holy Names in Silver Spring at 3 p. m. tomorrow in celebration of Academy Day. Three one-act plays will be presented by the students under the direction of Mrs. Dee Shannon. A number of Catholic dignitaries have been invited to attend the affair.

Silver Spring Party

Silver Spring—An entertainment titled "A Night of Fun" will be given by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School Wednesday at 8 p. m. A short business meeting will precede the entertainment.

Supper at Woodfield

Woodfield—a cold plate supper and strawberry and ice cream festival will be given by the Woodfield Ladies Aid Society tonight in Woodfield Hall. Arrangements are being handled by a committee consisting of Mrs. Cromwell King, Mrs. Ralph Burdette and Mrs. Elmer Green.

Dance at Barnesville

Democratic Club of Poolesville and Barnesville will give a dance Monday night at the Barnesville pavilion, according to an announcement by Byron Thompson, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Benefit Dance at Olney

Olney.—The Sherwood Parent-Teacher Association will give a dance Monday at 9 p. m. at Brooke Johns Old Barn in Olney for the benefit of the Sherwood School. An entertainment program will be given with Brooke Johns as master of ceremonies

Benefit By Will

Rockville.—The three children of Mrs. Eliza A. Smith, and the widow and children of her son are the beneficiaries under her will, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans Court here. They share equally, the instrument directing that the estate be converted into money for distribution. J. B. Smith, a son, and Walter Haines, son-in-law, are named executors. The will was executed January 15, 1936. It does not state the value of the estate.

Terhune to Speak

Bethesda.—Ralph D. Terhune, of the United States Bureau of Standards, will discuss "Perpetual Motion" at the final meeting of the year of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, which will be held Monday, June 5, at 8 p. m., in the Bethsda County Building.

To Speak at Bethesda

Representative Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Seventh District Republican Club on Wednesday, June 7, at the Bethesda elementary school, according to an annuoncement by R. B. Sager, president of the club.

B'nai B'rith in Tie

American Linen, of the Sports Center League, and B'nai B'rith, of the Fraternity Softball League, played to an 11-11 tie yesterday on the Mounment Grounds. The fielding of B'nai B'rith Lou Seigel was a feature of the game.

School Buses 39% Unsafe, Virginia Told

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 26.—D. M. Baldwin, safety engineer for the division of motor vehicles, asserted today that 883 of the State's 2,252 buses carrying school children were "unsafe."

A State police survey in February and March, he said, showed only 138 or 5.8 per cent in first class condition. A total of 1,239 or 55 per cent, were rated "B," meaning they were in a passable condition. The remaining 39 per cent, he said, were in "unsafe condition" to carry school children.

Speaking before the fifth Statewide Safety Conference, Baldwin said in most instances school superintendents knew of the situation but lacked funds to remedy it.

One of the major problems, he said, was loading as many as 104 passengers in a bus made to carry about 80.

Some rural school bus operators, the survey showed, used their buses for odd jobs around the farm and in one instance a school bus was used to haul cattle in spare hours.

Col. Leroy Hodges, State comptroller, substituting on the program for Col. Marion S. Battle, head of the division of motor vehicles, discussed a proposal to set up adult driving schools with the aid of WPA funds.

Intruder Escapes

Alberta Hammond, colored, who conducts a restaurant at 1225 Queen street, at an early hour yesterday morning greeted a would-be intruder with an unexpected reception of shots. She was awakened by the sound of someone at her window and found wooden slats had been removed. She fired at the open window, and then ran to the door and fired again, but failed to hit her target. She then summoned the police, but the intruder has escaped.

Jailed as Drunk

Henrietta Phillips, colored, when brought into police court yesterday morning as a witness in a civil case, came singing "Here I Come," and was sent to jail for five days on a drunk charge.

Henrietta had been summoned to appear at 10 o'clock, and when she failed to show up, Deputy City Sergeant Frank Moriarty went for her and brought her to court, but owing to her inability to testify the case she was summoned for was postponed.

Harrisonburg Defeats Salem

Harrisonburg, Va., May 26 (AP).—Harrisonburg made it two straight over Salem tonight, 6 to 5. Lefty Palumbo held the home club to six hits but three of these were bunched in the second when the winners tallied four times.

Lefty Bill Eddins surrendered before a two-run Salem rally in the ninth and Lefty Ward Long disposed of the last two men. McAndrews tripled to score Williams and then tallied on Mazur's fly.

Brelich and Schenz were the only batters to get two hits.

First Battalion Wins

AVAILABLE JUNE 1

A new apartment project designed for families of discriminating taste; location, convenience, equipment and spaciousness assure happy, carefree and comfortable living.

Four separate buildings enclosing a large, beautifully landscaped garden-court provide spacious, cooling grounds. Also a play court for children.

Just across from Rock Creek Park. Sixteenth street bus line at the corner, schools, stores and churches within a few minutes' walk. Ample parking space for your automobile.

Construction is the finest available both in workmanship and materials. Featured among the many extras are soundproofing, Venetian blinds, built-in tubs with showers, painted walls, metal kitchen cabinets, table-top ranges, large refrigerators and by far the most important is air conditioning for cool, sleepful summer nights.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

AS IS THE accustomed wont twice a year in the Procurement Division of the Supply Service, Veterans Administration, employes are now being called upon to work overtime. As usual, the employes are disgruntled.

Now, they are required to work an additional hour every day in their annual spring schedule. To be dismissed at the regular hour a clerk must submit a memo to the chief of the division.

Only one form of excuse is accepted—that a visit to either a dentist or a physician is contemplated. Then the overtime must be worked later.

These are charges made against the division by U. F. W. A. Local 15, which adds: "Extended leave is not allowed and typists may not take annual leave during the months of May and June.

"Who benefits by the overtime? Certainly not the overworked typists and clerks, who receive neither compensatory time off nor extra pay. Is this the means by which millions of dollars of appropriated funds may be turned back by the Veterans Administration each year?" the organization asks.

It is charged that this situation cannot be termed an emergency one—as the custom reaches back for 10 years. The difficulty is seen in the tremendous increase in the building of Veterans Administration facilities and the absence of any increase in the working personnel here.

The organization has suggested that employes be detailed to the division from other units where the work-load is light or that temporary employes be hired for these periods.

DEAN S. S. Steinberg, of the College of Engineering, University of Maryland, will speak on "Land Title Description by Reference to a System of Plane Co-ordinates," before the Federal Bar Association at its luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m., Wednesday, in the National Press Club. Lawyers in the Federal service are invited to attend the luncheons, which are held every Wednesday at the National Press Club.

The trend to move Federal agricultural scientists from Washington to the nearby field takes further impetus with the completion of the very swell Patuxent Research Refuge near Bowie, Md.

The idea is to clear the big South Agriculture Building here of the scientists, placing them in field stations, where they will have closer contact with research activities. The Patuxent Research Refuge is one of the places they will go—Beltsville, of course, being another.

The Patuxent station, where research will be made to learn the relationship between agriculture, forestry and wildlife, will prove a pleasant environment. It is a 3,000-acre tract on the old Snowden estate, a pleasant place done over in the colonial mood. Already the farm is being whipped into shape and a number of animals have been penned up for scientific experiment. It seems one of the best stations the Government could send a man to. It may be several years before the plan of sending the scientists to ground stations takes effect.

LAST YEAR the N. F. F. E. awarded a bronze medal to its fifth vice president, Ulrey J. Biller, for outstanding contribution to the organization during the year. The award went to Biller for his researches into Federal retirement, and the presentation was made at a luncheon in the Washington Hotoel. Now President Luther Steward and Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally ask all local unions and State and regional federations to submit the names of candidates for a similar award—to be made at the national convention in San Francisco this year. The nominations, which should carry a supporting statement, must be at the national headquarters by July 8.

Bob Burns Says—

There ain't nothin' in life as important as bein' happy. That's the aim of everybody on earth—to be peaceful and happy. Of course, there are exceptions to that rule. My wife went to a party last night and saw another woman wearin' a dress just like the one she had on. Well, both those women were peaceful, but they weren't happy.

My Uncle Oliver Wendell Hink, the poet, is probably the happiest man I know. Once Grandpa Snazzy went over to his room and said, "Oliver, here I find you livin' in this barren room with nothin' but a goat and poundin' that typewriter. I know you ain't been sellin' any poetry. How've you been livin'?"

Oliver smiled and said, "Snazzy, we're gettin' along just fine. I like goat's milk and she's just crazy about rejection slips."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A card authority who is a member of the Society of American Magicians adds some interesting comments concerning the profuseness of 13-suit hands discussed earlier this week, which strongly indicate that prestidigitation rather than distribution is responsible for the freaks.

Our anonymous magician says:

"There is only one authentic record of 13 of a suit held by one player. That was in India, many years ago, and it was the first as well as the last.

"Divide the odds against 13 of a suit to one player, multiplied by the odds against its being spades, and if there are a minimum of two or three hundred million hands dealt at the bridge table every day, it should be only once in 183 years that any such hand should appear.

"Contrast this with the explanation in the book 'Gamblers Don't Gamble,' by MacDougall, and it is surprising that 13 in a suit is not dealt to someone somewhere every day."

Luck Evens Up

Normal distribution can be weird enough without artificial assistance. Today's deal was freakish from two angles, for not only was the distribution abnormal, but the bidding and play as well. If it were not that it succeeded in rescuing a pair who were 2,400 points down on the score sheet, making them almost solvent, we would condemn the proceedings heartily. As it is, no matter how much we may disapprove of the bidding and play, we must conclude that the mysterious machinations of a capricious fate somehow seem to take care of those who cannot help themselves.

Here is the story as it was told by H. D. L., the contributor.

"The last hand of our family game last night found my partner and me 2,400 points in arrears. You can readily imagine my sensations at the hand I was dealt, together with what I claim was strong bidding on the part of my accomplice.

Assistance From Adversary

"What I want to know is whether or not my bidding, as South was justified. As to the play, the cards broke unbelievably and the hand was 'in.'

"West opened the seven of hearts, thank heaven. My ten took the trick. I played the queen of diamonds to finesse the king, and it proved successful. The three of diamonds was taken in dummy with the jack; the ace dropped the king and ten, and I discarded my three lowest clubs on the last three tricks. I played a small spade through East (who, by the way, threw off a small spade on one of the good diamonds) and when he played low, I went up with the king which dropped the blank queen in West's hand. A small spade back forced East's ace and that was that."

Although we are reluctant to find fault with anything so marvelously successful, we feel constrained to criticize South for his unusual leap to four no trump. Six no trump, of course, cannot be made without West's assistance in leading low from his heart honors and in failing to cover the diamond queen with his king, which would set up the ten for East.

Six spades is the only slam contract that seems at all justifiable, and that depends on the correct guessing of the trump honors.

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER XX

Peg was to remember December as one of the happiest months she had ever known. The card affair, she had decided with relief was over and done with. Those men had pulled a clever ruse on Aunt Mehalie, had got the all-important card and that was evidently that. Hewitt was constantly at Aunt Mehalie's in the evenings for his invitations were lulling somewhat as folks, including the Polks, migrated to Florida and as the fever of entertaining the debutantes began to abate with preparations for family Christmases.

Hewitt had told Peg that these quiet evenings in Georgetown were really a godsend. "When there's a social lull like this it's swell for tired wits and over-strained nerves, but it's foul for business," he had explained, seriously. "Washington is a funny place. I don't know of any other city in the country where you lunch and dine with those with whom you do business, where the business conversation flows into the social hour, where impromptu conferences of great importances are held on drawing-room settees and where policies of deepest concern are decided at a dinner table.

"There's a close tie between the social and administrative and business worlds here. That's one of the things you'll have to understand fully when we're married, Peg. Your part in the scheme. Wives don't exactly dominate the scene but they are an integral part of it." He had looked at her rather soberly. "And a wife can make or break her husband in this burg. I know. I've watched it happen."

Wedding Plans

Peg had remembered that when she and Joan went shopping for her trousseau on Saturday afternoons and had let it influence her purchases. She and Hewitt had completed their plans. The wedding would be in March with a formal announcement of their engagement preceding it by two or three weeks.

They would honeymoon on a ship's cruise with a possible stopover in Bermuda. When they returned they would take a hotel suite, not at one of the biggest hotels but definitely a good one. Hewitt had made her see that the right address was vital. Peg had teased Hewitt a little about all this. "We sound," she had said, wrinkling her nose at him, "as if we were going into a business partnership instead of marriage." To which Hewitt had said, very evenly, "in a way we are. Marriage is a business. Some wives find it out and their husbands go places. Others don't and they grub along for the rest of their lives."

Almost every evening that month Anthony came barging in from the State Department or parties he had been to. He would drop his hat on the hall table and stay to dinner at the slightest bid from anybody. He never stayed long if Hewitt was there.

Anthony was the only reason for December not being quite as perfect as it might have been. He was always beautifully gay, completely interested in the Christmas presents she and Joan had bought. He took a part in some of the wrapping and mailing, came in one night loaded down with Christmas tree gadgets.

But Peg knew that he was not happy beneath all that lacquer of gaiety. And there wasn't anything she could do to take the hurt out of his eyes. She was almost hopeful when Joan told her that Evangeline Martin's father had been sent to Washington for duty at the British embassy. Joan had explained that Anthony had known Evangeline in Shanghai when her father was there. They had been quite good friends and Evangeline had called him promptly on arriving in the city. He had been seeing a good bit of her.

Gay Party

Then there was Christmas Eve itself with a big tree in the dining room, gleaming with new tinsel and frosty lights and a glorious gilt star. Beneath it were stacks of colorful boxes. For Joan, for Peg, for Duncan and Anthony, Aunt Mehalie, Hewitt and Uncle Nathaniel.

Uncle Nathaniel had moodily consented to spend Christmas Day in Washington. "But it's a truce for just one day," he had wired in reply to Joan's invitation. "You and Anthony chose your beds and you can lie in them. I don't want to come, but I shall."

He had come. A thin, tall, heavily paunched old man. Spoiled by his money, his power. But Peg knew that despite the way he barked at Joan and Anthony, he loved them in his way; he believed in his puzzled old heart that he had done and was doing what was best for them. There had been a wash of mist in his eyes as they had all opened their presents Christmas morning before the burning yule log and had handed him, finally, a great stack of red and silver boxes.

"For me?" he had said and his voice shook a little. 'Well, I'll be . . ."

He had left that night, carrying his little presents with as much gravity as he carried his million-dollar business. Those presents had meant something very dear to him. Gifts when he had always been the giver. Presents bought out of Joan's slim savings, Anthony's, Peg's and Aunt Mehalie's. At the airport waiting for his plane he had faced Joan and Anthony. He had said gruffly: "Well, maybe you're a better judge of a bed than I." He had pawed his sharp beak of a nose, self-consciously. "I've had a grand time, folks," he had said. And they knew he had meant it.

Peg Gets Ring

It was on Saturday after Christmas that Hewitt gave Peg her ring. A big square-cut diamond, flashing with small emeralds flanking it. An exquisite, sparkling, lovely thing. Peg had gasped over it. "Oh, Hewitt, you shouldn't have, darling. It's—it's much too gorgeous. I—I feel like Mrs. Astorbilt or something!"

To which Hewitt had said, very soberly: "It isn't too gorgeous at all. I wouldn't want you to wear anything less for an engagement ring, Peg."

She had wondered briefly without realizing that she did, if Hewitt had bought the ring for her own personal delight or for what people would think of his selection.

Duncan, coming back from New York, saw the ring for the first time and seemed to have the same reaction.

It was good to see Duncan almost natural again. Only occasionally would she find that queer, stricken look in his eyes. But almost as quickly as it came it went, for Joan, seeing it, too, would say something bright and sparkling and completely ridiculous. And in the next moment Duncan would be saying to her: "Come on, carrot-top. Let's go truckin'. I know where there's an orchestra that really knows how to get in the groove . . ."

Maizie Darton was the only one who didn't go into raptures over Peg's engagement ring. The girls at the office said: "Whew!" and "Gosh!" and "Boy, what a headlight!"

Joan and Aunt Mehalie had to try it on again and again to admire its flash and gleam. But Maizie Darton, lying on the sofa in her living room as Peg moved about in the kitchen fixing her supper, said: "Peg, I don't like it because it makes me terribly conscious of the holes in my overstuffed furniture and the windows that need washing, and those red-checked curtains in the kitchen. Maybe I don't like it because I don't like Hewitt Gill—much. I hope I'm wrong about that guy, Peg. But I said my little say long ago and I can't take it back just because you got yourself engaged to him. After all, I'm a rare dame One of those consistent kinds."

Peg said, gently: "You're wrong about Hewitt, Maizie. He's hard and ruthless at the office, but he isn't really like that when you get to know him."

Thinking of Baby

But Maizie didn't answer. She wasn't listening She had turned back to the Government pamphlet she was reading on "Care of the Very Young Infant." She was saying, "Gee, this book says that a baby has an open place on the top of his dome and when you're handling him you've got to remember that always. It doesn't close up until he's 18 months old!"

Peg smiled over the potatoes she was pealing. "How many more days now, Maizie?"

"The doctor said about a week," and she grinned. "Gee, it's good that Donald got that job at the gas station last week. That was just about the swellest Christmas present an expectant mother ever had, believe me. That job—and having a friend like you, Peg. You've been grand. I couldn't have got along without you, and if I sound nasty about Hewitt, it's only because—I'd die if you made a mistake. Honest I would, honey."

Off to Thalia

Three days before New Year's, Hewitt flew to Palm Beach on business to see some customers and to make some contacts there. "I'll put every minute of my trip to good use down there, Peg. The Polks know every one in the three-bracket fortunes. I'll make some very important contacts and I'll get a nice tan besides. Which I certainly need."

He wouldn't he told her, be back until the first of February, or at the latest February 15. "But you'll hear all the dope, darling. I'll write every night and telephone three times a week."

And when Peg had looked so utterly miserable over the separation, her blue eyes wide and unhappy, Hewitt had taken her in his arms and held her close. With his cheek against her soft hair, he had whispered: "If you're thinking of Thalia, don't do it, darling. You ought to realize that now. No one in the whole world counts but you . . ."

And so the days passed. All of January. One week into February. Peg got through them somehow. There was her work, her school and the plans for her wedding. There were Aunt Mehalie's Dames' meetings and movies with girl friends and she had made in the city. Maizie had her baby, a fine, big boy, at exactly one minute after 12 on New Year's morning. He was the first baby of the year and got his picture in all the papers. Mr. Nelson had the flu and recovered with a disposition that was just about the rarest thing Peg had ever coped with. Anthony was seeing more than a good bit of Evangeline Martin. He came to Aunt Mehalie's very seldom now.

House Robbed

But January wasn't all monotony for Peg. On four different occasions Aunt Mehalie's house was broken into. Twice the place was left in a shambles, chairs overturned, cushions slashed, pictures lopsided on the walls, drawers hanging open.

Neither Peg nor Aunt Mehalie could understand it. They counted the silver. They went through Aunt Mehalie's jewel box carefully. They checked up on everything they could think of, still nothing seemed to be missing. Nor could the police understand it. It was finally believed that a group of Georgetown boys, tough little mugs on the loose who were raiding grocery stores and laundries and some private homes, had broken into Aunt Mehalie's out of the sheer delight of vandalism. This had satisfied Peg for a day or two. It semed a likely enough explanation. That is, until she remembered that card again. And then she thought, "I wonder . . ." but faced a blank wall. There was no answer for her, of course.

Arlington Dental Clinics Start July 10

Dr. Pumphrey to Open Sessions at Health Center in Clarendon

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

Dr. T. W. Pumphrey has announced that dental clinics for preschool and school children will begin July 10 at the Clarendon Health Center, and continue through August.

From June 5 to 24 he will be at the Ballston School and from June 26 to July 8 at the Clarendon School.

Dr. Pumphrey is county school dentist and carries on his activities in the schools during the winter months. During summer, the dental clinics for children are held at the health centers.

There is a charge of 50 cents per tooth for those who are able to pay. A number of indigent cases are treated free.

Parents of children who are entering school next year are especially urged to have their children's teeth inspected either by their family dentist or at the dental clinics before the opening of school.

A complete clinic schedule will be announced later.

Morgenthau Asks House To Remove Tax Irritants

Declares Profits And Other Levies Should Be Eased To Aid Business

(Morgenthau's Text—Page 4.)

By Felix Cotten.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau recommended to the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday the enactment of tax legislation to promote the use of idle money for industrial expansion.

He asked that consideration be given to the removal of "irritants" to business, and mentioned the undistributed profits tax as a "psychological irritant."

Hindrances to business expansion and investment, he declared, are another problem that should be dealt with. Examples, he said, include high surtax rates and tax exemption of Federal, State and municipal securities, and the one-year limitation on carry-over of business losses.

He also classed as an "irritant" the whole question of the capital stock and excess profits taxes, which have operated "very erratically."

Morgenthau insisted that tax exemption of securities should be ended first. That done, he declared, it would be fair to examine the question of whether the present surtax rates on exceptionally large incomes may not be so high as to discourage individuals from taking normal business risks.

Other Recommendations

He warned that the Government would have to move toward a balanced budget. It was the first time since the fall of 1937 that the necessity for a balanced budget had been stressed in an Administration quarter.

Other proposals advanced by him were:

That Congress set up machinery for co-ordinating Government income and outgo. This could be done, he suggested, by the creation of a joint committee on fiscal policy, consisting of the membership of the Ways and Means and Appropriations Committees of the House and the Finance and Appropriation Committees of the Senate.

That a "small temporary national commission" be created to prepare a program for removing tax conflicts between Federal and local governments and working out a more adequate plan for division of spending responsibilities.

Approved by President

"We should take no step," Morgenthau told the committee, "which the public may interpret as moving away from the objective of a balanced budget." For this reason, he said, "any tax reductions must be offset by tax increases."

He told the committee his statement had received President Roosevelt's approval. Flanked by experts, he was subjected by Republican committee members to a bar-

Pendergast Aide Given 366 Days For Tax Evasion

Kansas City, May 27 (AP).—R. Emmet O'Malley, ousted Missouri insurance superintendent, and his political boss, Tom Pendergast, will enter Leavenworth Penitentiary Monday to serve sentences for income tax evasion on the $377,500 "bribe money" they received for settling Missouri's $9,500,000 fire insurance rate case in favor of the risk companies.

Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis today sentenced O'Malley to a year and a day for failure to pay taxes on his $62,500 end of the deal.

Pendergast pleaded guilty Monday to tax evasions on $443,500, including $315,000 which the Government said he got from the insurance case.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark today took steps to recover for the policyholders the 80 per cent of the impounded $9,500,000 awarded to the companies.

He asked Ray B. Lucas, State superintendent of insurance, to seek a contempt citation against Pendergast, O'Malley "and others" for the "admitted fraud."

Senate Votes Court for Rail Bankruptcy

Measure to Expedite Receivership Cases Will Go to House

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday approved and sent to the House a bill to set up a special five-judge Federal court to expedite the handling of railroad bankruptcy and receivership cases.

The measure was passed on a voice vote that left the opposition unrecorded, but a group led by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, fought against passage until the last.

Clark, contending that establishing the new court might have "disastrous and disgraceful results," told his colleagues that Thomas D. Corcoran, youthful President adviser, would select the judges. The measure provides for their appointment by the President.

Next-to-Last Rail Bill

The Senate's action left only one of a series of Administration-sponsored railroad bills still on its calendar. It is a House-approved measure which would permit carriers in temporary financial difficulties to obtain voluntary agreements from stockholders for postponement of maturity dates on obligations.

The Senate previously had passed a bill to consolidate regulatory control of all transportation, except aerial, under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Before approving the court bill the Senate voted down an amendment proposed by Clark which would have stripped the new tribunal of its judicial status and a proposal by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, to send the measure to the Judiciary Committee for study.

"Concentration" Opposed

Clark's remark that Corcoran would choose the judges came when Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, observed that President Roosevelt had "ignored" the section of the country west of the Mississippi in making high judicial appointments.

"Does the Senator from Colorado doubt that any of the five men to be selected by Mr. Thomas D. Corcoran would have all wisdom?" Clark asked.

60 Divers Speed Raising Of Squalus

Complicated Salvage Plan Chosen; to Be No Let Up in Operations

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H., May 27.—An intricate plan for raising the $4,000,000 submarine Squalus and its crew of 26 dead—a plan so complicated it may take a week or more to execute—was thrown into high gear today with 60 of the Navy's best divers working in relays at the task.

The return from Washington by fast Navy plane of two submarine experts—Commanders A. I. McKee and A. R. McCann—with the approved plan of operation was the signal for speeding up the work. Shortly before noon the first relay of divers went down.

Exploratory Work Done

Their previous work had been largely exploratory and with the purpose of clearing away some of the obstructions from the Squalus' deck.

After hours of activity in which a third down-haul line was attached for divers to descend to the Squalus, the undersea workers came up for the night, but surface phases of the salvage work continued.

The Squalus will be raised in stages, first one end and then the other, through a delicate balance between the lifting power of air pumped into the sunken craft and the buoyancy of huge pontoons which first would be sunk 130 feet below the surface.

The pontoons would be attached by cables to the stern of the submarine, into which the water poured on its last dive. Then the pontoons would be pumped out and brought to the surface, bringing the afterpart of the Squalus to the 130 foot level previously held by the big air drums.

Bow to Rise First

Next the salvage crew would blow water from the ballast tanks in the forward part of the submarine until its bow actually came to the surface. Thus the bow would make one long sweep from the bottom to the top while the stern remained at 130 feet.

Then air would be pumped into the ballast tanks in the stern until it, too reached the surface.

Nats Lose to Boston, 4-11, 6-7; Johnstown Wins Withers Mile

BASEBALL.—Washington's Nationals lost both ends of a doubleheader to the Boston Red Sox in Boston, 11-4, and 7-6. Three Washington pitchers gave up 21 hits and six home runs in the afternoon. In St. Louis, the Cincinnati Reds took their twelfth straight victory, defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2.

RACING.—Johnstown, William Woodward's Kentucky Derby winner, loped to a six-length victory in the Withers mile at Belmont Park to equal the record of 1:35 4-5 set there in 1920 by Man o' War. Air Win, E. A. Stone's 3-year-old, won the Glenmore Handicap feature race at Charles Town.

TRACK.—The University of Southern California's Trojans won the sixty-third intercollegiate A. A. A. track championship meet in New York with the highest score in the meet's history. Four records fell, two were equaled.

LACROSSE.—Before a gay June Week crowd, the Navy lacrosse team beat the Army, 5-4, in Annapolis. The 12,000 spectators set a new record.

Officials Say Paving Deal Was Spurned

Scheme Would Have Raised Street Costs By Five Per Cent Here, They Report

By James D. Secrest.

Additional evidence that an unsuccessful attempt was made recently to have District asphalt paving contract specifications altered was revealed yesterday as members of the milk investigating sub-committee indicated they considered the disclosure outside their jurisdiction.

Just what disposition will be made of police records of a conversation in which the attempted deal was exposed was uncertain yesterday. They are now in the hands of police, it was understood, but they may not be turned over to the full sub-committee conducting the milk inquiry.

District officials admitted yesterday that they had been asked to change the asphalt paving contract specifications.

Col. David A. McCoach, jr., District engineer commissioner, declared last night:

"The District specifications for asphalt paving are intended to permit use of the various types of asphalt on an equal basis, the final choice of the particular type used being left to the successful bidder on the whole work.

Suggestion Rejected

"Recently on request and proper showing, the specifications were amended to permit the use by contractors of lake asphalt in the high penetration group on an equal basis with oil asphalt in the same group as has been the case in the low penetration froups for many years.

"A further suggestion that perhaps the District work might be advertised to require the use of lake asphalt on at least a part of the work was rejected since such procedure would result in restriction in competition without accompanying benefits to the District.

"I have not seen or heard anything further in connection with this question."

Cost Would Rise 5 Per Cent

Had the proposal been adopted, it was said by another official the cost of paving Capital streets would have been increased about 5 per cent and all the asphalt would have been supplied by a concern which holds a monopoly on the natural asphalt business.

Synthetic or oil asphalt, a by-product of petroleum, has been used in District paving for the last 15 years, it was stated. While not required, paving contractors use it because it is cheaper and has some advantages over natural asphalt.

Natural asphalt, which the Commissioners were asked to specify, comes chiefly from a lake in Trinidad and is more expensive than the synthetic paving material. Moreover, it was said, it is less desirable in certain climates.

While District officials disclaimed any knowledge of any "deal," the dictograph recording in the possession of police repeated a statement of a suspected lobbyist that

British Plan Firm Note to Japan on Ship

London Resolved to Insist on Explanation On Boarding of Vessel Off China

By Ralph W. Barnes
Special Cable to The Post.

London, May 27.—As tension in Anglo-Japanese relations approached a new high as the result of the assertion by Japan of expanded rights along the China coast and in the Chinese treaty ports, events moved swiftly today toward a climax in negotiations for a "grand peace alliance" to halt aggression.

Messages from Moscow tonight indicated the Soviet government would accept the British draft of an Anglo-French-Soviet defensive alliance.

The British plan was the subject of an hour's conference today between Soviet Premier and Foreign Minister Molotoff, Sir William Seeds British Ambassador, and M. Payart, French Charge d'Affaires.

Soviet Is Silent

The reaction of official Soviet quarters to the reported terms was silence and most foreign observers in Moscow hesitated to predict what Stalin's answer would be. British circles, however, were optimistic.

Dispatches from Paris and Ankara forecast an early announcement of a Franco-Turkish accord for mutual defense, parallel to that recently announced between Britain and Turkey. The only outstanding obstacle to the Franco-Turkish agreement has been liquidated, it is reported, through the decision of Paris to cede forthwith to Turkey the Sanjak of Alexandretta.

London is now dividing its attention between Europe and the Far East.

A firmly worded note will be dispatched to Tokyo if an unsatisfactory reply is received to the British protest against the recent boarding by Japanese sailors of the British steamer Rampura at Hongkong.

Apart from expressing resolve to resist Japanese attempts to institute a China coast blockade, Britain is expected to reaffirm its opposition to the extension of Japanese control over the International Settlements in the Chinese treaty ports.

World Parley Discussed

London, May 27 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain was reported tonight to be contemplating a possible world conference in a further attempt to reach a settlement with the Rome-Berlin axis without war.

Chamberlain in recent speeches has indicated his aims go far beyond the immediate policy of pacts and pledges.

Shanghai Prediction

Shanghair, May 27 (U.P.).—Japanese spokesmen tonight predicted a "dismal condition" for Shanghai's International Settlement if Great Britain, the United States and France continue to oppose Japanese demands for administration reform.

The western powers have sternly rejected the Japanese proposals, indicating that they considered them a move to take over control of all foreign areas in China.

Atlantic Clipper Off for Europe As Yankee Lands

Port Washington, N. Y., May 27 (U.P.).—Pan American Airways' Atlantic Clipper took off for Europe today a little more than an hour and a half after her sister ship, the Yankee Clipper, had completed the first round-trip commercial flight over the North Atlantic.

The eastbound flight with airmail began at 3:26 p. m. (E.S.T.) just a week after the inaugural take off of the Yankee Clipper, which had landed on the waters of Manhasset Bay here at 1:49 p. m. (E.S.T.).

The Yankee Clipper carried approximately 1,200 pounds of European mail, loaded at Marseilles, Lisbon and Horta, the Azores.

The ship had been expected to fly direct to its base here from Horta, but bad weather forced it to set down at Bermuda this morning for two hours to refuel, taking off again at 8:26 a. m. (E.S.T.).

Snite Quits 'Lung' To Bathe in Spring

Lourdes, France, May 27 (INS).—Frederick B. Snite, jr., bathed today in the icy waters of the mountainside spring of the Lourdes Shrine, while kneeling pilgrims chanted and fellow-paralytics looked on.

The Chicago youth was taken from his mechanical "lung" during his regular thirty-minute exercise period and immersed in the pool to which have been attributed many cures, but whose waters have failed to show any peculiar chemical properties upon laboratory analysis.

Man Who Almost Kidnaped Bergdoll Now His Neighbor

New York, May 27 (U.P.).—An Army sergeant who attempted to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll in Germany more than 18 years ago and return him to the United States is stationed on Governors Island, where the draft dodger is imprisoned, it was diclosed today.

Sergt. Franz Zimmer, attached to the Military Intelligence Division in 1921, and Carl Naef, a Justice Department agent, made their bold abduction attempt in the little Baden town of Eberbach.

Bergdoll testified at their trial on charges of "unlawful assumption of state authority" that he knocked a pistol from Naef's hand and escaped.

Gets Wrong Valise, $35,000 in Gems

Chicago, Ill., May 27 (AP).—Joseph L. Gill, municipal court clerk, discovered a strange suitcase in his luggage when he returned home from San Francisco. One of Gill's bags was missing. Just then the telephone rang:

"This is William B. Joyce, New York. I have your bag and I hope you have my suitcase. It has $35,000 worth of jewelry in it."

Gill looked in the bag and returned to the phone:

Hull Asks Cash-Carry Arms Sales, Repeal of Mandatory Embargo

President's Plan For Neutrality Given Congress; Speedy Action Seen

By William V. Nessly.

The Administration last night openly inaugurated a drive for repeal of the oft-assailed mandatory embargo provisions of the neutrality law.

Secretary of State Hull, with approval of President Roosevelt, sent to the heads of the Senate and House committees dealing with foreign relations identical letters, expressing his "firm conviction that the arms embargo provision of the existing law should be eliminated," and urged enactment or re-enactment of these provisions:

To prohibit American ships, irrespective of what they may be carrying, from entering combat areas.

To restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas.

To provide that the export of goods destined for belligerents should be preceded by transfer of title to the foreign purchaser.

To continue the existing legislation respecting loans and credits to nations a war.

To regulate the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerents.

Would Keep Arms Licenses

To continue the National Munitions Control Board and the system of arms exports and import licenses.

Such provisions, the Secretary wrote, "would, I think, help to keep this country out of war and facilitate our adherence to a position of neutrality. They would make easier our twofold task of keeping this country at peace and avoiding imposition of unnecessary and abnormal burdens upon our citizens."

There was no mention of suggestions previously made on Capitol Hill and elsewhere that the President be given authority to designate aggressors and apply an embargo exclusively to them.

While the Hull suggestions do not provide strictly for "cash-and-carry" restrictions on trade with countries at war, they approach that objective closely. Provision that American ships be kept out of "combat areas" still would not deprive American shipping of the right to carry war goods to neutral countries for reshipment to belligerents.

Senate Opposition Seen

The letters were sent to Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Bloom, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Immediately, Bloom announced that his committee will take up the suggestions in hearings opening Wednesday or Thursday. The committee already has before it a bill containing some of the chief

13 Dishes Fit for a King Top Off Royal Day of Roughing It

Their Majesties Climb 6,000-Foot Peak, Ride Through Beautiful Scenery on Old Buckboard; Lunch on $141 Canteloupe

By Edward T. Folliard
Staff Correspondent.

Banff, Alberta, May 27.—King George and Queen Elizabeth roughed it a bit today in this Canadian paradise, using an old-fashioned Western buckboard as a royal carriage for a drive through Bow Valley.

Their Majesties, attired in sports clothes, wrapped themselves in a buffalo robe. Jim Brewster, their mountaineer driver, clucked to his gray cayuses and as the buckboard started down the hotel driveway, Her Majesty distinctly giggled. The King, however, after dubiously eyeing the vehicle, started the ride, but not too enthusiastically.

They drove through an area of breathless beauty. On either side arose the majestic Canadian Rockies, and skirting the roads, were two icy, churning rivers—the Bow and the Spray. A pine scent filled the bracing air.

There was one incongruous note in the rustic picture, however. Trailing the royal buckboard were two automobiles loaded with Scotland Yard men and red-coated Canadian Mounties.

Earlier today the King and Queen, who stopped off here for a "rest," dug out their Alpine sticks and went mountain climbing. They selected Tunnel Mountain, which is only 6,000 feet, a mere hill compared to Cascade Mountain, a glowering giant of 9,825 feet.

His Majesty, a camera fan, took along his Leica and got shots of a mule deer, a bear cub and a bird. There was considerable argument about this bird later on, and perhaps former Senator Harry Hawes, of Missouri, a noted rod and gun

Poles Prepare Automatic War Dictatorship

Bill Introduced in Parliament to Give Smigly-Rydz All Power

By the United Press.

Warsaw, May 27.—The Polish government sternly warned Nazis against any attempt to solve the Danzig quarrel by force when it announced tonight plans for creating an absolute military dictatorship in event of War.

Handsome, 53-year-old Marshal Edward Smigly-Ridz appeared to be destined to control the fate of 34,000,000 Poles as supreme commander of armed forces if war comes to Eastern Europe.

President May Proclaim War

The Government revealed its plans by introducing in Parliament a bill setting up machinery for automatic establishment of a dictatorship in war time. Approval of Parliament, probably next week, was considered certain.

The bill would empower President Moscicki to proclaim a state of war without parliamentary approval. Once that declaration was issued, under terms of the bill, a constitutional dictatorship would immediately become effective.

All Responsible to Him

The supreme commander of the armed forces of Poland, who at present is Marshal Smigly-Ridz, would automatically come into full and independent control of all measures connected with conduct of war. In effect, his word would be absolute with even the government responsible to him.

All civil authorities would be subject to the supreme military authority. Civil rights would be suspended for the duration of the war. For all practical purposes, the machinery for transfer of the nation into the hands of the military would go into effect the instant war is proclaimed.

Chile Notifies U.S., Britain of Oil Monopoly

Government to Take Distribution, Sales Control Sept. 3

By the Associated Press.

Santiago, Chile, May 27.—Finance Minister Roberto Wachholtz was reported tonight to have warned United States and British oil companies that a government monopoly for distribution and sale of petroleum products in Chile would be established by September 3.

The foreign companies, it was said, were advised to liquidate their distribution organizations within three months. It is known the companies already have begun giving dismissal notices to employes.

Wachholtz's notice, authoritative sources said, was served on the West India Oil Co., subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Shellmex of Chile, subsidiary of the Royal Dutch Shell. Total value of the storage tanks, refineries and other installations of the two companies is estimated at $9,000,000.

(In March, 1938, Mexico expropriated properties of American and British companies which the latter valued at $400,000,000, and two years ago Bolivia cancelled concessions of the Standard Oil Co.)

A law empowering the goxernment to expropriate properties of oil companies in Chile with compensation and create a state monopoly has been on the statute books since 1932.

The government of President Pedro Aguirre Cerda, backed by a block of People's Front parties, only now is moving to make it effective, informants said.

[Francisco Jorquera, subsecretary of finance, in an interview with the newspaper El Imparcial deniel the government had reached a decision on nationalization of the oil industry, the United Press reported.

Candle for Each Will Grace Quintuplets' Birthday Cake

By the Canadian Press.

Callander, Ont., May 26— The Dionne quintuplets were still so enthralled today by their meeting with the king and queen last Monday that they didn't bother much about tomorrow being their fith birthday.

Preparations were under way, however, for a big cake with five candles—one each for the sisters to blow out.

The five little girls will be hostesses in their nursery home to a party including their father, mother and seven brothers and sisters as well as the nursery staff and their physician, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe.

Presents already have arrived from many parts of the world, but Mr. and Mrs. Dionne would not reveal what they were planning to give their famous daughters.

He was most pleased with the gain of Marie, who is within three-quarters of a pound of Yvonne. Annette keeps to her place as heavyweight of the five.

Arlington Dental Clinics Start July 10

Dr. Pumphrey to Open Sessions at Health Center in Clarendon

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0309.

Dr. T. W. Pumphrey has announced that dental clinics for preschool and school children will begin July 10 at the Clarendon Health Center, and continue through August.

From June 5 to 24 he will be at the Ballston School and from June 26 to July 8 at the Clarendon School.

Dr. Pumphrey is county school dentist and carries on his activities in the schools during the winter months. During summer, the dental clinics for children are held at the health centers.

Parents are requested to make appointments through the office of the Health Department at the courthouse.

There is a charge of 50 cents per tooth for those who are able to pay. A number of indigent cases are treated free.

Parents of children who are entering school next year are especially urged to have their children's teeth inspected either by their family dentist or at the dental clinics before the opening of school.

A complete clinic schedule will be announced later.

Kathleen Mary Quinlan's want is to get rid of some discontinued bottles . . . hence you save on her delightful eau de cologne. It's the Flowers of Rain odeur . . . light, refreshing as a showed . . . and a general favorite at its higher prices. Quantity's limited—so lose no time in getting your share.
